Antagonists Line Up Over Exon's Annual Sessions Proposal

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Battle lines began forming quickly Tuesday in the wake of Gov. J. James Exon's proposal that Nebraska return to a system of biennial legislative sessions.

"Utterly ridiculous. Asinine. He would lead us back into yesterday," Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln, father of the annual session, declared.

Such a change would make the Legislature "a handmaiden of the executive," Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica said.

But Appropriations Chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings liked the idea.

"We're trying to do too much," he insisted. And annual budgeting tends to "increase expenditures," he said.

Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, who has introduced a bill providing for biennial budgeting, with annual review, also endorsed the proposal.

Harder On Senators

Annual sessions make it more difficult for many senators, including himself, to continue to serve in the Legislature, Warner said.

Governor's Budget Examined In Detail

Turn to Pages 12, 13

Exon's proposal for a vote of the people on a constitutional amendment to return to biennial sessions upstaged most of his tax and budget proposals in a random sample of legislative reaction to his budget message.

His goal of a 1977 decrease in the personal income tax rate from 15% to 13% was greeted with some skepticism.

"We should look toward that goal," Revenue Chairman Cal Carsten of Avoca said, "but whether we can accomplish it is a little questionable."

'Piece Of Honey'

A projected tax reduction can always be looked to as "a piece of honey," Carsten said.

Bereuter, a member of the Appropriations Committee, said "a slight decrease in the income tax rate may be possible," but budgeting decisions should be directed more at providing "reasonable services" than guaranteeing a tax cut.

Sen. Shirley Marsh of Lincoln, another appropriations unit member, said she would not favor a tax cut.

"That's exactly what brought us to the special session (last November)," she said. "My memory is not so short that I choose to ask for a decrease in taxes in order to be called back into another special session where we again try to cut budgets.

"It's important that we adequately fund needed services and not set a budget limit and try to fit all services within that dollar figure."

'Independent Attitude'

Marvel said he expects to take "an independent attitude" on appropriations which may, at times, separate him from the majority of his committee.

That means, he said, that he may propose amendments to committee recommendations on the floor of the Legislature.

And, he said, a decision to support Exon's budget recommendations is "always a possibility."

Legislature stories on Pages 32, 33

Exon's budget will be subjected to public hearings before the committee.

Must Study Budget

Sen. Robert Clark of Sidney, another committee member, said he agrees with Exon's call for prudence, but he cannot say that he agrees with the governor's budget recommendations until he has studied them.

Budgeting flexibility for the University of Nebraska attracted mixed reaction.

Marvel said he is "yet to be sold" on total lump sum budgeting which gives the Board of Regents full flexibility in allocating funds.

Bereuter said he remains "unsatisfied that the quality of education has been improved at Lincoln despite large and increasing expenditures."

On biennial sessions, Luedtke said "the governor prefers to keep legislators out of his hair as much as possible."

'Power Equalized'

Exon wants to be in a position where he can "call us at his beckoning for his purposes on his time schedule," Luedtke said. Annual sessions, approved by the people in 1970, have allowed the Legislature to "assert leadership" and have served as "an equalizer of power" between the executive and the legislative branches, he said.

The last biennial session, Luedtke recalled, lasted 165 days, did not adjourn until Sept. 24, considered 1,440 bills and enacted 858 of them.

There will be fewer bills considered or passed in the two annual sessions of the 84th Legislature which concludes this spring, he said.

Practices Said Part Of Learning ...

School Board Backs Social Growth Studies

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education voted 5-1 Tuesday night to approve a position paper which establishes personal and social development as part of the schools' responsibilities to be shared with family, church and community.

Dissenter Lu Pansing, noting her own children had personal-social growth help in schools, acknowledged it's "desirable, under the right circumstances."

But Mrs. Pansing objected to a partial list of practices (not separate subject areas) currently in use, such as values clarification, moral education, peer influence, problem-solving, discipline and behavior management.

Mrs. Pansing sought to delay action, saying "I just plain don't know that much about it." Her reference was to specific psychiatrists upon whose research some of the practices are based; most are for teachers' use in understanding children's development and helping tehm.

No Endorsements

Supt. John Prasch said the position paper doesn't endorse any researcher or psychologist. He and Ron Brandt, associate superintendent for instruction, pointed out the methods are only examples.

Board member Pearl Goldenstein said, "We need to show our faith in the staff and teachers." As she offered the acceptance motion, she declared, "We don't run the schools," but "We accept the basic responsibility" by setting policy.

T.E. Dewey said for the board to be familiar with details of each school program is "outside the realm of (the members') responsibility," and "would be undermining the administration we have hired to do the job for us."

Mrs. Pansing's motion to omit the section on examples of personal-social growth practices died for lack of second.

Prasch said it's "impossible to teach at all without dealing with personal and social values, to some extent." He noted it's "important to guide the staff," however.

Mrs. Pansing said she didn't intend to criticize staff.

'No Contempt Meant'

Prasch emphasized board approval of the policy "doesn't mean any contempt for their (parents') point of view" who oppose it, nor does he "want to cut off dialogue" with schools.

Five people spoke to the issue. Mrs. Thomas Chadwell, 3934 S. 17th, described as contemptible the "schools' role in psychiatric development of children" and potential damage.

To endorse the practices would demonstrate schools' determination "to use children as a vast reservoir of white rats" and "a lack of respect for the sanctity and privacy of the home and the authority of parents," she said.

President Annette Marquez of the League of Women Voters applauded schools' efforts to broaden children's awareness and knowledge. Favoring the policy, she said it's "appropriate that schools share with parents the responsibility of teaching children that there are diverse viewpoints."

Equated To Hitler

Myron E. Ebel, 5400 Myrtle, speaking for the John Birch Society affiliated "Movement to Restore Decency," said school board powers are derived from Lincolnites. Equating personal-social group practices with Hitler, he decried what he claimed are "mechanics of psychiatry to control kids in school," to "probe" and expose their feelings.

Virgil T. Nabity, 5021 Washington, said methods are insufficiently researched, and claimed moral education concepts are "atheistic." Parents should delegate any such practices to schools, he said. Schools presenting dilemmas changes students' values, attitudes and standards and behavior "from obeying God to playing God."

Mary A. Hinkley, 6840 Saylor, endorsed the policy on behalf of the Superintendent's Cultural Awareness Advisory Committee, with parent members. She also said it's appropriate to prepare students to deal with their own and others' varying cultural and personal values, political and religious beliefs.

Citing a "broad consensus" among professional staff for the position paper, Brandt said it's "clearly" not intended to cause "cross-purpose" with parents, who "have the primary responsibility" for developing children's values and attitudes.

Board Proposed

After the vote, Mrs. Pansing said she's been "convinced" of the need for a process to raise public questions other than at board meetings. She proposed the board form and appoint individuals to a "curriculum review group," particularly to review "Man: A Course of Study."

After the 150-member audience applauded twice, her motion was ruled out of order, introduced improperly in agenda sequence. It was allowed later, but died for lack of a second.

President Louis Roper favored public participation in school affairs. Williamette Shafer, branding Mrs. Pansing's proposal unfair, cited numerous operating review committees. Jo Ann Maxey said she served on one, before her board term.

Brandt said he'll present a MACOS proposal Feb. 10.

NBC May Face Fire From Dumpling's Chain

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Dumpling, dumpling, who's got the dumpling?

NBC has jumped from the Nebraska Educational Television logo frying pan into the fire . . . at Dumpling's.

Dumpling's International, a Lincoln-based restaurant chain, is contemplating legal action against the National Broadcasting Co. over its new comedy series "The Dumplings."

Jack L. Callaway, president of Dumpling's, with two restaurants in Lincoln and one in Omaha, said he thinks use of the name "Dumplings" in the new series could violate his U.S. patent.

Meanwhile, "The Dumplings," billed as "a comedy about love," is scheduled to premiere Wednesday evening on NBC.

"The Dumplings are two people who are crazy in love with each other," says one of the show's producers and writers, Don Nicholl.

It just so happens they also operate a busy lunch counter in a large office building in New York City.

Callaway said he fears the "dipstick restaurant operation, with mishandling of food and patrons," could cast a negative shadow on his Lincoln-based operation.

If it's true, Callaway may have yet another legal tussle on his hands.

Based On Cartoon

"The Dumplings" television show is based on a cartoon strip drawn by Fred Lucky and syndicated by the Los Angeles Times.

Syndicate director and editor Tom Dorsey was as surprised to learn about Dumplings International as Callaway was to hear about The Dumplings cartoon strip.

"We own the trademark," Dorsey insisted. "We've copyrighted all materials and characters. I would say they probably ought to talk to us. It appears they are infringing on our trademark."

Callaway argues that the name of his restaurant chain has been registered since Feb. 22, 1972.

The Dumplings comic strip was introduced last October, Dorsey said. "We sold it to NBC the first week it was out."

Spokesman 'Stunned'

Callaway said he called NBC Tuesday morning and talked with a woman in the production department, who reacted with "stunned amazement."

"The girl said, 'You gotta be kidding,' and suggested we have our attorney contact their attorney."

Bud Rukeyser, a spokesman for NBC, laughed. "Why can't you people from Nebraska call us with some good news for once?" he asked.

Rukeyser was referring to the legal hassle with NETV over use of an abstract "N" as a logo.

In Public Domain?

He said he wouldn't comment on the "Dumplings" issue other than, "I've been eating dumplings for a long time" . . . and that if Callaway "checks around, he may find it's a name in the public domain."

Dumpling's attorney Carter Kokjer of Kansas City said he couldn't comment "in any way."

"We are looking into the matter in detail," he said. "It has raised serious concern, but I wouldn't want to tip our hand."

Callaway said he is mainly concerned that writers don't use the name "Dumpling's" in connection with a restaurant, either in the television show or in the comic strip.

"You can call a car a dumpling or a tree a dumpling, but don't open a restaurant and call it Dumpling's — that's mine," he said.

Rumsfeld Backs Record Defense Budget Request

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld warned Congress on Tuesday that the United States must act now to reverse a military power shift toward the Soviet Union.

Rumsfeld, in his first formal report to Congress since becoming the nation's defense chief, urged approval of the Pentagon's record $101.1 billion proposed budget.

The secretary said U.S. forces currently are strong enough to balance Soviet strength, but he warned that the Russians have been making substantial gains in nuclear and conventional forces. The Soviets display no signs of slowing down this build-up, he said.

Accompanying Rumsfeld before the House Armed Services Committee was Gen. George S. Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who said improvements in Soviet nuclear weaponry over the last year were "somewhat greater than anticipated."

Rumsfeld delivered a 313-page report in making his first formal appearance since his confirmation as defense chief. There was no sign of any disagreement with the policies of James R. Schlesinger, fired as defense secretary by President Ford after he publicly criticized congressional cuts in the current defense budget.

Like Schlesinger, Rumsfeld said missiles capable of hitting Soviet targets with pinpoint accuracy are needed despite the claims of critics that they give the appearance of U.S. intent to make the first strike in a nuclear war.

To keep pace with Soviet nuclear developments, Rumsfeld indicated the United States will need a larger fleet of Trident submarines, each costing $1.5 billion and armed with 24 underwater-launched nuclear missiles.

Cautioning that "there has been a gradual shift in the power balance over the past 15 years," Rumsfeld said $65 billion must be spent over the next decade for improvements in U.S. strategic bombers, missiles and nuclear submarines. The fiscal 1976 budget calls for increased spending of $8.9 billion.

"Security is not available at bargain basement rates," he said.

Improvements are needed to counter bigger and more accurate new Soviet missiles, an ever-increasing Russian navy and faster, more agile air force jets ordered by Moscow, he said.

The Soviet Union, he said, now has 1,500 land-based missiles compared with 1,054 such missiles in the U.S. arsenal. Aboard their submarines, the Russians outnumber the United States in missiles, 850 to 656.

Under questioning, Rumsfeld reaffirmed long-standing policy leaving open the possibility that the United States might be the first to use nuclear weapons in a war with the Soviet Union.

He said the uncertainty the Russians face on whether the United States would use nuclear weapons first, "enhances the deterrent."

Other Defense officials have said in the past that the United States reserves the right to use nuclear weapons first if, for example, the Soviet forces should launch a massive conventional attack on Western Europe and NATO forces faced possible defeat.

However, the Pentagon has said repeatedly it would not and could not — launch a massive first strike aimed at disarming Russia's strategic nuclear forces.

Ford Predicts Harm To U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to halt further U.S. aid to two Western-backed factions fighting in Angola, and a White House spokesman said the action "can only result in serious harm to the interests of the United States."

Prior to the 323-99 vote, President Ford had sent a letter to House Speaker Carl Albert asking that the aid not be cut off. Albert spoke forcefully on the floor in favor of the cutoff.

After the vote, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said in a statement which he reported had been approved by the President:

"The Congress has stated to the world that it will ignore a clear act of Soviet-Cuban expansion by brute military force into areas thousands of miles from either country."

Nessen said Ford regrets the vote which he said prohibits the use of funds in the defense appropriations bill to assist the people of Angola in resisting Soviet-Cuban intervention in their country.

The Senate earlier approved the prohibition that came in the form of an amendment to a $112.3 billion defense appropriation bill.

Nessen said the President is considering two options to try to revive aid for the Angolan factions. These are to veto the bill in an effort to force Congress to reconsider its decision, or to send up separate legislation cutting the Angola issue away from the defense appropriations bill, "may be with different language that will give the Congress more flexibility."

Ford said the "failure of the United States to take a stand will inevitably lead our friends and supporters to conclusions about our steadfastness and resolve" over international conflicts.

Albert, however, said: "This is a typical Ford operation: Wave your hand, make a gesture and that's the end of it."

"One thing about foreign aid, military aid or war itself," Albert continued, "you either do enough or you're better off not doing anything." He said the United States should cut off aid because it was not prepared to match the huge Soviet and Cuban support for its Angolan faction.

The cut-off applies only to some $28 million earmarked in the bill for Angola but congressional staff experts said the effect would be to cutoff all U.S. aid.

The staff officer said the House Appropriations Committee was told by Ford administration officials in secret session last week that only several hundred thousands dollars in U.S. aid is left without the new money.

The President's aides told a House committee Monday that the $28 million would finance another five or six months of U.S. aid during which time negotiations might be won for a peaceful end to the Angola fighting.

Ford said in his last-minute appeal to the House that the Angola dispute must be resolved by the Angolans themselves "and not through the application of brute military force by the Soviet Union and Cuba.

"I believe that resistance to Soviet expansion by military means must be a fundamental element of U.S. foreign policy," Ford said. He added: "There must be no question in Angola or elsewhere in the world of American resolve in this regard."

Meanwhile, Gen. George S. Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said a victory of pro-Soviet forces in Angola would be a Russian "masterstroke."

Brown told the House Armed Services Committee on Monday the result of such a victory by the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola — MPLA — would be to give the Russians an additional base from which to threaten vital oil tanker lines to the United States and Western Europe.

"Strategically, she will succeed in a masterstroke," Brown said of Russia.

Nebraskans Split Over Angolan Aid

Washington (AP) — The Nebraska House delegation split Tuesday on the 323-99 vote to cut off aid to Angola

Rep. John Y. McCollister voted against the cut-off, while Reps. Charles Thone and Virginia Smith voted in favor of it.

Ford said in his last-minute appeal to the House that the Angola dispute must be resolved by the Angolans themselves "and not through the application of brute military force by the Soviet Union and Cuba.

"I believe that resistance to Soviet expansion by military means must be a fundamental element of U.S. foreign policy," Ford said. He added: "There must be no question in Angola or elsewhere in the world of American resolve in this regard."

Meanwhile, Gen. George S. Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said a victory of pro-Soviet forces in Angola would be a Russian "masterstroke."

Brown told the House Armed Services Committee on Monday the result of such a victory by the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola — MPLA — would be to give the Russians an additional base from which to threaten vital oil tanker lines to the United States and Western Europe.

"Strategically, she will succeed in a masterstroke," Brown said of Russia.

Nebraskans Split Over Angolan Aid

Washington (AP) — The Nebraska House delegation split Tuesday on the 323-99 vote to cut off aid to Angola.

Rep. John Y. McCollister voted against the cut-off, while Reps. Charles Thone and Virginia Smith voted in favor of it.

Rumsfeld Backs Record Defense Budget Request

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld warned Congress on Tuesday that the United States must act now to reverse a military power shift toward the Soviet Union.

Rumsfeld, in his first formal report to Congress since becoming the nation's defense chief, urged approval of the Pentagon's record $101.1 billion proposed budget.

The secretary said U.S. forces currently are strong enough to balance Soviet strength, but he warned that the Russians have been making substantial gains in nuclear and conventional forces. The Soviets display no signs of slowing down this build-up, he said.

Accompanying Rumsfeld before the House Armed Services Committee was Gen. George S. Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who said improvements in Soviet nuclear weaponry over the last year were "somewhat greater than anticipated."

Rumsfeld delivered a 313-page report in making his first formal appearance since his confirmation as defense chief. There was no sign of any disagreement with the policies of James R. Schlesinger, fired as defense secretary by President Ford after he publicly criticized congressional cuts in the current defense budget.

Like Schlesinger, Rumsfeld said missiles capable of hitting Soviet targets with pinpoint accuracy are needed despite the claims of critics that they give the appearance of U.S. intent to make the first strike in a nuclear war.

To keep pace with Soviet nuclear developments, Rumsfeld indicated the United States will need a larger fleet of Trident submarines, each costing $1.5 billion and armed with 24 underwater-launched nuclear missiles.

Cautioning that "there has been a gradual shift in the power balance over the past 15 years," Rumsfeld said $65 billion must be spent over the next decade for improvements in U.S. strategic bombers, missiles and nuclear submarines. The fiscal 1976 budget calls for increased spending of $8.9 billion.

"Security is not available at bargain basement rates," he said.

Improvements are needed to counter bigger and more accurate new Soviet missiles, an ever-increasing Russian navy and faster, more agile air force jets ordered by Moscow, he said.

The Soviet Union, he said, now has 1,500 land-based missiles compared with 1,054 such missiles in the U.S. arsenal. Aboard their submarines, the Russians outnumber the United States in missiles, 850 to 656.

Under questioning, Rumsfeld reaffirmed long-standing policy leaving open the possibility that the United States might be the first to use nuclear weapons in a war with the Soviet Union.

He said the uncertainty the Russians face on whether the United States would use nuclear weapons first, "enhances the deterrent."

Other Defense officials have said in the past that the United States reserves the right to use nuclear weapons first if, for example, the Soviet forces should launch a massive conventional attack on Western Europe and NATO forces faced possible defeat.

However, the Pentagon has said repeatedly it would not and could not — launch a massive first strike aimed at disarming Russia's strategic nuclear forces.

Morocco, Algeria Fight Over Sahara Territory

Algiers, Algeria (AP) — Algerian and Moroccan troops clashed Tuesday in the Spanish Sahara and Moroccan officials said "apparently there are many dead."

It was the first reported battle between army units of the two North African countries in their dispute over the Sahara, being relinquished by Spain.

Algeria charged that Moroccan soldiers attacked Algerican troops taking medical supplies to refugees in the Sahara.

In Rabat, the Moroccan government issued a statement saying its troops undertook a "normal police and security operation to dislodge armed bands" and captured 12 armed men in Algerian army uniforms. It denied a convoy of food and medical supplies was involved and made no mention of Moroccan losses

The communique said the fight occurred inside the Sahara 125 miles west of the border with Algeria and near the town of Amghala.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat began immediate efforts to cool tempers. His foreign minister, Ismail Fahmy, said Algerian President Houari Boumedienne telephoned Sadat and Sadat then contacted Morocco's King Hassan II. Fahmy said Saat is "closely following developments with great concern."

Hassan sent thousands of unarmed volunteers on a "March of Conquest" into the phosphate-rich territory last November and won from Spain an agreement to divide it between Morocco and Mauritania.

Algeria, which also has a short border with the Sahara, opposes the projected turnover on Feb. 28 and supports the Polisario liberation front, a group of Saharans fighting for the territory's independence.

The official Algerian news agency, Algerie Presse-Service, said the attack took place in the Amghala frontier region of Mauritania and the Spanish Sahara. It said the situation in the Sahara had reached "a degree of extreme gravity."

At the same time, the Algerian government newspaper El Moudjahid asked in a headline: "Intervention of the 6th Fleet in the western Sahara?" The paper said it saw dark designs in a meeting in Rabat between U.S. Vice Adm. Frederick Turner, King Hassan and the governor of the Sahara province.

The Moroccan official sources said in Paris the fighting occurred in Mauritanian territory where the frontiers of Mauritania, Algeria and the Sahara meet.

There have been previous reports of clashes between Polisario guerrillas and Moroccan and Mauritanian troops.

The escalation followed Morocco's announcement on Sunday that one of its Northrop F5 jet fighters was downed last week by a ground to air missile while flying a ground support mission for Mauritanian troops in Mauritanan territory. The Moroccans asserted that the missile could only have been manned by foreigners.

Western-Backed Troops Said Under Attack In Central Angola

By The Associated Press

Western-supported troops were reported under heavy attack in their central Angolan stronghold by Soviet-backed forces Tuesday. They were also reported clashing among themselves.

British correspondents in Luanda, capital for the Soviet-backed Popular Movement (MPLA), quoted MPLA military spokesman as saying their drive toward the main central town of Huambo, Silva Porto to the east and Lobito to the west was spearheaded by at least 50 old T34 Soviet tanks armed with 75mm cannon.

The Soviet news agency Tass in a dispatch from Luanda claimed Western-backed troops were fleeing central Angola in panic, burning homes, bridges and water and sewer systems as they retreated.

An apparent shoot-out in Huambo between UNITA troops and renegade soldiers from their ally, the National Front (FNLA), who refused to go to the front was reported by travelers from Angola to Lusaka in neighboring Zambia. They said there was heavy machine gun and mortar fire at dawn. Some Lusaka analysts said the battle could signal the end of the uneasy, six-month alliance between UNITA and the FNLA.

Some 400 FNLA soldiers have reportedly stayed in their Huambo barracks, refusing orders to fight against the MPLA. UNITA leader Jonas Savimbi was quoted over the weekend as complaining about FNLA morale.

Sixty persons were reported killed in a two-day UNITA-FNOLA battle in Huambo a month ago. Tribal and personality issues have been blamed for a series of incidents between the forces and FNLA troops have in recent weeks largely abandoned military activities in southern Angola.

Senior military sources reported MPLA forces were less than 50 miles from Huambo, the British correspondents reported. Silva Porto is 90 miles east of Huambo and Lobito is about 150 miles west of Huambo on the Atlantic coast.

A Western diplomat in Lusaka was quoted as saying the MPLA apparently was "going for broke" in an effort to crush UNITA before Western aid could make good the loss of U.S. military aid support.

Tass said UNITA and the FNLA decided to move their headquarters from Huambo to Silva Porto. It said arms and equipment abandoned by the two forces included American-made mortars and bazookas, machine guns and rifles.

Bougainville Rebels Want Independence

Port Moresby, Papua-New Guinea (UPI) — Hundreds of axe-wielding rebels seized two towns on an outlying island Tuesday, abducted government officials and demanded independence from Papua-New Guinea.

The separatists, isolated behind barricades of felled trees, also demanded $3.4 million from the government in Port Moresby for copper mined on remote Bougainville Island.

Prime Minister Michael Somare ordered a 180-man contingent of riot police to the island, but the DC3 military plane carrying the force was prevented from landing because of obstacles on the airfield.

About 800 rebels swarmed into the towns of Buin and Boku, attacking the government buildings with axes. They felled trees onto some buildings, closed the airport at Buin and cut off roads leading to both towns with logs.

The rebels seized the government officer in charge of the Boku patrol post, his assistant and their families. Buin is located about 35 miles southeast of Arawa, capital of the island. Boku is about 30 miles southwest.

Separatist leader Aloysius Noga issued a statement warning the Papuan government against trying to retake the towns.

The separatists demanded independence from Papua-New Guinea last Sept. 1, calling the island "the Republic of North Solomons."

Bougainville, about 620 miles northeast of Port Moresby with an estimated population of 91,000 is the main island on a 250-mile-long archipelago.

Papua-New Guinea achieved independence from Australia last year and lists timber from its rain-soaked jungle as one of its major exports.

Copiers To Return

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service has decided to reinstall most of the photocopy machines pulled out of the nation's post offices this month following pressure from the business community.

A spokesman for the Postal Service said Tuesday that copying service would resume "in post offices where local postal management indicates it is in the public interest."

Consumer groups campaigned to have the 2,400 self-service copying machines reinstated following their removal Jan. 1 from post office lobbies throughout the nation

Photocopy service was ordered ended by postal officials in Washington following complaints to the House Postal Service subcommittee by small businessmen who said the copiers provided unfair competition for private enterprise.

By way of compromise, the Postal Service said copiers would not be reinstalled in post office locations where similar service is provided within 500 feet by a private party.

The Postal Service also said the cost of using its photocopyers would be as high or higher than "normal commercial levels," and said it would post a display urging use of commercial photocopy locations.

Kennewick, Wash. (AP) — Yakima Alex lost one eye at age 13 "in a disagreement with a barbed-wire fence," but the loss didn't turn out to be a liability in his profession as a pool hustler.

"When you shoot a gun, you have to close one eye. Shooting pool's a lot like that. My eye is stronger than if I had two," explains Alex Borunda.

Yakima Alex has earned his living for more than half a century as a professional pool player and put four kids through college as well.

"I did do some contract labor when my kids were younger, because it was kinda embarrassing for them, you know, to say their dad was a gambler," says the 66-year-old widower.

Yakima Alex, in his green hunters vest and hat, two-tone brown and white shoes and plaid shirt, looks more like the dowdy old-timers who sit like fixtures in bars and pool halls across the land.

But he's something of a legend among pool players from California to Cheyenne, hopping around the table looking for his best shot, nuzzling down his gray whiskers against the felt, and lining up the angle with his one good eye.

On a recent excursion through Wyoming and Colorado, he brought back $950 more than he left with. The most he ever made at a game was $4,500, but $3,000 and $4,000 nights have been many, he says.

He lost the most recent bar tournament here, but said he won $110 on side bets.

"It pays off just like a business," he boasts.

"I always come in at least second in a tourney. In a working town, I can beat 499 out of 500. The only guys that can beat me are the ones that play all the time," he says.

Those are pros like Tacoma Whitey, Flyboy from Seattle, Fast Eddie and New York Johnny, mostly guys who own their own halls and fly to various games across the country.

House Votes To Override Veto Of $45 Billion Bill

Washington (AP) — The House voted 310 to 113 Tuesday to override President Ford's veto of a $45 billion bill to fund labor, health, welfare and related programs, giving Democrats an early victory in their election-year drive against Ford's economy proposals.

The override issue now shifts to the Senate, which tenatively plans to vote Wednesday. Democrats in that chamber were optimistic.

Ford vetoed the bill Dec. 19 because it was nearly $1 billion above his budget recommendations. He called it "a classic example of ... unchecked spending."

The vote came only six days after the President submitted his budget for the next fiscal year, urging Congress to hold to a tight $394.2 billion spending ceiling.

Republicans pleaded for the veto to be sustained as an indication of Congress' intention to show restraint on the new budget proposals and aim for balance within three years.

"This is the first money bill of the session," Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois said. "We are setting the spending tone for the session."

Michel, the GOP whip, said a vote to override would be a signal to special interests that they could get what they want from Congress.

Democratic leaders only hours before the vote were telling reporters they had only a fighting chance to override. But when the showdown came 49 Republicans joined 261 Democrats to provide a margin 28 above the two-thirds needed to override. Voting to sustain the veto were 92 Republicans and 21 Democrats.

Both sides agreed that this veto would be one of the most difficult for Republicans to sustain. The bill funds a variety of politically appealing programs, including maternal and child health care, research on several major diseases, nutrition programs for the aged, vocational rehabilitation and the community services undertakings that are the remants of President Lyndon B. Johnson's War on Poverty.

Three Vote No

Washington (AP) — Nebraska's three Republican representatives, Charles Thone, Virginia Smith and John McCollister, Tuesday voted against overriding the veto of the $45 billion appropriation bill.

Patty Hearst Goes On Trial

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst, flanked by a team of lawyers and supported by the family she once denounced, went on trial Tuesday as her judge declared his intention to seat a jury within two days.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter launched jury selection in the trial with mass questioning of some 120 prospective panelists — most of whom affirmed their willingness to presume the jailed heiress innocent of the bank robbery with which she is charged.

Before the day was out, some had come forward to confess their prejudices, and one woman admitted that her family feared "retaliation" if she served on the jury.

The judge, maintaining a kindly attitude toward the group, quickly excused anyone expressing even the slightest fear that he or she might be unfair in deciding the case. A total of 40 persons was excused, most of them for personal reasons.

Describing the trial as "the most fully covered case in this country that I know of," Carter cautioned the potential jurors that they could expect to be sequestered for at least four to five weeks.

"I expect to conclude the jury selection by tomorrow," Carter declared before adjourning court for the day.

Miss Hearst, pale and thin after four months in jail, was clad for a second day in navy blue pants suit and white blouse with a large bow. She conferred frequently with her attorneys, sipped water and listened attentively as Carter queried the prospects.

Defense attorneys F. Lee Bailey and Albert Johnson appeared to be explaining the proceedings to her in detail. At times they would refer to a large notebook containing information on each of the some 250 persons summoned for possible jury duty.

Lawyers Stewart Herrick and Thomas May sat facing Miss Hearst at the defense table, while in the front row, Miss Hearst's mother, father and two of her four sisters sat in silence.

Most of the more than 100 reporters on hand for the trial were not allowed inside for the morning session. But by afternoon, enough potential jurors had been excused to allow some spectators and more reporters to gain seats.

"This is the first money bill of the session," Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois said. "We are setting the spending tone for the session."

Michel, the GOP whip, said a vote to override would be a signal to special interests that they could get what they want from Congress.

Democratic leaders only hours before the vote were telling reporters they had only a fighting chance to override. But when the showdown came 49 Republicans joined 261 Democrats to provide a margin 28 above the two-thirds needed to override. Voting to sustain the veto were 92 Republicans and 21 Democrats.

Both sides agreed that this veto would be one of the most difficult for Republicans to sustain. The bill funds a variety of politically appealing programs, including maternal and child health care, research on several major diseases, nutrition programs for the aged, vocational rehabilitation and the community services undertakings that are the remants of President Lyndon B. Johnson's War on Poverty.

Three Vote No

Washington (AP) — Nebraska's three Republican representatives, Charles Thone, Virginia Smith and John McCollister, Tuesday voted against overriding the veto of the $45 billion appropriation bill.

Patty Hearst Goes On Trial

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst, flanked by a team of lawyers and supported by the family she once denounced, went on trial Tuesday as her judge declared his intention to seat a jury within two days.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter launched jury selection in the trial with mass questioning of some 120 prospective panelists — most of whom affirmed their willingness to presume the jailed heiress innocent of the bank robbery with which she is charged.

Before the day was out, some had come forward to confess their prejudices, and one woman admitted that her family feared "retaliation" if she served on the jury.

The judge, maintaining a kindly attitude toward the group, quickly excused anyone expressing even the slightest fear that he or she might be unfair in deciding the case. A total of 40 persons was excused, most of them for personal reasons.

Describing the trial as "the most fully covered case in this country that I know of," Carter cautioned the potential jurors that they could expect to be sequestered for at least four to five weeks.

"I expect to conclude the jury selection by tomorrow," Carter declared before adjourning court for the day.

Miss Hearst, pale and thin after four months in jail, was clad for a second day in navy blue pants suit and white blouse with a large bow. She conferred frequently with her attorneys, sipped water and listened attentively as Carter queried the prospects.

Defense attorneys F. Lee Bailey and Albert Johnson appeared to be explaining the proceedings to her in detail. At times they would refer to a large notebook containing information on each of the some 250 persons summoned for possible jury duty.

Lawyers Stewart Herrick and Thomas May sat facing Miss Hearst at the defense table, while in the front row, Miss Hearst's mother, father and two of her four sisters sat in silence.

Most of the more than 100 reporters on hand for the trial were not allowed inside for the morning session. But by afternoon, enough potential jurors had been excused to allow some spectators and more reporters to gain seats.

Ex-GOP Chairman Wins Confirmation To Head CIA

Washington (AP) — The Senate, ignoring the arguments of liberal Democrats, confirmed former Republican party Chairman George Bush as the fourth man in three years to head the CIA.

Bush, selected by President Ford to succeed career intelligence officer William Colby, was confirmed Tuesday by a 64-27 vote. Only one Republican, Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, voted against him.

The six Democratic members of the Senate intelligence committee, which has spent almost a year investigating the CIA, all opposed Bush.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., said he could not vote to confirm a man of Bush's political past to head such a sensitive agency, and voted present.

Senate intelligence chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, Bush's most vocal opponent, argued that "the strongly partisan, political background of George Bush should eliminate his candidacy" and warned of "the harm this appointment will cause the whole effort to reform and strengthen the Central Intelligence Agency."

Bush's two immediate predecessors — Colby and former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger — were ousted in last November's administration shakeup. Richard Helms, who headed the agency until 1973, is now under investigation by the Justice Department.

Helms, now ambassador to Iran, told the Senate Government Operations Committee on Tuesday that members of Congress sometimes did not wish to be told about the CIA's "dirty tricks."

"On occasion they really didn't want to know all that much about it because it could be embarrassing to them politically" if exposed, Helms told the Senate Government Operations Committee.

Senate approval of Bush came nearly three months after he was nominated. Several Democratic senators had said that Bush's political past should disqualify him from holding the highly sensitive post.

Before the vote, Senate Majority leader Mike Mansfield told reporters the Bush nomination would be approved easily, although "there will be a decided number of votes against him."

In an effort to quiet concerns that Bush's political ambitions would further injure public confidence in the CIA, President Ford has ruled Bush out as a possible vice presidential running mate in 1976.

Curtis, Hruska Vote For Bush

Washington (AP) — Sens. Carl Curtis and Roman Hruska of Nebraska voted with the 64-27 majority to approve George Bush as CIA director.

Committee OKs Woman Ambassador

Washington (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved Tuesday the nomination of Anne Armstrong as the first woman U.S. ambassador to Great Britain.

The committee acted by voice vote and without dissent to recommend Mrs. Armstrong's confirmation by the Senate.

The 48-year-old wife of a Texas rancher, Mrs. Armstrong has been active in Texas Republican politics. She was the first woman co-chairman of the Republican National Committee in 1971-73, and was counselor on consumer affairs to Presidents Nixon and Ford, with cabinet rank, in 1973 and 1974.

Ford has said he expects her to do "a superb job" as ambassador. The British Foreign Office gave its approval earlier this month to her appointment, finishing in one week diplomatic formalities that normally take four to six weeks.

Mrs. Armstrong succeeds Elliot L. Richardson, who has returned to the United States to be Ford's new commerce secretary.

Discord Endangers Ford

Orlando, Fla. — Internal discord and extraordinary organizational failures have jeopardized President Ford's uphill effort to defeat Ronald Reagan in the March 9 presidential primary in conservative Florida. The White House press secretary said that if the vote were now, "we'd get clobbered."

Washington — In a Jan. 23 dispatch to the secretary of state and all U.S. embassies, Daniel P. Moynihan, chief U.S. representative to the United Nations, says he is succeeding in breaking up the anti-American voting bloc, but that the State Department does not realize this and is not supporting him.

Washington — Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., privately advised former CIA Director Richard Helms on how to respond to congressional questions on the Watergate affair at a dinner meeting with Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., in early 1973, according to congressional sources.

Boycott Called Off

New York — American Jewish leaders have called off their travel boycott of Mexico, saying they are satisfied there has been "a decided reversal" of the attitude reflected by Mexico in voting last November in favor of a United Nations resolution linking Zionism with racism.

Israelis See Syria At Work

©The New York Times

Jerusalem — The cease-fire and political compromise reached last week in Lebanon represents, in the opinion of Israeli officials and anlysts, a thinly camouflaged move by Syria to expand its influence over Lebanon.

The long-term Syrian goal, in the Israeli view, is the eventual annexation of Lebanon, which was considered part of Greater Syria before World War I.

In the shorter run, however, the Israelis expect Damascus to continue to maneuver and exploit the communal differences in Lebanon in order to advance Syrian influence over events there.

As a result, the expectation here is more fighting once the Christian community has caught its breath and has had time to appreciate fully the consequences of the political changes proposed by the Syrian negotiators.

"The ingredients for more fighting are still there," a senior Israeli specialist in Arab affairs said. "When and whether it comes depends on what the Syrians do next."

Western diplomats here believe Israeli intervention still remains a possibility, especially if a new round of fighting develops. The Israelis held back during the last round mainly because of American warnings and a desire not to poison the atmosphere before the 11-day visit to the United States by Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, which began Monday.

After that visit, however, and after Congress has acted on Israel's pending $2.3 billion aid request, the government will have considerably more freedom of action on Lebanon. Noting this Monday, a senior military source stressed that Israel's basic warning remains unchanged it will not permit overt and direct Syrian intervention in the internal affairs of Lebanon.

Somehwat grudgingly, Israeli officials concede that Syria has skillfully maneuvered around the conditions of that warning by intervening indirectly through the Palestinian forces sent into Lebanon.

About 3,000 men, four to five battalions of the Syrian-based Palestine Liberation Army, are estimated to have moved across the frontier from Syria during the week before the cease-fire.

PLO Says 'Without Exception' It Respects Lebanese Sovereignty

©The New York Times

Beirut, Lebanon — The Palestine Liberation Organization said Tuesday it respected the sovereignty of the Lebanese state and all Lebanese territory "without exception."

This statement, made in the organization's weekly publication, Falastin al-Thawra, followed charges by Christian rightists that big parts of Lebanon were outside Lebanese sovereignty because they had fallen under Palestinian control in the last few weeks.

Pledging that the PLO was ready to carry out agreements concluded with Lebanese authorities, the publication said the Palestinians "stretch out their hand to shake that of every sincere Lebanese."

Toward Responsible Prudence

In a time of gradual economic recovery nationwide and relative prosperity here in Nebraska, the tone of Gov. Jim Exon's state of the state message to the Legislature Tuesday was almost as grim as the specter of drought he raised.

The governor is right to be concerned about the possibility of continued drought—it has teased and tormented Nebraskans the past two years and the experts say it could settle in for a three to four year period. But we are not so sure that the pace of government activity can be regulated only by a rain gauge. Of one thing we are certain, however, and that is that the tone set by leadership exerts a powerful influence on economic (and political) conditions. Optimism aids recovery as pessimism abets recession.

The governor's budget catchword is "prudence." The opposite of that is recklessness. Everybody knows on which side Nebraskans stand. But there are degrees of prudence, just as there are degrees of state responsibility.

To emphasize his concern for prudence and the fragility of the economic situation as he sees it, and in joining wholeheartedly in the antigovernment movement currently fashionable, the governor laid out the following points in his speech:

—If the drought extends into the next growing season so as to drastically affect the state tax base, Exon said he will call the Legislature into special session and ask it to slash the budget.

—Nebraska must heed the lesson taught by extravagant municipal and federal spending in New York and Washington.

—The University of Nebraska, the largest tax dollar consumer and biggest employer among the state agencies, has not adequately justified its budget requests and should see to it that it does so in the future.

—Although his proposed budget is $6 million higher than the tentative proposal offered by the Appropriations Committee, if adopted it could be funded even with a reduction in income tax rates the second half of the fiscal year.

(We are moved to observe here that if Nebraska's modest tax rates were not reduced but only held static, much could be accomplished without unduly burdening the tax payer).

—The Legislature should consider offering voters a constitutional amendment returning it to sessions once every two years instead of annual sessions.

(No doubt senators might question the political wisdom of abandoning the center stage and leaving a governor alone in the spotlight for a full twelve months each biennium).

—The state could save money by changing its penal construction plans again to provide for one large medium-minimum security facility in Lincoln.

(We'll have more to say on that later. It is enough to note that change of plans could mean another delay and another delay can't be justified by any standard of measurement).

What the governor has outlined this year follows in the conservative Exon style the state has become accustomed to and has rewarded.

Our only concern is that in emphasizing prudence and in the rush to out-conservative one another, the governor and the Legislature not cause as great a tragedy in neglecting the responsibility of government as the politicians in New York caused in pushing government activity beyond reason.

It'll Never Play On B St.

The Lincoln Water Advisory Board has recommended that the controversial water rate structure adopted last year be retained at least for one more year. The City Council will review the water rate question next month and it will be time, then, as our resigned former president used to say, for the "hard decisions."

The new rate structure has accomplished the purposes set last year, the board said: water has been conserved, additional revenues to rebuild the water system have been generated and customers have been charged equitably for the use of water.

The first two points can't be argued; the latter, however, will never find concensus. What is equity to one class of customer is regarded as highway robbery by another. Opinions on that subject differ even between next door neighbors.

If the water rates structure does make sense to the advisory board from the standpoints of conservation, additional revenues and basic fairness, it does not make sense to customers who have seen their water costs increase two, three and four times over. Why the need for such a sudden, dramatic increase? People can't understand it. Many, too, can't understand why they should be penalized for honoring a fine old custom — tending a nice yard and garden. Many of those are elderly homeowners of restricted means.

While the water advisory board can confine itself to theory, the council must address itself to people, their questions and doubts about and opposition to dramatic rate increases, which aside from their proportion and the unfortunate coincidence of the corresponding rise in other utility costs, have the incidental effect of making it appear as if city government was asleep for years.

We would rather step into the ring against Ali then have to cast a vote to retain the present water rates. But we'll safely venture some observations:

—Conservation of a precious natural resource, water, even in water-rich Nebraska, is an unquestioned necessity. We can't squander water as in the past. But is the fairest way to conserve to do so by price? It's the same thing as conserving gasoline by price, the Ford method. Those who can afford to do so will waste as much as they want while those who can barely afford the necessities now are backed farther into the corner when the price goes up. Is it not better to conserve by regulating the supply? That is one question the council may want to answer.

—Apparently there is little argument about the need for investing millions of dollars in improvements in the system — improvements which should have been made before now. The chickens have come home to roost. If the citizenry wants to look for culprits in the water rate controversy, they can look to past administrations which did not attend to capital construction needs.

—For those who think in political terms, we suggest that the present water rate structure will never play on B St.

Crime's Magnitude Counts

The sentencing recently of former American Beef Packers President Frank West and the corporation itself on fraud charges tends to reinforce the notion that if one is to engage in criminal conduct, there is little to lose in going at it in a big way.

In many instances the application of justice does not prove that the bigger they are, the harder they fall; rather, the bigger they are, the softer the impact.

After his involvement in the APB scandal and bankruptcy, West was found guilty but landed on pillows. He was fined $24,000, a stiff amount for him to pay no doubt, but nothing in comparison to the losses suffered by ABP suppliers. And he was sentenced to 2 years in prison. But Federal Judge Robert Denney compassionately suspended the sentence and placed West on probation. Perhaps he was right in doing so. We think criminal cases should be decided with the individual defendant solely in mind, rather than judges being mindful of penalties imposed in other cases.

But try explaining that to the small-fry bunco man or the desperate guy whose check-kiting string runs out. He may be sent away for passing a few bad checks written for enough peanuts to keep his family going for just a while longer.

But a fellow who writes bad checks for millions, bringing down his own company and threatening the livelihood of hundreds of other families . . . well, he gets spared the prison sentence.

Sometimes justice is so blind she loses her balance.

Yo-Yo Song Heading For Top Ten

CHICAGO — Fans of Richard Nixon who wonder how he is spending his time in San Clemente might be interested in this report.

Mr. Nixon recently granted a visit to a group of Nashville music people who have made a record about him.

They say he was pleased by the song. It is called "He Played a Yo-Yo in Nashville."

The title and lyrics are inspired by a trip Mr. Nixon made to Nashville in 1974, to attend the opening of a new building for the Grand Ole Opry. In a light-hearted moment, then-President Nixon played a yo-yo on stage.

After Mr. Nixon withdrew from public life, the yo-yo incident stuck in the mind of Harley Hatcher, president of Artists of America, a recording company.

He wanted to write a song that would capture that unique moment, when a president, with the turmoil of Watergate swirling about him, still found a moment to play with a yo-yo.

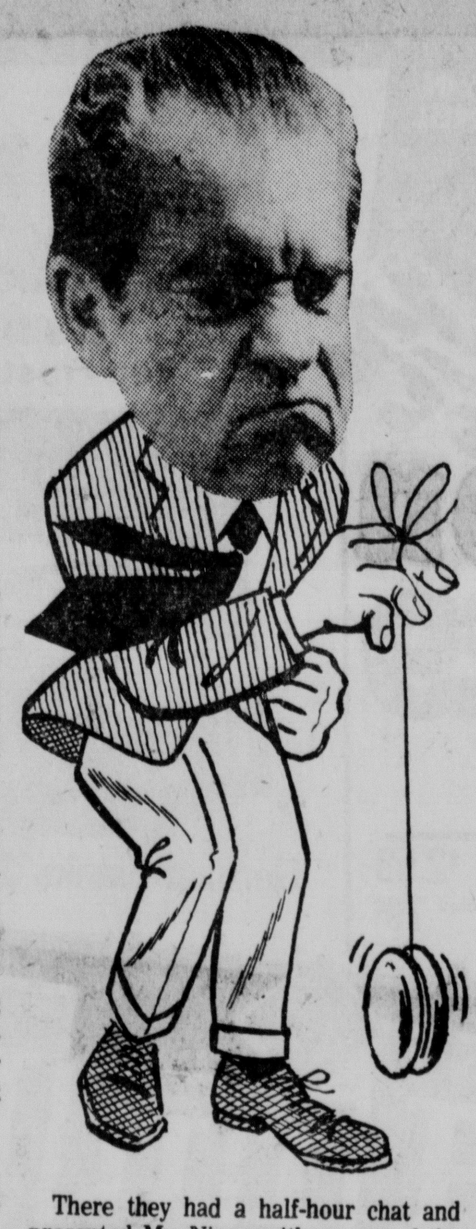
☆ ☆ ☆

The song was written and recorded. But Hatcher and the singer — Sean Morton Downey, son of the legendary Irish tenor — were concerned that Mr. Nixon might take offense.

They wanted him to know that it was not meant to be disrespectful. To the contrary, he believed that it showed a lighter side of his character that was usually lost in his serious manner.

So Downey contacted one of Mr. Nixon's aides, who is a personal friend, and was invited to visit San Clemente.

Downey and Hatcher arrived, bearing a stereo set as a gift, and were taken to Mr. Nixon's executive office.



There they had a half-hour chat and presented Mr. Nixon with a copy of the record and lyrics.

The chorus of the song is done in a brisk rinky-tink piano style and goes like this:

"He played a yo-yo in Nashville,
He played it at the Grand Ole Opry.
He played a yo-yo in Nashville,
Oh, he had lots of friends in Tennessee."

☆ ☆ ☆

Then the rest of the song, slower and more heart-felt, goes this way:

"It was in the spring of 1974
And there was trouble brewing in the land.
The leader of a mighty nation
Had circled his wagons to take a stand.
He hit the road to tell his story
Of what he knew and what he didn't know,
He stayed a while down in Tennessee
And played on an old piano and a yo-yo."

☆ ☆ ☆

"The people cheered and made him smile
He knew they wanted to believe
He spoke the truth and it'll be over soon
You know he's a fighter, he'll never leave.
But deep inside he felt the burning fire
And he knew he would never be free.
Oh how he'll long for the cheering crowds
And the happy days of Nashville, Tennessee."

☆ ☆ ☆

"The sun is shining brightly in California,
A lonely man sits by the peaceful shore.
His famous words still echo through his brain:
'You won't have me to kick around any more.' "

Hatcher and Downey were thrilled to find that the former President liked "He Played a Yo-Yo in Nashville."

In fact, they said he told them that the beautiful thing about country music is that it could tell a story the way it really happened.

Before leaving, they gave him the stereo set and he gave them some golf balls upon which were stamped the Presidential Seal.

And to Mrs. Downey, Mr. Nixon gave a charm bracelet. On one side of the bracelet was the Presidential Seal. Engraved on the other side was the name Gerald R. Ford.

Downey says that since the visit, an aide to Mr. Nixon has told him that hearing "He Played a Yo-Yo in Nashville" has lifted Mr. Nixon's spirit.

Meanwhile, Hatcher and Downey have been on a nationwide promotional tour of the record and say it is soaring to the top of the country hit list and is doing remarkably well in the general pop lists.

They say the Nixon yo-yo song appears to have the potential to be as great a smash as "Convoy."

If it becomes that popular, it could have a permanent impact upon Mr. Nixon's image. In our history, there have been presidents who are now remembered as "The Great Emancipator," "The Father of His Country," "The Sage of Monticello," "Old Hickory" and "The Rough Rider."

Will Nixon be remembered as "The Yo-Yo Player?"

Democrats Racing For Top Three

NEW YORK — The more forehanded of the Democratic presidential candidates have laid down the organizational bases of their campaigns in New Hampshire and shaken hands all the way to the Canadian border. But with a month to go until the primary on Feb. 24, all the voters see is "four or five obscure guys saying more or less the same thing."

Anyway, that's how one of their campaign managers tells it. A week's wandering in New Hampshire tended to confirm his judgment, while producing these other intimations of fact and fancy:

—Any Democrat who can win even 25% of the vote is likely to lead the field. This judgment is mostly arithmetical rather than political, since there are five "major" candidates, an unauthorized Hubert Humphrey write-in campaign and numerous "minor" candidates — including a "right-to-life" candidate, Ellen McCormack. She could get a lot of votes in a heavily Catholic state, particularly if the dominant Manchester Union-Leader mounts a thunderous campaign against pro-abortion candidates.

The well-organized Morris Udall campaign is hearing from its canvassers, moreover, that about 60% of those interviewed so far are "undecided" and the Fred Harris camp is finding so much anti-political sentiment that its canvassers have added "not voting" to the usual "committed, leaning or undecided" categories. Since only about 90,000 Democrats voted in the 1972 primary, these factors suggest that a relatively small vote total, as well as percentage, may be enough for a first-place finish.

—In this situation, the order of finish and the makeup of the "Top Three" will be unusually important for the shape of the campaign. Of the "Big Five" — Udall, Harris, Birch Bayh, Jimmy Carter and Sargent Shriver — none can really afford to finish worse than third, even in the limited setting of New Hampshire.

Udall, having fared poorly in contests for liberal support in New York and Massachusetts, and finished a distant fourth in Iowa, desperately needs to make a strong recovery in a state where he has spent much time and effort. Bayh did better in New York and Iowa but not enough so that he could shrug off a fourth or fifth-place finish here. Carter needs to continue the momentum of his Iowa victory in New Hampshire so that he can take it into his first major-state challenge in Massachusetts the following week.

Shriver got a small lift from the Mississippi caucuses, but still is looking for an identity on the issues, as something other than an in-law, and as a winner. Harris' stated strategy is to finish in the Top Three in the early tests, then move up in later primaries. Only if he can follow his script in New Hampshire and Massachusetts can he begin to dispel the idea that, as a candidate with a "radical" economic program, he cannot hope to win.

New Hampshire newspaper and political seers willing to read the early tea leaves uniformly envisioned Carter a cinch for the Top Three, conjured up a good-to-excellent chance of running at least third for Harris, and perceived Shriver the weakest of the Big Five, both on political identity and organization.

If these early vibrations hold up, Udall and Bayh — about whom there is no such consensus — obviously will be scrambling for the other available place in the Top Three. Or both might finish well enough to push Harris out of his game plan. Some handicappers rank Udall the favorite for a first-place finish, owing primarily to an early start (but no earlier than Carter's) and strong organization; but all questioned the effectiveness of his personal campaigning, as compared to Carter's.

Bayh's campaign seems to constitute the biggest unknown. It is late-starting and heavily reliant on the support of labor leaders, which may not translate into labor votes. But Bayh himself is considered a good campaigner in the face-to-face style preferred in New Hampshire, and no one counts him out of the first three.

—Nobody as yet sees the sizeable "conservative" Democratic vote turning strongly to any one of five candidates perceived as somewhere to the left of conservative. Past state elections suggest that there could be 25,000 to 30,000 of these "conservatives," perhaps a third of the primary electorate.

One possibility for them is a slate of delegates for Sen. Henry Jackson, headed by former gubernatorial candidate Richard Leonard of Nashua. But Jackson does not plan to campaign in New Hampshire, is not entered in the "beauty contest" part of the primary, and is not so far considered much of a factor.

Some think the conservative vote which is mostly Catholic and ethnic, likely to split in all directions — some going to Shriver and Carter as anti-abortion candidates, the latter a Southerner to boot; some "hard-hats" opting for Bayh with his labor endorsements; others being brought into the Udall column by his efficient organization; and the most dissident listening to Harris's populist appeals. Mrs. McCormack might run well among conservatives, too.

Comparing Electric Rates

Lincoln, Neb.

We are having a mild winter so far, and it is a good thing. It will help compensate for the high electric bills.

For instance, our electric bill for the period of Dec. 10, 1974, to Jan. 11, 1975, which was 1456 consumption, was $22.94. A year later, from Dec. 8, 1975, to Jan. 9, 1976, consumption was 1400 and the amount due is $34.78.

Since I have to try to sleep days, I have to have the air conditioner on. We cannot open the windows and doors with all the noise of kids and dogs, etc.

Just think what the electric bill will be then with the summer rates.

The Camouflage

Fairbury, Neb.

A few weeks ago a destitute Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College board could barely afford to keep its Fairbury campus open. Too much expense for too few students, we were told. Now comes sudden richness!

Not only will Fairbury continue (says a written one-year guarantee) but it appears we're about to take on Pershing as Instant Campus No. 4. Some are saying a hunk of Peru should become No. 5. A plus-$7 million campus for Lincoln is just a matter of time.

Camouflaged behind it all, though not too cleverly, is the monstrous ripoff of all southeast taxpayers in what is termed a "satellite" Pershing program. That's just what we need to skim off our excess capital — a rundown $3 million campus for 110 students to rattle around in.

On behalf of all taxpayers in the 15-county southeast area, here's one last plea that the Legislature will see LR110 for what it really is — a public bail-out of a few Beatrice businessmen!

Pershing? Thanks — but no thanks.

Takes Columnist To Task

Lincoln, Neb.

This is in response to an article by Ralph de Toledano that appeared in the Jan. 23 edition of The Star.

It seems that as time goes on, more and more excuse-makers come out of the woodwork. Mr. De Toledano's article on why we did not win a "victory" in Vietnam classifies him as one of these people.

His article tries hard though unconvincingly to once again shift the so-called blame for this country's diabolical involvement in Vietnam to the press. It was a war which this country had no right to be in in the first place. We were not trying to stop "the threat of communism" as the excuse-makers would like us to believe, but to protect "our national interests," namely big business interests (oil, resources, etc.)

I agree that slanted news reporting can create a false image for people to follow, but was it the slanted word that killed and maimed innocent people on Christmas Day? Or bombed people back into the Stone Age? Is that the sanity and sense of values that Mr. De Toledano talks about?

Mr. De Toledano asks us to refer to a book by Gen. Westmoreland. (He was appropriately dubbed "Waste-more-land" during his role in Vietnam.) Are we supposed to believe that the "good" general's book will not be slanted toward the military side? That will remain a matter of opinion. If anyone is interested in seeing General Westmoreland in action, I suggest he see "Hearts and Minds," the award-winning documentary on the military's involvement in Vietnam.

Finally as for the remark by Mr. De Toledano about the "rampaging kids," it was those same kids who had the courage to stand up to the military propaganda of the time. It is those same rampaging kids who as adults will, I hope, keep us out of Angola.

The MACOS Program

Lincoln, Neb.

In regard to the controversy on MACOS in the public schools, I would like to state that I had a child involved in the program last year and found it very interesting and informative. I have two more children yet to be involved in the program and they and I are looking forward to it.

These children are in school only 5½ hours a day and if those 5½ hours have more influence on the social and personal development of our children than the 18½ hours they are in the home environment, then we are poor parents.

I believe children should be given a chance to make decisions and to be independent individuals from the earliest time they can do so. Just because Mom and Dad believe this way or that way does not mean to me that this is the only right way.

I think the whole controversy here boils down to the theory of evolution, which was proven long ago.

On close investigation, I think we find the majority of those opposing MACOS are members of a different religious group, unassociated with any church. Also, we will find there are many of them related to one another.

I think we will find children viewing much worse things on commercial television than they will see in the MACOS program.

Toward Responsible Prudence

In a time of gradual economic recovery nationwide and relative prosperity here in Nebraska, the tone of Gov. Jim Exon's state of the state message to the Legislature Tuesday was almost as grim as the specter of drought he raised.

The governor is right to be concerned about the possibility of continued drought—it has teased and tormented Nebraskans the past two years and the experts say it could settle in for a three to four year period. But we are not so sure that the pace of government activity can be regulated only by a rain gauge. Of one thing we are certain, however, and that is that the tone set by leadership exerts a powerful influence on economic (and political) conditions. Optimism aids recovery as pessimism abets recession.

The governor's budget catchword is "prudence." The opposite of that is recklessness. Everybody knows on which side Nebraskans stand. But there are degrees of prudence, just as there are degrees of state responsibility.

To emphasize his concern for prudence and the fragility of the economic situation as he sees it, and in joining wholeheartedly in the antigovernment movement currently fashionable, the governor laid out the following points in his speech:

—If the drought extends into the next growing season so as to drastically affect the state tax base, Exon said he will call the Legislature into special session and ask it to slash the budget.

—Nebraska must heed the lesson taught by extravagant municipal and federal spending in New York and Washington.

—The University of Nebraska, the largest tax dollar consumer and biggest employer among the state agencies, has not adequately justified its budget requests and should see to it that it does so in the future.

—Although his proposed budget is $6 million higher than the tentative proposal offered by the Appropriations Committee,, if adopted it could be funded even with a reduction in income tax rates the second half of the fiscal year.

(We are moved to observe here that if Nebraska's modest tax rates were not reduced but only held static, much could be accomplished without unduly burdening the tax payer).

—The Legislature should consider offering voters a constitutional amendment returning it to sessions once every two years instead of annual sessions.

(No doubt senators might question the political wisdom of abandoning the center stage and leaving a governor alone in the spotlight for a full twelve months each biennium).

—The state could save money by changing its penal construction plans again to provide for one large medium-minimum security facility in Lincoln.

(We'll have more to say on that later. It is enough to note that change of plans could mean another delay and another delay can't be justified by any standard of measurement).

What the governor has outlined this year follows in the conservative Exon style the state has become accustomed to and has rewarded.

Our only concern is that in emphasizing prudence and in the rush to out-conservative one another, the governor and the Legislature not cause as great a tragedy in neglecting the responsibility of government as the politicians in New York caused in pushing government activity beyond reason.

It'll Never Play On B St.

The Lincoln Water Advisory Board has recommended that the controversial water rate structure adopted last year be retained at least for one more year. The City Council will review the water rate question next month and it will be time, then, as our resigned former president used to say, for the "hard decisions."

The new rate structure has accomplished the purposes set last year, the board said: water has been conserved, additional revenues to rebuild the water system have been generated and customers have been charged equitably for the use of water.

The first two points can't be argued; the latter, however, will never find concensus. What is equity to one class of customer is regarded as highway robbery by another. Opinions on that subject differ even between next door neighbors.

If the water rates structure does make sense to the advisory board from the standpoints of conservation, additional revenues and basic fairness, it does not make sense to customers who have seen their water costs increase two, three and four times over. Why the need for such a sudden, dramatic increase? People can't understand it. Many, too, can't understand why they should be penalized for honoring a fine old custom — tending a nice yard and garden. Many of those are elderly homeowners of restricted means.

While the water advisory board can confine itself to theory, the council must address itself to people, their questions and doubts about and opposition to dramatic rate increases, which aside from their proportion and the unfortunate coincidence of the corresponding rise in other utility costs, have the incidental effect of making it appear as if city government was asleep for years.

We would rather step into the ring against Ali then have to cast a vote to retain the present water rates. But we'll safely venture some observations:

—Conservation of a precious natural resource, water, even in water-rich Nebraska, is an unquestioned necessity. We can't squander water as in the past. But is the fairest way to conserve to do so by price? It's the same thing as conserving gasoline by price, the Ford method. Those who can afford to do so will waste as much as they want while those who can barely afford the necessities now are backed farther into the corner when the price goes up. Is it not better to conserve by regulating the supply? That is one question the council may want to answer.

—Apparently there is little argument about the need for investing millions of dollars in improvements in the system — improvements which should have been made before now. The chickens have come home to roost. If the citizenry wants to look for culprits in the water rate controversy, they can look to past administrations which did not attend to capital construction needs.

—For those who think in political terms, we suggest that the present water rate structure will never play on B St.

Crime's Magnitude Counts

The sentencing recently of former American Beef Packers President Frank West and the corporation itself on fraud charges tends to reinforce the notion that if one is to engage in criminal conduct, there is little to lose in going at it in a big way.

In many instances the application of justice does not prove that the bigger they are, the harder they fall; rather, the bigger they are, the softer the impact.

After his involvement in the APB scandal and bankruptcy, West was found guilty but landed on pillows. He was fined $24,000, a stiff amount for him to pay no doubt, but nothing in comparison to the losses suffered by ABP suppliers. And he was sentenced to 2 years in prison. But Federal Judge Robert Denney compassionately suspended the sentence and placed West on probation. Perhaps he was right in doing so. We think criminal cases should be decided with the individual defendant solely in mind, rather than judges being mindful of penalties imposed in other cases.

But try explaining that to the small-fry bunco man or the desperate guy whose check-kiting string runs out. He may be sent away for passing a few bad checks written for enough peanuts to keep his family going for just a while longer

But a fellow who writes bad checks for millions, bringing down his own company and threatening the livelihood of hundreds of other families . . . well, he gets spared the prison sentence.

Sometimes justice is so blind she loses her balance.

Yo-Yo Song Heading For Top Ten

CHICAGO — Fans of Richard Nixon who wonder how he is spending his time in San Clemente might be interested in this report.

Mr. Nixon recently granted a visit to a group of Nashville music people who have made a record about him.

They say he was pleased by the song. It is called "He Played a Yo-Yo in Nashville."

The title and lyrics are inspired by a trip Mr. Nixon made to Nashville in 1974, to attend the opening of a new building for the Grand Ole Opry. In a light-hearted moment, then-President Nixon played a yo-yo on stage.

After Mr. Nixon withdrew from public life, the yo-yo incident stuck in the mind of Harley Hatcher, president of Artists of America, a recording company.

He wanted to write a song that would capture that unique moment, when a president, with the turmoil of Watergate swirling about him, still found a moment to play with a yo-yo.

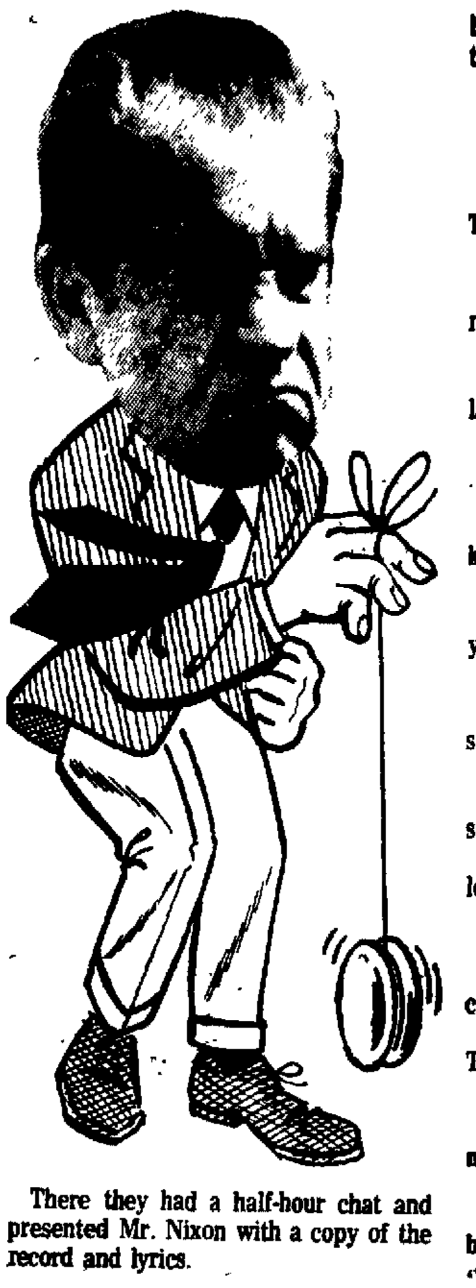
☆ ☆ ☆

The song was written and recorded. But Hatcher and the singer — Sean Morton Downey, son of the legendary Irish tenor — were concerned that Mr. Nixon might take offense.

They wanted him to know that it was not meant to be disrespectful. To the contrary, he believed that it showed a lighter side of his character that was usually lost in his serious manner.

So Downey contacted one of Mr. Nixon's aides, who is a personal friend, and was invited to visit San Clemente.

Downey and Hatcher arrived, bearing a stereo set as a gift, and were taken to Mr. Nixon's executive office.



There they had a half-hour chat and presented Mr. Nixon with a copy of the record and lyrics.

The chorus of the song is done in a brisk rinky-tink piano style and goes like this:

"He played a yo-yo in Nashville,
He played it at the Grand Ole Opry.
He played a yo-yo in Nashville,
Oh, he had lots of friends in Tennessee."

☆ ☆ ☆

Then the rest of the song, slower and more heart-felt, goes this way:

"It was in the spring of 1974
And there was trouble brewing in the land.
The leader of a mighty nation
Had circled his wagons to take a stand.
He hit the road to tell his story
Of what he knew and what he didn't know,
He stayed a while down in Tennessee

☆ ☆ ☆

"The people cheered and made him smile
He knew they wanted to believe
He spoke the truth and it'll be over soon
You know he's a fighter, he'll never leave.
But deep inside he felt the burning fire
And he knew he would never be free.
Oh how he'll long for the cheering crowds

☆ ☆ ☆

"The sun is shining brightly in California,
A lonely man sits by the peaceful shore.
His famous words still echo through his brain:
'You won't have me to kick around any more.' "

Hatcher and Downey were thrilled to find that the former President liked "He Played a Yo-Yo in Nashville."

In fact, they said he told them that the beautiful thing about country music is that it could tell a story the way it really happened.

Before leaving, they gave him the stereo set and he gave them some golf balls upon which were stamped the Presidential Seal.

And to Mrs. Downey, Mr. Nixon gave a charm bracelet. On one side of the bracelet was the Presidential Seal. Engraved on the other side was the name Gerald R. Ford.

Downey says that since the visit, an aide to Mr. Nixon has told him that hearing "He Played a Yo-Yo in Nashville" has lifted Mr. Nixon's spirit.

Meanwhile, Hatcher and Downey have been on a nationwide promotional tour of the record and say it is soaring to the top of the country hit list and is doing remarkably well in the general pop lists.

They say the Nixon yo-yo song appears to have the potential to be as great a smash as "Convoy."

If it becomes that popular, it could have a permanent impact upon Mr. Nixon's image. In our history, there have been presidents who are now remembered as "The Great Emancipator," "The Father of His Country," "The Sage of Monticello," "Old Hickory" and "The Rough Rider."

Will Nixon be remembered as "The Yo-Yo Player?"

Democrats Racing For Top Three

NEW YORK — The more forehanded of the Democratic presidential candidates have laid down the organizational bases of their campaigns in New Hampshire and shaken hands all the way to the Canadian border. But with a month to go until the primary on Feb. 24, all the voters see is "four or five obscure guys saying more or less the same thing."

Anyway, that's how one of their campaign managers tells it. A week's wandering in New Hampshire tended to confirm his judgment, while producing these other intimations of fact and fancy:

—Any Democrat who can win even 25% of the vote is likely to lead the field. This judgment is mostly arithmetical rather than political, since there are five "major" candidates, an unauthorized Hubert Humphrey write-in campaign and numerous "minor" candidates — including a "right-to-life" candidate, Ellen McCormack. She could get a lot of votes in a heavily Catholic state, particularly if the dominant Manchester Union-Leader mounts a thunderous campaign against pro-abortion candidates.

The well-organized Morris Udall campaign is hearing from its canvassers, moreover, that about 60% of those interviewed so far are "undecided" and the Fred Harris camp is finding so much anti-political sentiment that its canvassers have added "not voting" to the usual "committed, leaning or undecided" categories. Since only about 90,000 Democrats voted in the 1972 primary, these factors suggest that a relatively small vote total, as well as percentage, may be enough for a first-place finish.

—In this situation, the order of finish and the makeup of the "Top Three" will be unusually important for the shape of the campaign. Of the "Big Five" — Udall, Harris, Birch Bayh, Jimmy Carter and Sargent Shriver — none can really afford to finish worse than third, even in the limited setting of New Hampshire.

Udall, having fared poorly in contests for liberal support in New York and Massachusetts, and finished a distant fourth in Iowa, desperately needs to make a strong recovery in a state where he has spent much time and effort. Bayh did better in New York and Iowa but not enough so that he could shrug off a fourth or fifth-place finish here. Carter needs to continue the momentum of his Iowa victory in New Hampshire so that he can take it into his first major-state challenge in Massachusetts the following week.

Shriver got a small lift from the Mississippi caucuses, but still is looking for an identity on the issues, as something other than an in-law, and as a winner. Harris' stated strategy is to finish in the Top Three in the early tests, then move up in later primaries. Only if he can follow his script in New Hampshire and Massachusetts can he begin to dispel the idea that, as a candidate with a "radical" economic program, he cannot hope to win.

New Hampshire newspaper and political seers willing to read the early tea leaves uniformly envisioned Carter a cinch for the Top Three, conjured up a good-to-excellent chance of running at least third for Harris, and perceived Shriver the weakest of the Big Five, both on political identity and organization.

If these early vibrations hold up, Udall and Bayh — about whom there is no such consensus — obviously will be scrambling for the other available place in the Top Three. Or both might finish well enough to push Harris out of his game plan. Some handicappers rank Udall the favorite for a first-place finish, owing primarily to an early start (but no earlier than Carter's) and strong organization; but all questioned the effectiveness of his personal campaigning, as compared to Carter's.

Bayh's campaign seems to constitute the biggest unknown. It is late-starting and heavily reliant on the support of labor leaders, which may not translate into labor votes. But Bayh himself is considered a good campaigner in the face-to-face style preferred in New Hampshire, and no one counts him out of the first three.

—Nobody as yet sees the sizeable "conservative" Democratic vote turning strongly to any one of five candidates perceived as somewhere to the left of conservative. Past state elections suggest that there could be 25,000 to 30,000 of these "conservatives," perhaps a third of the primary electorate.

One possibility for them is a slate of delegates for Sen. Henry Jackson, headed by former gubernatorial candidate Richard Leonard of Nashua. But Jackson does not plan to campaign in New Hampshire, is not entered in the "beauty contest" part of the primary, and is not so far considered much of a factor.

Some think the conservative vote which is mostly Catholic and ethnic, likely to split in all directions — some going to Shriver and Carter as anti-abortion candidates, the latter a Southerner to boot; some "hard-hats" opting for Bayh with his labor endorsements; others being brought into the Udall column by his efficient organization; and the most dissident listening to Harris's populist appeals. Mrs. McCormack might run well among conservatives, too.

Comparing Electric Rates

Lincoln, Neb.

We are having a mild winter so far, and it is a good thing. It will help compensate for the high electric bills.

For instance, our electric bill for the period of Dec. 10, 1974, to Jan. 11, 1975, which was 1456 consumption, was $22.94. A year later, from Dec. 8, 1975, to Jan. 9, 1976, consumption was 1400 and the amount due is $34.78.

Since I have to try to sleep days, I have to have the air conditioner on. We cannot open the windows and doors with all the noise of kids and dogs, etc.

Just think what the electric bill will be then with the summer rates.

The Camouflage

Fairbury, Neb.

A few weeks ago a destitute Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College board could barely afford to keep its Fairbury campus open. Too much expense for too few students, we were told. Now comes sudden richness!

Not only will Fairbury continue (says a written one-year guarantee) but it appears we're about to take on Pershing as Instant Campus No. 4. Some are saying a hunk of Peru should become No. 5. A plus-$7 million campus for Lincoln is just a matter of time.

Camouflaged behind it all, though not too cleverly, is the monstrous ripoff of all southeast taxpayers in what is termed a "satellite" Pershing program. That's just what we need to skim off our excess capital — a rundown $3 million campus for 110 students to rattle around in.

On behalf of all taxpayers in the 15-county southeast area, here's one last plea that the Legislature will see LR110 for what it really is — a public bail-out of a few Beatrice businessmen!

Pershing? Thanks — but no thanks.

Takes Columnist To Task

Lincoln, Neb.

This is in response to an article by Ralph de Toledano that appeared in the Jan. 23 edition of The Star.

It seems that as time goes on, more and more excuse-makers come out of the woodwork. Mr. De Toledano's article on why we did not win a "victory" in Vietnam classifies him as one of these people.

His article tries hard though unconvincingly to once again shift the so-called blame for this country's diabolical involvement in Vietnam to the press. It was a war which this country had no right to be in in the first place. We were not trying to stop "the threat of communism" as the excuse-makers would like us to believe, but to protect "our national interests," namely big business interests (oil, resources, etc.)

I agree that slanted news reporting can create a false image for people to follow, but was it the slanted word that killed and maimed innocent people on Christmas Day? Or bombed people back into the Stone Age? Is that the sanity and sense of values that Mr. De Toledano talks about?

Mr. De Toledano asks us to refer to a book by Gen. Westmoreland. (He was appropriately dubbed "Waste-more-land" during his role in Vietnam.) Are we supposed to believe that the "good" general's book will not be slanted toward the military side? That will remain a matter of opinion. If anyone is interested in seeing General Westmoreland in action, I suggest he see "Hearts and Minds," the award-winning documentary on the military's involvement in Vietnam.

Finally as for the remark by Mr. De Toledano about the "rampaging kids," it was those same kids who had the courage to stand up to the military propaganda of the time. It is those same rampaging kids who as adults will, I hope, keep us out of Angola.

To Your Good Health:

Poor Man's Gout Is Just As Painful

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has been told recently that he has poor man's gout. It affects his knees and is very painful. We would appreciate any information you can give us on this problem. — Mrs. K.F.

I am not aware that gout is a respecter of income, and I'll bet your husband's gout is every bit as painful as "rich man's gout." The notion that gout is a penalty for a life of gorging on rich food and drink is only partly true. For example, organ meats, rich gravies, and seafoods such as sardines are high in purines, the chemical precursor of gout.

It is a metabolic disease, a form of arthritis, actually. It stems from the way a person's system handles a certain chemical waste — uric acid, which is a byproduct of purine metabolism. When this is produced in excess, some of it can combine with other chemicals to form urates, and these can accumulate in the form of crystals.

The joint of the big toe is a common site but, as your husband's condition indicates, it can form just about anywhere. The skin in the affected area, usually at bone ends, becomes red, hot and swollen, and there is great pain. A study of the fluid drawn from the inflamed section will reveal urate crystals.

Fortunately, drugs are available today to relieve the pain in short order. Newer drugs can help keep the uric acid level balanced and ward off future attacks.

Diet plays a rather minor role in treatment with the development of drug therapy, so the victims can continue to enjoy many of their favorite dishes.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have heard about trace elements in connection with organic foods, but would you tell me the extent of any benefit that zinc would have (other than that obtained in a regular diet)? Could it be beneficial? Or could it be harmful? — L.K.W.

There are several trace elements which are obtained in a well-balanced diet. These elements apparently play significant roles in enzyme activity in the tissues. Zinc is one of them.

It promotes efficient healing of tissues and has something to do with growth and sexual development. Some experimental work shows an improvement in patients with advanced arteriosclerosis after treatment with zinc supplement.

Except for some areas of the Middle East, where a zinc deficiency exists, a well-balanced diet will provide 10 to 15 mgs. of zinc daily. The metal is abundant in seafoods, meats, eggs and legumes. Of the 10 to 15 mgs. in a daily diet, about 10 is excreted normally in the urine and feces. The body apparently doesn't need more.

It is doubtful you would benefit from a zinc supplement if you are eating properly. It is possible to overdo supplements of trace metals with resulting toxic effects — nausea, vomiting, abdominal distress, cramps and diarrhea.

Unless you need it medically, leave it alone.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband had high blood pressure and was hospitalized. He also has what they call "Pickwickian syndrome."

After his hospitalization I noticed he was much calmer, but I also noticed he didn't seem as alert mentally as formerly. There also was a drinking problem. At times he was very apathetic.

He was taking reserpine. I am just wondering if this could have contributed to this at the time. — Mrs. B.W.

Yes, it could have.

Reserpine is an antihypertensive drug that has a tranquilizing effect. This, combined with the alcohol (a depressant drug) could have exaggerated his problem. The Pickwickian syndrome (obesity, drowsiness, with symptoms of hypoventilation) would have been a part of the picture.

If he is still taking the reserpine and shows any signs of mental depression you should report this to his doctor, and he will be taken off it.

The drug can also cause nasal stuffiness, which can be quite annoying.

However, you cannot automatically lay all of his mental state to the drug. He may have been in a generally lackluster state because of his general physical condition, a part of his heart problem

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

When you protect your family from disease, you are also helping to protect the community from disease.

That is what immunization is all about, says the Nebraska Medical Association.

Immunization is a safe and effective way to help the body prevent or fight off certain diseases. A tiny amount of the organism or its products, that cause a particular disease, is taken into the body via an injection or oral vaccine.

This stimulates the body to produce antibodies that will fight against the disease and continues to remain on guard against that infection for months or years.

All pre-school children should be immunized against polio, measles, rubella, diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus and mumps.

U.S. Rings Up $11 Billion Trade Surplus For 1975

Washington (UPI) — The United States registered a record $11 billion annual trade surplus last year as exports exceeded imports in December for the 11th consecutive month, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday.

The December surplus of $578.6 million was significantly smaller than the one in November, the report said, but helped eclipse the previous yearly high of $7.1 billion in 1964.

And 1975 was in sharp contrast to the previous year, when U.S. trade showed a $2.4 billion deficit.

The department said exports for 1975 were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $107.2 billion while imports came to $96.5 billion.

The December surplus was the smallest since the $552 million reported in April.

To Your Good Health:

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has been told recently that he has poor man's gout. It affects his knees and is very painful. We would appreciate any information you can give us on this problem. — Mrs. K.F.

I am not aware that gout is a respecter of income, and I'll bet your husband's gout is every bit as painful as "rich man's gout." The notion that gout is a penalty for a life of gorging on rich food and drink is only partly true. For example, organ meats, rich gravies, and seafoods such as sardines are high in purines, the chemical precursor of gout.

It is a metabolic disease, a form of arthritis, actually. It stems from the way a person's system handles a certain chemical waste — uric acid, which is a byproduct of purine metabolism. When this is produced in excess, some of it can combine with other chemicals to form urates, and these can accumulate in the form of crystals.

The joint of the big toe is a common site but, as your husband's condition indicates, it can form just about anywhere. The skin in the affected area, usually at bone ends, becomes red, hot and swollen, and there is great pain. A study of the fluid drawn from the inflamed section will reveal urate crystals.

Fortunately, drugs are available today to relieve the pain in short order. Newer drugs can help keep the uric acid level balanced and ward off future attacks.

Diet plays a rather minor role in treatment with the development of drug therapy, so the victims can continue to enjoy many of their favorite dishes.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have heard about trace elements in connection with organic foods, but would you tell me the extent of any benefit that zinc would have (other than that obtained in a regular diet)? Could it be beneficial? Or could it be harmful? — L.K.W.

There are several trace elements which are obtained in a well-balanced diet. These elements apparently play significant roles in enzyme activity in the tissues. Zinc is one of them.

It promotes efficient healing of tissues and has something to do with growth and sexual development. Some experimental work shows an improvement in patients with advanced arteriosclerosis after treatment with zinc supplement.

Except for some areas of the Middle East, where a zinc deficiency exists, a well-balanced diet will provide 10 to 15 mgs. of zinc daily. The metal is abundant in seafoods, meats, eggs and legumes. Of the 10 to 15 mgs. in a daily diet, about 10 is excreted normally in the urine and feces. The body apparently doesn't need more.

It is doubtful you would benefit from a zinc supplement if you are eating properly. It is possible to overdo supplements of trace metals with resulting toxic effects — nausea, vomiting, abdominal distress, cramps and diarrhea.

Unless you need it medically, leave it alone.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband had high blood pressure and was hospitalized. He also has what they call "Pickwickian syndrome."

After his hospitalization I noticed he was much calmer, but I also noticed he didn't seem as alert mentally as formerly. There also was a drinking problem. At times he was very apathetic.

He was taking reserpine. I am just wondering if this could have contributed to this at the time. — Mrs. B.W.

Yes, it could have.

Reserpine is an antihypertensive drug that has a tranquilizing effect. This, combined with the alcohol (a depressant drug) could have exaggerated his problem. The Pickwickian syndrome (obesity, drowsiness, with symptoms of hypoventilation) would have been a part of the picture.

If he is still taking the reserpine and shows any signs of mental depression you should report this to his doctor, and he will be taken off it.

The drug can also cause nasal stuffiness, which can be quite annoying.

However, you cannot automatically lay all of his mental state to the drug. He may have been in a generally lackluster state because of his general physical condition, a part of his heart problem

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

When you protect your family from disease, you are also helping to protect the community from disease.

That is what immunization is all about, says the Nebraska Medical Association.

Immunization is a safe and effective way to help the body prevent or fight off certain diseases. A tiny amount of the organism or its products, that cause a particular disease, is taken into the body via an injection or oral vaccine.

This stimulates the body to produce antibodies that will fight against the disease and continues to remain on guard against that infection for months or years.

All pre-school children should be immunized against polio, measles, rubella, diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus and mumps.

U.S. Rings Up $11 Billion Trade Surplus For 1975

Washington (UPI) — The United States registered a record $11 billion annual trade surplus last year as exports exceeded imports in December for the 11th consecutive month, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday.

The December surplus of $578.6 million was significantly smaller than the one in November, the report said, but helped eclipse the previous yearly high of $7.1 billion in 1964.

And 1975 was in sharp contrast to the previous year, when U.S. trade showed a $2.4 billion deficit.

The department said exports for 1975 were at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $107.2 billion while imports came to $96.5 billion.

The December surplus was the smallest since the $552 million reported in April.

ACTION LINE

DIAL 477-2121

Or Write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501

I wrote to Action Line in November about unsanitary conditions around some dog pens and other trash around a neighbor's home. At that time you answered that the health department inspected the place and said they would take legal action against the man. It's now January and conditions here are as bad as ever.

—A.C., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Denis Grams, assistant chief of environmental health for the Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Dept., said that following the department's November investigation, your neighbor agreed to clean up his yard. The planned legal action was dropped. After your recent letter to Action Line, the inspectors visited your neighbor again and found that unsanitary conditions still existed. They also noted that your neighbor is keeping a larger number of dogs at his home than is allowed by city ordinance. Grams said the neighbor won't be warned this time, and by the time you read this he already will have received a summons for a court arraignment.

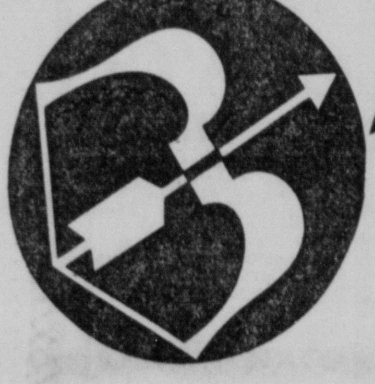
I recently purchased some tires from a Lincoln merchant. When he figured how much state sales tax I had to pay on the purchase, he charged me sales tax on both the price of the tires plus the amount of the federal excise tax. This seems like double taxation to me, or a tax on a tax.

—H. D., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: A spokesman in the policy division of the State Revenue Dept. said the merchant did what he was required to do under state law. The federal excise tax isn't really a tax on consumers — it's a tax on manufacturers. Instead of adding the cost of the excise tax into his production expenses and passing it along to the consumer, manufacturers are required by federal law to collect the excise tax separately. Thus the retailer charges you the retail price of the tires plus federal excise tax. Nebraska law requires state sales tax to be collected on the purchase price plus any excise taxes that have been paid. Since the federal excise tax was paid by the manufacturer before you made your purchase, you pay state sales tax on the federal tax.

I have a question about my horoscope. According to one source on astrology, the sign Capricorn goes from Dec. 22 to Jan. 19. Another source says Capricorn goes from Dec. 21 to Jan. 19. The sign that comes before Capricorn is Sagittarius. I was born on Dec. 21 and don't know whether I'm a Capricorn or a Sagittarius.

—E. J., Lincoln



SAGITTARIUS

CAPRICORN

ACTION LINE: A local astrology buff told us what you already know — there's some disagreement about the exact dates for the astrological signs. In your case, whether you are a Sagittarius or a Capricorn depends on the time of day you were born, she said. Our source said you probably should consult personally with someone knowledgeable about astrology to unravel your problem. The dates of the signs, based on the movement of the sun, also are affected by aberrations in man's calender, such as leap years.

On our federal income tax forms, there's a space for filling in the township you live in. I don't know what township I live in, or whether I even do live in one. How can I find out?

—J. R., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: As was explained in a newspaper story recently, Lincolnites don't need to worry about filling in that box for the Internal Revenue Service. If you live in Lincoln, Omaha or the 18 most populous of Nebraska's 93 counties, the question doesn't apply to you. The township box is to help locate more precisely Nebraskans who live in sparsely populated counties. The question isn't actually information required by the IRS. It's data being collected by the Bureau of the Census. Leaving the township box blank won't delay the processing of your return.

Where did Gov. Exon graduate from college? A friend of mine says he never went to college. I say he graduated from the University of Nebraska. Who's right?

—J. H., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: According to the Nebraska Blue Book 1974-75, Gov. J. J. Exon attended the University of Omaha 1939-41. He did not receive a degree.

ACTION TIP: As meat prices go up and up, many families are looking for ways to stretch their food dollars. One way is to use imitation meat products made of textured vegetable protein. These products can be used in place of meat, such as using imitation bacon bits as a garnish, or can be combined with meat to extend it, such as mixing soy products with hamburger. Though dieters may like them because they often contain fewer calories than the foods they simulate, diabetics and other persons on restricted diets should beware. Textured vegetable protein products often contain more carbohydrates and sodium than comparable animal products. Want more information? Send 60¢ for your copy of "Textured Vegetable Protein Products" to Consumer Information Center, Dept. 87, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Fence Issue Now Settled

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Actor-comedian Godfrey Cambridge has settled a skirmish with town fathers over a fence around his property.

Cambridge, who accused Ridgefield officials of hassling him about the fence because he's black, has moved the chain-link fence back onto his property, officials said.

In return, the town has withdrawn a court action against the entertainer and the case is considered closed.

First Selectman Louis J. Fossi, who denied Cambridge was being harrassed because of his skin color, said the fence originally was between 12 feet and 20 feet within the town right of way.

GOP Seeks Majority

Des Moines (UPI) — Iowa Republicans have paid off a $100,000 debt left after the 1974 elections, and are prepared to dedicate themselves to restoring a Republican majority in the Iowa Legislature, State Party Chairman Thomas Stoner said.

Ford Welcomes Rabin To White House

WASHINGTON(AP) — President Ford opened talks Tuesday with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin by underscoring the administration's determination to have "steady progress" toward peace in the Middle East.

Welcoming Rabin to the White House, Ford said Israel must show greater determination than ever to help bring realism and justice to the area.

Later, at a State Department luncheon, Rabin said Israel was prepared to make "many concessions" for peace provided it is militarily strong.

"I know one thing for sure," Rabin said. "With a weak Israel no one will negotiate and only a strong Israel is a help for peace."

Rabin's statement followed disclosures that the administration plans to cut almost $500 million in 1977 from current levels of U.S. military and economic aid to Israel.

In late afternoon, Rabin held an unannounced meeting with William E. Colby, the outgoing director of the Central Intelligence Agency and George Bush, his successor, on the subject of Israeli defense needs.

It was learned that Rabin attempted to convince Colby and Bush that CIA assessments about Israel's strength were pegged too low because of erroneous assumptions. Rabin reportedly told them that insufficient consideration had been given to increased arms aid flowing to the Arab states from both Western countries and Communist governments.

The State Department defended the reduction, saying the $1.8 billion planned for fiscal 1977 was "more in line with what it's been in the past" than the $2.25 billion requested for this year.

Rabin in his luncheon statement said: "I believe everywhere in the world you can't achieve peace but from the standpoint of strength," Rabin said. "It is a struggle between totalitarian concepts and a democratic way of life.

"And in coping with the totalitarian concepts, democracies have to try their best to reach agreements and understandings. But it can't be done from the standpoint of weakness."

The projected cut in aid is one of the principal topics on Rabin's agenda. Others include examining prospects for new Israeli-Arab negotiations as well as planning strategy for dealing with the Palestinian issue.

Ford told Rabin on the rain-soaked South Lawn of the White House "our cooperation is more necessary than ever before in the quest for an enduring peace in the Middle East."

The two leaders stood bareheaded in a nasty downpour, rain dripping from their ears and noses.

ACTION LINE

DIAL 477-2121

Or Write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501

I wrote to Action Line in November about unsanitary conditions around some dog pens and other trash around a neighbor's home. At that time you answered that the health department inspected the place and said they would take legal action against the man. It's now January and conditions here are as bad as ever.

—A.C., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Denis Grams, assistant chief of environmental health for the Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Dept., said that following the department's November investigation, your neighbor agreed to clean up his yard. The planned legal action was dropped. After your recent letter to Action Line, the inspectors visited your neighbor again and found that unsanitary conditions still existed. They also noted that your neighbor is keeping a larger number of dogs at his home than is allowed by city ordinance. Grams said the neighbor won't be warned this time, and by the time you read this he already will have received a summons for a court arraignment.

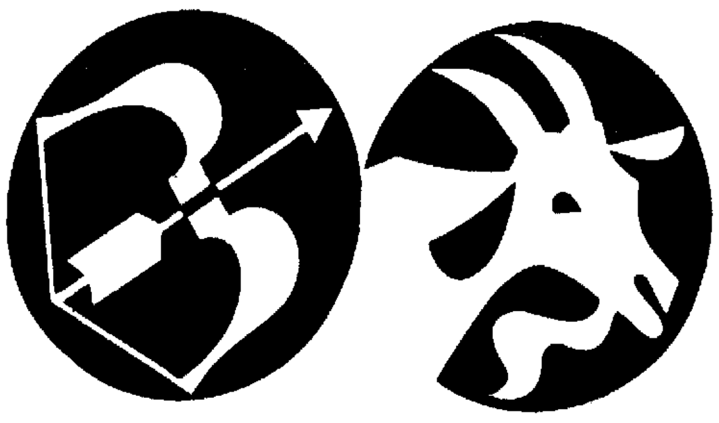
I recently purchased some tires from a Lincoln merchant. When he figured how much state sales tax I had to pay on the purchase, he charged me sales tax on both the price of the tires plus the amount of the federal excise tax. This seems like double taxation to me, or a tax on a tax.

—H. D., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: A spokesman in the policy division of the State Revenue Dept. said the merchant did what he was required to do under state law. The federal excise tax isn't really a tax on consumers — it's a tax on manufacturers. Instead of adding the cost of the excise tax into his production expenses and passing it along to the consumer, manufacturers are required by federal law to collect the excise tax separately. Thus the retailer charges you the retail price of the tires plus federal excise tax. Nebraska law requires state sales tax to be collected on the purchase price plus any excise taxes that have been paid. Since the federal excise tax was paid by the manufacturer before you made your purchase, you pay state sales tax on the federal tax.

I have a question about my horoscope. According to one source on astrology, the sign Capricorn goes from Dec. 22 to Jan. 19. Another source says Capricorn goes from Dec. 21 to Jan. 19. The sign that comes before Capricorn is Sagittarius. I was born on Dec. 21 and don't know whether I'm a Capricorn or a Sagittarius.

—E. J., Lincoln



ACTION LINE: A local astrology buff told us what you already know — there's some disagreement about the exact dates for the astrological signs. In your case, whether you are a Sagittarius or a Capricorn depends on the time of day you were born, she said. Our source said you probably should consult personally with someone knowledgeable about astrology to unravel your problem. The dates of the signs, based on the movement of the sun, also are affected by aberrations in man's calender, such as leap years.

On our federal income tax forms, there's a space for filling in the township you live in. I don't know what township I live in, or whether I even do live in one. How can I find out?

—J. R., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: As was explained in a newspaper story recently, Lincolnites don't need to worry about filling in that box for the Internal Revenue Service. If you live in Lincoln, Omaha or the 18 most populous of Nebraska's 93 counties, the question doesn't apply to you. The township box is to help locate more precisely Nebraskans who live in sparsely populated counties. The question isn't actually information required by the IRS. It's data being collected by the Bureau of the Census. Leaving the township box blank won't delay the processing of your return.

Where did Gov. Exon graduate from college? A friend of mine says he never went to college. I say he graduated from the University of Nebraska. Who's right?

—J. H., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: According to the Nebraska Blue Book 1974-75, Gov. J. J. Exon attended the University of Omaha 1939-41. He did not receive a degree.

ACTION TIP: As meat prices go up and up, many families are looking for ways to stretch their food dollars. One way is to use imitation meat products made of textured vegetable protein. These products can be used in place of meat, such as using imitation bacon bits as a garnish, or can be combined with meat to extend it, such as mixing soy products with hamburger. Though dieters may like them because they often contain fewer calories than the foods they simulate, diabetics and other persons on restricted diets should beware. Textured vegetable protein products often contain more carbohydrates and sodium than comparable animal products. Want more information? Send 60¢ for your copy of "Textured Vegetable Protein Products" to Consumer Information Center, Dept. 67, Pueblo, Colo. 81009

RIDGEFIELD, Conn (AP) — Actor-comedian Godfrey Cambridge has settled a skirmish with town fathers over a fence around his property.

Cambridge, who accused Ridgefield officials of hassling him about the fence because he's black, has moved the chain-link fence back onto his property, officials said.

In return, the town has withdrawn a court action against the entertainer and the case is considered closed.

First Selectman Louis J. Fossi, who denied Cambridge was being harrassed because of his skin color, said the fence originally was between 12 feet and 20 feet within the town right of way.

GOP Seeks Majority

Des Moines (UPI) — Iowa Republicans have paid off a $100,000 debt left after the 1974 elections, and are prepared to dedicate themselves to restoring a Republican majority in the Iowa Legislature, State Party Chairman Thomas Stoner said.

Ford Welcomes Rabin To White House

WASHINGTON(AP) — President Ford opened talks Tuesday with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin by underscoring the administration's determination to have "steady progress" toward peace in the Middle East.

Welcoming Rabin to the White House, Ford said Israel must show greater determination than ever to help bring realism and justice to the area.

Later, at a State Department luncheon, Rabin said Israel was prepared to make "many concessions" for peace provided it is militarily strong.

"I know one thing for sure," Rabin said. "With a weak Israel no one will negotiate and only a strong Israel is a help for peace."

Rabin's statement followed disclosures that the administration plans to cut almost $500 million in 1977 from current levels of U.S. military and economic aid to Israel.

In late afternoon, Rabin held an unannounced meeting with William E. Colby, the outgoing director of the Central Intelligence Agency and George Bush, his successor, on the subject of Israeli defense needs.

It was learned that Rabin attempted to convince Colby and Bush that CIA assessments about Israel's strength were pegged too low because of erroneous assumptions. Rabin reportedly told them that insufficient consideration had been given to increased arms aid flowing to the Arab states from both Western countries and Communist governments.

The State Department defended the reduction, saying the $1.8 billion planned for fiscal 1977 was "more in line with what it's been in the past" than the $2.25 billion requested for this year.

Rabin in his luncheon statement said: "I believe everywhere in the world you can't achieve peace but from the standpoint of strength," Rabin said. "It is a struggle between totalitarian concepts and a democratic way of life.

"And in coping with the totalitarian concepts, democracies have to try their best to reach agreements and understandings. But it can't be done from the standpoint of weakness."

The projected cut in aid is one of the principal topics on Rabin's agenda. Others include examining prospects for new Israeli-Arab negotiations as well as planning strategy for dealing with the Palestinian issue.

Ford told Rabin on the rain-soaked South Lawn of the White House "our cooperation is more necessary than ever before in the quest for an enduring peace in the Middle East."

The two leaders stood bareheaded in a nasty downpour, rain dripping from their ears and noses.

Psychiatrist Attacks 'Right'

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Last week a situation involving a psychotic mother with a large family gave Dr. Ramona Reed a frustrating feeling of powerlessness.

Dr. Reed, a psychiatrist for the Lancaster Mental Health Center, knew she could help the woman but was not able to due to a recent court ruling.

In effect, the ruling gave the woman the right to be insane if she so desired.

The woman, Dr. Reed said, was neglecting her children — one of whom is less than a year old — often forgetting to feed them.

Her husband was having to care for the children as well as work to support the family. Dr. Reed tried unsuccessfully to get the woman to take medication voluntarily.

So Dr. Reed, social workers and the husband attempted to get the woman committed to the Lincoln Regional Center for treatment. But under interim rules established since the court decision, the Mental Health Board could not commit the woman because it could not be proven she was dangerous.

The dilemma awakened Dr. Reed to the problems posed by the ruling. Since last week, the University of Virginia medical school graduate has single-handedly mounted an effort to spread the word about the inadequacies of a proposed state law (LB806) for complying with the ruling.

The court said people not considered dangerous cannot be involuntarily committed to a mental institution, and those who are dangerous must be given the full benefits of due process of law.

That ruling has since been appealed by Douglas County to the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis.

Dr. Reed, who practiced psychiatry in a state institution as well as in private practice in Colorado, said the issue is basically: "Does someone have the right to be insane? I'm not so sure they do.

"Don't they also have a right to treatment?"

Referring to her particular experience, she asked, "Don't this woman's children have a right to be raised by someone who is at least somewhat sane? Think of what it must be like for those children."

She noted that 6-year-olds are not given the right to decide whether to attend school or not. Yet, she said, many acute psychotics have less ability to make sound decisions than a 6-year-old.

If the current rigid criteria for commitments in Nebraska are allowed to stand, Dr. Reed said she fears many mentally ill people will end up in jail rather than hospitals.

She noted that she has been called to the city jail to examine a person, arrested for creating a disturbance, who police suspected may be mentally ill. In the past she has been able to get that person transferred to the Regional Center. Now that's much more difficult to do, she said.

If that is allowed, treatment of the mentally ill will revert to the way things were 150 years ago when they were simply locked up, she said.

The only alternative is for the psychiatrist or social worker to become a sort of private detective so acts can be undcovered to indicate a person is dangerous, she said.

Few mentally ill people actively seek help on their own accord, she noted. Someone else usually has to bring them to the attention of a psychiatrist.

What about abuse of the commitment procedure? Do eccentric people who may annoy their family or neighbors often get committed erroneously?

Dr. Reed said in roughly 500 admissions she was familiar with in Colorado, she considered only two to have been wrong.

In both instances, she said she worked to free them.

"The new law grossly neglects treatment," she said. "The American Civil Liberties Union has been behind overthrowing the old law. The other side of the story needs to be told. Doctors are not just wanting a power trip.

"What's worse — hospitalizing somebody for a few days or risking a homicide or suicide?"

Wearing Old Uniform May Be Against Law

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I am nitpicking, but I just don't like to see an ex-serviceman make a fool of himself.

I refer to the gentleman who had been a high-ranking Army officer in World War II and insisted on wearing his uniform instead of a tuxedo to social functions.

I am sure there are many more like him who hate to give up the prestige they once had. On the other hand, I am glad to know that there are still men who are proud to have served their country.

However, it would be a kindness to let him know that unless he is on active duty, it is not only improper to wear his uniform, it is against the law!

MIKE IN AURORA, ILL

DEAR MIKE: Thanks for the info. I realize that for every regulation there's a reason, but I think that the ex-serviceman (or woman) who can still button his uniform from W.W. II should be allowed to wear it!

DEAR ABBY: I live in a duplex apartment building. The lady who occupies the other apartment has access to mine. I gave her a key for security reasons because I work out of town.

She doesn't have a phone so I gave her permission to use mine. She does not abuse the privilege, but because she is in my apartment almost daily a problem has arisen.

I keep a bottle of whiskey in my kitchen cabinet for guests who drink. My neighbor nips a little, and during the last year my liquor supply has dwindled about two inches a week.

I have devised a method that should eliminate this problem. First, I make a pot of hot tea. To this I add a liberal amount of salt and add some lemon concentrate to lighten the color. Once in the bottle, the mixture resembles the original contents and surprisingly enough, it tastes like sour whiskey.

Do you consider my solution in bad taste?

B. F.

DEAR B. F.: Not if you can get away with it.

DEAR ABBY: Re that Peeping Tom, whose wife caught him peeping on one of her sisters who was taking a bath and again on another sister who was changing her clothes:

You said he was a "voyeur" and suggested that he get help at the nearest mental health clinic.

Are you kidding? Most homes have window shades to pull down and bathroom doors with locks. Sounds to me as though the sisters were asking for it. But if they were not worth peeping at, by all means the guy should be hauled off to a mental health clinic.

Meanwhile, Bon voyeur, Tom!

LARRY D. IN FAIRFAX

It's Desk Cleaning Day

Today's contributor to "Write On" is a sophomore at Northeast High School. Her article was submitted by her English teacher, Marlys W. Hughes.

By KELLEY KIRBY

I finally decided to clean out my desk. The desk itself is really kinda cute. It's an antique, refinished white and orange. The top folds down to reveal nine little cubicles. The legs are skinny and frail looking, but that's all that is dainty and petite!

When I open it, I must be prepared to catch thousands of things that will tumble out. Worse yet, if I pull out the drawer, I must have a shovel handy to stuff everything back in.

I haven't been able to study at my cute little desk since my report on the British Isles in the seventh grade. Since then I've used the kitchen table, my bed, the floor, my knees, and once the washing machine.

I have tied up my hair, rolled up my sleeves, and put on my waders. When I am all set, I open the lid and dig in. Oh, look, my grade school picture, my long-lost red scarf, a deck of cards (well, almost), and some dusty mending tape. Also birthday cards, "Happy 10th Birthday," moldy Christmas candy, letters from friends, blue stamps, and yellowed newspaper clippings.

There is much more, and everything reminds me of a happy time or a special occasion. Well, out of all that stuff, I throw away the moldy Christmas candy. I tell myself I'll clean enough junk out of the drawer to make room for all the rest.

The drawer is worse! Robert Redford pictures, more birthday cards, and old diary, guarantees, receipts, notes about girl friends' love lives, a blue ribbon, and some awards.

Needless to say, I can't clean the desk. Instead, I rearrange and sort but keep everything but the candy. I'm giving up on ever using the desk as it was intended to be used. It is just a giant scrapbook! Maybe someday I'll be able to throw away a very special McDonald's napkin. But until then, get ready, washing machine, it's time for me to study. Memories come first.

It's Desk Cleaning Day

Today's contributor to "Write On" is a sophomore at Northeast High School. Her article was submitted by her English teacher, Martys W. Hughes.

By KELLEY KIRBY

I finally decided to clean out my desk. The desk itself is really kinda cute. It's an antique, refinished white and orange The top folds down to reveal nine little cubicles. The legs are skinny and frail looking, but that's all that is dainty and petite!

When I open it, I must be prepared to catch thousands of things that will tumble out. Worse yet, if I pull out the drawer, I must have a shovel handy to stuff everything back in.

I haven't been able to study at my cute little desk since my report on the British Isles in the seventh grade. Since then I've used the kitchen table, my bed, the floor, my knees, and once the washing machine.

I have tied up my hair, rolled up my sleeves, and put on my waders. When I am all set, I open the lid and dig in. Oh, look, my grade school picture. my long-lost red scarf, a deck of cards (well, almost), and some dusty mending tape. Also birthday cards, "Happy 10th Birthday," moldy Christmas candy, letters from friends, blue stamps, and yellowed newspaper clippings.

There is much more, and everything reminds me of a happy time or a special occasion. Well, out of all that stuff, I throw away the moldy Christmas candy. I tell myself I'll clean enough junk out of the drawer to make room for all the rest.

The drawer is worse! Robert Redford pictures, more birthday cards, and old diary, guarantees, receipts, notes about girl friends' love lives, a blue ribbon, and some awards.

Needless to say, I can't clean the desk. Instead, I rearrange and sort but keep everything but the candy. I'm giving up on ever using the desk as it was intended to be used. It is just a giant scrapbook! Maybe someday I'll be able to throw away a very special McDonald's napkin. But until then, get ready, washing machine, it's time for me to study. Memories come first.

City Hall Given Reference Shelf

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Nestled in a hallway adjacent to the Lincoln mayor's conference room in the County-City Building is a new library facility, establishing a municipal reference service for local government officials and staff.

The new service was opened Jan. 14 and it contains approximately 30 books, pamphlets, magazines and other material.

Initiated by the Lincoln City Libraries' staff, the facility provides information on city management, problems, issues and developments, as well as dictionaries, almanacs and yearbooks. Shelving for the unit was provided through funds from the Lincoln Library Foundation.

According to Charles Dalrymple, director of the Lincoln City Libraries, the collection is being constantly updated "to give an opportunity for obtaining ample and adequate resources to all county and city officials.

"It is important that city and county officials and citizens have an equal opportunity to be informed about government operations," he added. "We are making the library of total significance to the community" through projects like these.

And information not provided by the small unit still may be as close as a person's telephone, Dalrymple said.

"Many times the information is right on the desk," he explained. "All they have to do is pick up the telephone and call the library's reference department," which has a wealth of information in its clip files, newspaper indexes, magazine and periodical collections, manuals, directories and books.

"We also do in-depth reference services by preparing a bibliography of resources on a particular subject," he continued.

In conjunction with the County-City Building project, Dalrymple said, new information centers have been established at the Bennett Martin Public Library and several branch units.

The new centers are primarily designed to disseminate information from city and county offices and officials to the public, Dalrymple said. Resource materials on city concerns, municipal management and local developments and interests will be included in the form of circulating, noncirculating and free distribution items.

Space is designated within each information center for the posting of official notices to the public concerning meetings, hearings and timetables for action on various city matters.

According to Mary Elley, the mayor's secretary who handles the new unit's check-out procedures, the service has provided valuable, accessible resources to local government officials.

"We have had several books taken out," she said. "Many of the people here didn't know these types of things were available at the city libraries.

"They have never had a chance to go to the library to see what all was there."

Noting that the small unit has several "books good for management," she added, "they are really handy being right here."

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT

Opening lead - queen of hearts.

Most players have little interest in how percentage plays are determined. But the fact remains that probabilities are a highly essential ingredient of good bridge.

Consider this deal where South has very little chance for the contract unless he makes at least four spade tricks. The best play, after winning the heart lead, is to play a spade and follow low from dummy — intending to cash the A-K of spades later on.

This method of play wins whenever the spades are divided 3-3 (a 36 per cent chance), or when they are divided 4-2 and the player with the doubleton has the queen (an additional 16 per cent chance). The combined chance of success is about 52 per cent.

But if you led a spade at trick two and finessed the jack, your overall chance of success would be only 36 per cent. Win or lose, you would have to find a 3-3 division to insure four spade tricks.

Note that in the actual hand declarer winds up going down two if he takes a first round spade finesse, but makes the contract by playing low from dummy on his first spade lead.

Note also that if we exchange the East-West spade holdings and declarer finesses the jack he goes down one even though West has the queen — but makes the contract if he rejects the finesse!

It is perhaps startling to realize that, under some conditions, a declarer can gain a trick by rejecting a winning finesse, but that is precisely what happens if West has the Q-7 of spades. Declarer does best in that case by playing low from dummy the first round and later cashing the A-K. Declarer likewise does best by playing low on the first round if East has the Q-7.

Exon Urges Restraint, Asks Record Budget

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Resounding his familiar call for restraint in spending, Gov. J. James Exon Tuesday presented legislators with a record-breaking $364.8 million general fund budget for 1976-77.

The 54-year-old Democrat, who has delivered more budget addresses than any chief executive in state history, said his budget, if adopted, will allow the state to decrease the individual income tax from 15% to 13% of federal income tax liability in 1977.

His budget is $53 million below what 90 state agencies had requested in tax funds for 1976-77, but it is $6 million greater than the Legislative Appropriations Committee's recommendation.

The budget, he said, is based upon "three factors — prudence, productivity and a proposed tax reduction."

New Themes

Exon's speech touched on some familiar themes of his administration and pointed toward some new ones, namely:

— He urged elimination of the sales tax on food in lieu of a tax cut next year.

— He rejected any suggestion state bonds be issued to construct more highways.

Government indebtedness is already too high, he said, noting that each child born in 1976 will owe $3,400 through government indebtedness.

— He urged senators to return to biennial instead of annual legislative sessions via a constitutional amendment. Annual sessions began in 1971. Exon said the move is needed to lighten senators' workload and improve productivity.

— He called on senators to reject new efforts to get the state to lighten local governments' tax burdens.

Since 1966 when the sales and income tax were instituted, Exon said real estate taxation has doubled and tripled. "So-called tax relief is mostly a myth," he said.

Aid to local governments currently consumes 43% of the state budget.

— He reiterated his call for limits on campaign spending and for public disclosure of candidates' sources of income.

Shrimp Egg Foo Young
6 eggs, slightly beaten
1 can (4-1/2 oz.) shrimp or 1 cup cooked shrimp
1/2 cup chopped onion
3 tblsp. shortening
1/2 can (8 oz.) bean sprouts, drained and juice reserved
1/4 tsp. salt
Dash of pepper

In skillet cook onions in 1 tblsp. hot shortening until tender, but do not brown. Combine slightly beaten eggs, shrimp, bean sprouts, onions, salt and pepper. Cook egg mixture slowly in 2 tblsp. hot shortening in skillet. Run spatula under edge, lifting so uncooked portion flows underneath. When egg is almost cooked, loosen edge, roll or fold one half over. Serve on platter with brown sauce and Jeno's Egg Rolls. Makes 4 servings.

Brown Sauce:
1 tblsp. butter or margarine
2 tsp. cornstarch
1 tsp. sugar
1/2 cup reserved bean sprout juice
1-1/2 tblsp. soy sauce

Melt butter. Combine cornstarch with sugar and blend into butter. Add bean sprout juice and soy sauce. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is thick and bubbly. Makes 3/4 cup.

Chow Mein
1/2 lb. pork, cut in thin strips
1/2 lb. beef, cut in thin strips
3 tblsps. cooking oil
1 can (10-1/2 oz.) beef broth
1/4 cup soy sauce
3 cups thin bias-cut celery
1 cup sliced onion (2 medium onions)
1 can (6 oz.) mushrooms, sliced and drained
1 can (16 oz.) chow mein vegetables, drained
3 tblsp. cornstarch
1/4 cup cold water

Cook pork and beef in 1 tblsp. oil, about 10 minutes. Add beef broth and 1/4 cup soy sauce. Simmer while cooking vegetables about 15 minutes.

Cook celery, onions and mushrooms in 2 tblsp. oil until crisp, yet tender, stirring often. Combine with the cooked meat.

Blend cornstarch and cold water together. Add to the meat and vegetables stirring until thick.

Add chow mein vegetables, drained. Serve over rice or chow mein noodles with Jeno's Egg Rolls.

Chicken Orientale
1 (3 lb.) fryer chicken, cut in pieces
1/2 cup all purpose flour
1/3 cup salad oil or shortening
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper

Wash chicken, pat dry, and coat with flour. Heat oil in large skillet. Add chicken a few pieces at a time, and brown on all sides. Remove when browned to shallow pan and arrange skin side up. Season with salt and pepper. Preheat oven to 350°F.

Sauce:
1 can (1 lb. 4 oz.) sliced pineapple, drained
1 cup sugar
3/4 cup cider vinegar
1-1/2 tblsp. Teriyaki sauce
2 tblsp. cornstarch
1/4 tsp. monosodium glutamate
1/4 tsp. ground ginger
1 green pepper, cut crosswise in 1/4" circles

Pour pineapple juice into 2 cup measure and add water to make 1-1/4 cups. Combine all ingredients except pineapple slices and green peppers in a medium saucepan. Bring to boil, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and bubbles. Pour over chicken.

Bake uncovered 40 minutes. Add green pepper and pineapple slices. Bake 20 minutes longer or until chicken is tender. Serve with white rice and Jeno's Egg Rolls. Makes 4 servings.

Shrimp Egg Foo Young

6 eggs, slightly beaten
1 can (4-1/2 oz.) shrimp or 1 cup cooked shrimp
1/2 cup chopped onion
3 tblsp. shortening
1/2 can (8 oz.) bean sprouts, drained and juice reserved
1/4 tsp. salt
Dash of pepper

In skillet cook onions in 1 tblsp. hot shortening until tender, but do not brown. Combine slightly beaten eggs, shrimp, bean sprouts, onions, salt and pepper. Cook egg mixture slowly in 2 tblsp. hot shortening in skillet. Run spatula under edge, lifting so uncooked portion flows underneath. When egg is almost cooked, loosen edge, roll or fold one half over. Serve on platter with brown sauce and Jeno's Egg Rolls. Makes 4 servings.

Brown Sauce:
1 tblsp. butter or margarine
2 tsp. cornstarch
1 tsp. sugar
1/2 cup reserved bean sprout juice
1-1/2 tblsp. soy sauce

Melt butter. Combine cornstarch with sugar and blend into butter. Add bean sprout juice and soy sauce. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is thick and bubbly. Makes 3/4 cup.

Chow Mein

1/2 lb. pork, cut in thin strips
1/2 lb. beef, cut in thin strips
3 tblsps. cooking oil
1 can (10-1/2 oz.) beef broth
1/4 cup soy sauce
3 cups thin bias-cut celery
1 cup sliced onion (2 medium onions)
1 can (6 oz.) mushrooms, sliced and drained
1 can (16 oz.) chow mein vegetables, drained
3 tblsp. cornstarch
1/4 cup cold water

Cook pork and beef in 1 tblsp. oil, about 10 minutes. Add beef broth and 1/4 cup soy sauce. Simmer while cooking vegetables about 15 minutes.

Cook celery, onions and mushrooms in 2 tblsp. oil until crisp, yet tender, stirring often. Combine with the cooked meat.

Blend cornstarch and cold water together. Add to the meat and vegetables stirring until thick.

Add chow mein vegetables, drained. Serve over rice or chow mein noodles with Jeno's Egg Rolls.

Chicken Orientale

1 (3 lb.) fryer chicken, cut in pieces
1/2 cup all purpose flour
1/3 cup salad oil or shortening
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper

Wash chicken, pat dry, and coat with flour. Heat oil in large skillet. Add chicken a few pieces at a time, and brown on all sides. Remove when browned to shallow pan and arrange skin side up. Season with salt and pepper. Preheat oven to 350°F.

Sauce
1 can (1 lb. 4 oz.) sliced pineapple, drained
1 cup sugar
3/4 cup cider vinegar
1-1/2 tblsp. Teriyaki sauce
2 tblsp. cornstarch
1/4 tsp. monosodium glutamate
1/4 tsp. ground ginger
1 green pepper, cut crosswise in 1/4" circles

Pour pineapple juice into 2 cup measure and add water to make 1-1/4 cups. Combine all ingredients except pineapple slices and green peppers in a medium saucepan. Bring to boil, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and bubbles. Pour over chicken.

Bake uncovered 40 minutes. Add green pepper and pineapple slices. Bake 20 minutes longer or until chicken is tender. Serve with white rice and Jeno's Egg Rolls. Makes 4 servings.

NU Offered Flexibility With Strings Attached

Gov. J. James Exon in his 1976-77 budget proposal Tuesday offered the University of Nebraska the flexibility in spending it has long sought, but in return he attached some strings.

The strings take the form of improved "productivity" among NU administrators and faculty and an increase in the share of funds NU generates itself.

That second condition could mean a tuition increase at NU, although Exon did not specifically suggest a hike.

University tuition, which together with fees is one of the highest in the Big Eight, has not been raised in four years. However, an increase in resident tuition from $18 to $19 a credit hour has been proposed.

Exon said NU's share of funds generated through fees, tuition and the like are "way out of kilter with other schools."

As a result, budget analyst Jon Oberg said "a serious problem" has arisen where the university is asking the state to replace cash funds it generates with tax funds.

In the past, Exon said the state has made it "too easy" for NU to switch the burden from cash funds to tax funds.

Exon's budget recommends the university raise $39 million in cash funds during 1976-77 instead of the $34 million that was suggested.

And Exon has tied any increase in sales and income tax support for the university to an accompanying rise in cash funds.

Overall, the university would receive $84 million from the general fund during 1976-77 under Exon's budget proposal — $4 million less than the Legislature's Appropriations Committee has recommended and $16 million less than the university requested.

In his speech to the Legislature, Exon said, "The university, like any other agency, must justify its expenditures. I am not convinced that they have adquately done that. Like most others, they should get the message that we expect trimming, better planning and conservation of tax funds."

The second string is for the university to improve its productivity, specifically, through trimming administration and using faculty better.

Exon provided figures demonstrating that university-wide since 1971 the number of students per faculty has declined 16.1% (from 14 to 11 student per faculty member) and the number of students per administrative position has likewise decreased 37.6% (from 21 students to 13 students per administrator).

In that time, state tax fund support for the university increased 105%, he said.

In his budget summary, Exon wrote: "It is the governor's recommendation that the Board of Regents halt these declines (in productivity) and begin to expend more university funds in salary improvements for deserving personnel, on needed supplies and materials and on new and replacement equipment rather than on continued employe profliferation and decreases in workload."

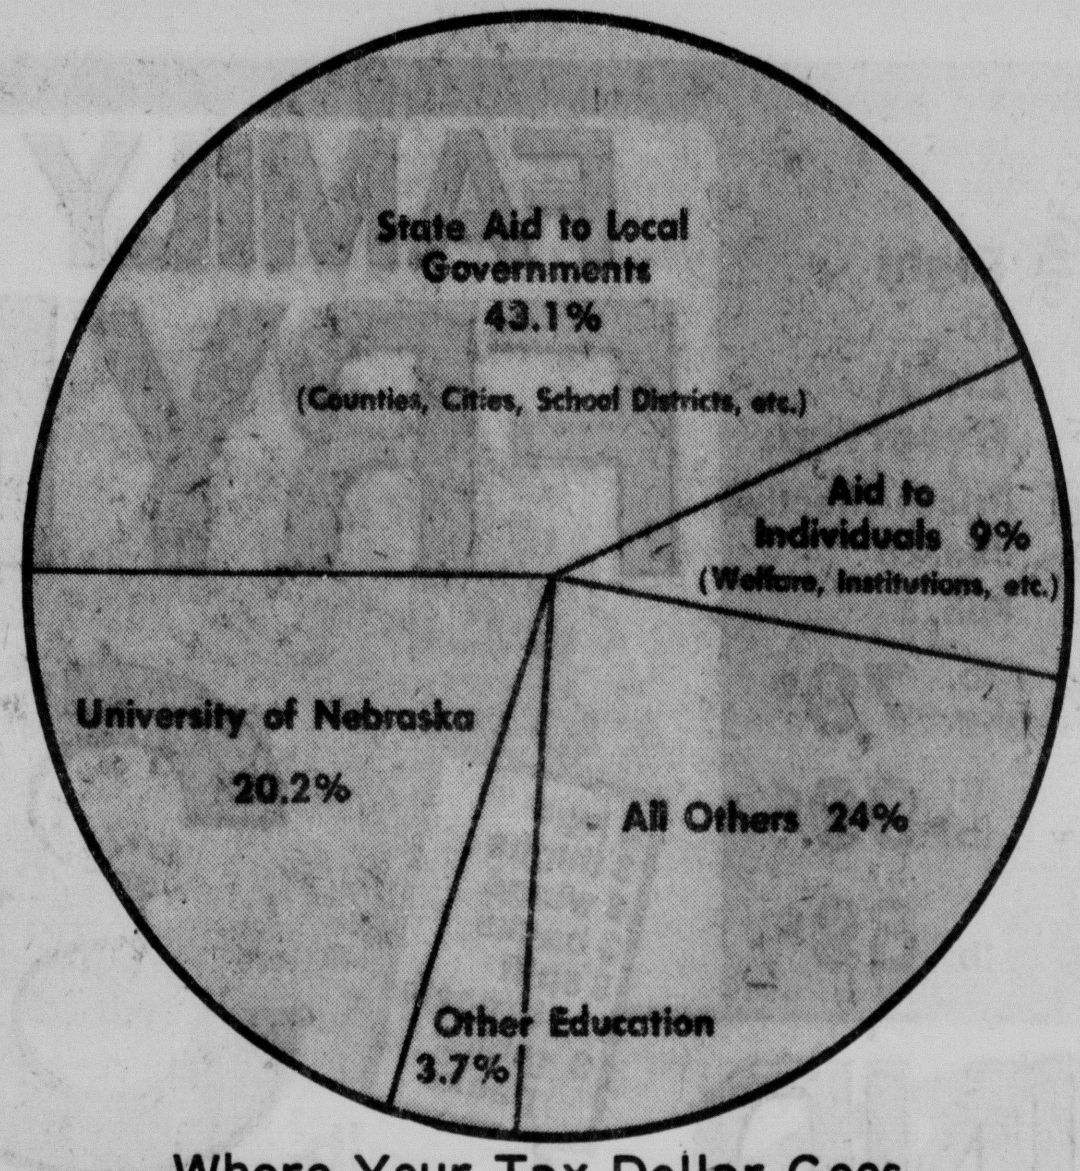
NU regents and administrators, in return, would have the authority to distribute funds among campuses and programs as they see fit. Regents would also have total control over salary increases, including merit raises.

In the past, the Legislature has refused to give the regents this flexibility.

Additionally, Exon would establish a $1.4 million discretionary fund for the regents' use in aiding deserving programs.

The only earmark in Exon's NU budget is the Agriculture Insitute's budget. Exon said this was done because agriculture is so important to the state's economy.

For the four state colleges, Exon recommended a 9.7% increase in general fund support from $11.9 to $12.4 million.



Where Your Tax Dollar Goes

The chart shows how the pie of Nebraska state government tax receipts would be divided under Gov. J. James Exon's proposed 1976-77 budget of $364.8 million.

NewConstruction Not Provided For

The austerity of the budget is reflected in the capital construction portion of the budget — no new construction has been proposed. The $13.4 million portion provides for continued work on plant and veterinary science buildings for the University and two new reformatories.

No new money was proposed for the Downtown Educational Center in Omaha which businessman Peter Kietit has offered to contribute $5 million toward. The University of Nebraska-Omaha project could move forward if it is combined with $8 million already appropriated for an Omaha state office building project.

For state employes in 1976-77, Exon proposed a 3% raise effective July 1, an added 3% on employes' service dates and a 1% discretionary merit raise.

Not considering the merit raise, the salary hike would cost the state 4½% since some employes will not receive the raise for their service date until near the end of the year.

Policy Abandoned

Exon abandoned his past policy of providing a percentage increase plus a flat dollar amount raise, since he said it hurt the state pay plan by compacting the dollar differences between pay grades.

A total of 935 requested jobs were cut from budget requests, including 75 positions presently funded.

In accord with a court settlement involving the Beatrice State Home, Exon recommended appropriation of $1 million to aid in the transfer of the mentally retarded from the Beatrice State Home to community-based programs.

According to information from the Institutions Department, that amount would be sufficient to transfer roughly 100 of the 1,030 Beatrice residents. The court settlement sets a goal of 250 for the population of Beatrice within three years.

Exon On Record

For the community programs themselves, Exon has gone on record as favoring an added $1.8 million. While at Beatrice, Exon has rejected another $1.1 million to construct more cottages.

At the penal complex, Exon favored continued funding for construction of a 256-bed Lincoln reformatory and a 208-bed Omaha reformatory. The existing reformatory has outlived its usefulness and is slated to be torn down.

The new reformatories at Omaha and Lincoln carry $7.5 and $7.7 million price tags respectively.

Exon repeated his earlier suggestions that a single reformatory in Lincoln could save the state $2.4 million in site costs and $1 million annually in operating costs.

Matching Funds

In the area of sewage treatment, Exon called for $4.7 million in new general fund expenditures to match federal and local funds for construction of new sewage treatment plants.

The funds would be distributed by the State Department of Environmental Control.

He also favored transfer of vocational rehabilitation services to the State Welfare Department and renaming the Welfare Department the Human Resources Department to reflect its wide-ranging responsibilities.

Hearing Set On Bell Rates

The Nebraska Public Service Commission has scheduled public hearings for Feb. 19 & 20 in Omaha on Northwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s latest request for a rate increase.

The hearings will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the budget hearing room at the Douglas County Civic Center.

Bell has asked the commission to grant it the balance of a $16 million rate hike requested last year; the commission approved less than $6 million at the time.

In other action, the commission approved a rate increase for United Parcel Service rate increase of three cents per package plus a ½-cent increase in zone charges, effective Feb. 7.

NU Offered Flexibility With Strings Attached

Gov. J. James Exon in his 1976-77 budget proposal Tuesday offered the University of Nebraska the flexibility in spending it has long sought, but in return he attached some strings.

The strings take the form of improved "productivity" among NU administrators and faculty and an increase in the share of funds NU generates itself.

That second condition could mean a tuition increase at NU, although Exon did not specifically suggest a hike.

Where Your Tax Dollar Goes

The chart shows how the pie of Nebraska state government tax receipts would be divided under Gov. J. James Exon's proposed 1976-77 budget of $364.8 million.

Matching Funds

In the area of sewage treatment, Exon called for $4.7 million in new general fund expenditures to match federal and local funds for construction of new sewage treatment plants.

The funds would be distributed by the State Department of Environmental Control.

He also favored transfer of vocational rehabilitation services to the State Welfare Department and renaming the Welfare Department the Human Resources Department to reflect its wide-ranging responsibilities.

Hearing Set On Bell Rates

The Nebraska Public Service Commission has scheduled public hearings for Feb. 19 & 20 in Omaha on Northwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s latest request for a rate increase.

The hearings will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the budget hearing room at the Douglas County Civic Center.

Bell has asked the commission to grant it the balance of a $16 million rate hike requested last year; the commission approved less than $6 million at the time.

In other action, the commission approved a rate increase for United Parcel Service rate increase of three cents per package plus a ½-cent increase in zone charges, effective Feb. 7

Fair Managers Urged To Educate Urbanites

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

"The worst bunch of communicators in America today are the farmers and ranchers," said John Elsner, manager of the Tulsa, Okla., State Fair, at the annual meeting Tuesday of the Nebraska Association of Fair Managers.

Elsner urged the managers to use their fairs to tell the "story of agriculture to the urban public."

"We have to educate the urban masses. The fairs are the only full-time public relations group speaking for agriculture," he said.

"You need someone on your county fair staff who can take good pictures. You might want to initiate a program with the high school paper to have their journalists do stories on your livestock show," he suggested.

Elsner said fair managers at all fairs needed to spend some time with the press to explain the reasons for livestock shows.

Portable Displays

Elsner suggested that all groups in agriculture become more involved by developing special portable displays that could be used at several fairs.

"With 5% of the people on the farms, we have to educate the other 95% or we will end up like the oil companies with so many restrictions we can't stay in business. We can walk or ride a horse if we don't have gas, but without food we will have a disaster," he said.

Leo Cooksley of Berwyn, president of the fair managers association, agreed with Elsner, "A survey of visitors at the New York State Fair showed 80% came to learn about agriculture. Don't sell your livestock shows short as an educational system," he said.

Income Scrutinized

Cooksley warned the fair managers that the Internal Revenue Service was taking a close look at off-season income on fairgrounds. "If you rent a building out, have a horse race or other income, you may be paying a bunch of back taxes one of these days," he said.

Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, who is also head of the Lancaster County Fair, discussed legislative problems with the fair managers.

Several managers were concerned about complying with the open meetings laws and regulations governing funding of fair activities by a county levy.

Bill Introduced

Warner told the managers he had introduced a special bill to exempt Lancaster County from a requirement of separate budgeting for fairs. "In most counties you should have a separate listing on a tax statement for the fair. You should be sure you are complying with the law," he said.

Cooksley warned the fair managers that these "nitpicking details are important. All it takes is one fair hater to create a mess of trouble if you slip up," he warned.

The fair managers wound up their two-day convention Tuesday evening with the organization's annual banquet.

Ak-Sar-Ben Revises Fair Support Plans

Those premium checks Nebraska 4-H members are used to receiving from Ak-Sar-Ben each year won't be coming any longer. The reason is the execessive cost of writing checks, not the money on the checks, according to a spokesman for the public service organization.

Ak-Sar-Ben will also drop its "spruce up" checks to Nebraska county fairs which used to brighten local fair board treasuries every other year.

Instead, Ak-Sar-Ben will match up to $1,000 a year toward getting new buildings on county fairgrounds. A total of $85,000 has been allocated to this new program.

County fairs will also continue to share in the annual fair funds collected from a state tax on admissions, fees for individual licenses and a daily licensing fee at annual Ak-Sar-Ben race meetings.

This fee is divided equally among the county fairs in the state each year.

The Nebraska Association of Fair Managers elected Orville Koch of Syracuse as secretary-treasurer, and named Stanley Torpin of Central City, Henry Haussler of Holbrook, and John Milanuk of Oshkosh to the board of directors.

State Agriculture Board Leaves Leadership Intact

The State Board of Aggriculture made no executive board changes at its annual convention in Lincoln Tuesday, but did elect some new members to its board.

The executive board includes Don Clement of Kearney, president; Wally Thorson of Mead, first vice president; Kenneth Torczon of Columbus, second vice president; Charles Miller of Ralston, secretary-treasurer; Don Kilgore of North Platte, Ron Bath of Auburn, Jack Chapman of Hebron, executive board members.

New board members include Sen. Richard Maresh of Milligan, elected to a one-year term. Stan Christensen of Bridgeport and Robert Kiester of Hemingford, two-year terms.

Reelected to the board were Walter Hahn of Tecumseh, Crissie Rist of Humboldt, Wally Thorson of Mead, Torczon, Dale Shoemaker of Lincoln, John Ward Jr. of Papillion, Robert Wilkins of Arlington, Sen. Jules Burbach of Hartington, Chris Miller of Homer, Russ Morgan of Elwood, Vince Foster of Grant and William Benker of Lexington.

TAXPAYER HELP . . . the IRS Gateway office is open Wednesdays.

Don't Despair; Help Is Available With IRS Tax Forms At Gateway

The opening of an Internal Revenue Service office at Gateway to assist taxpayers has been announced by IRS Lincoln Manager Kenneth Guest.

Guest said the office, located on the mall, will be open Wednesdays from 11 a.m.-7:30 p.m.

He said he had been informed that about 6% of taxpayers have not claimed the credit for personal exemptions (line 16b of Form 1040). He said the IRS will make the correction for the $30 tax credit in each case, but this will delay refunds to taxpayers.

Guest said about 2.6% of taxpayers are claiming the earned income credit, which is available only to heads of households who earn less than $8,000 and have one dependent child. Guest said IRS believes more persons are eligible, and he therefore suggests a special check by taxpayers to see whether they can qualify for this tax credit (line 21c of Form 1040).

Meanwhile, the IRS district office in Omaha announced that assistance in the preparation of tax returns may be obtained on the dates specified at the IRS offices listed below (all offices are closed Monday, Feb. 16):

3-Hour Airport Blaze Damages Main Building

Omaha (UPI) — Four persons escaped serious injury Monday when a fire swept through the main building at the North Omaha Airport.

Firemen from Omaha, Millard, Ponca Hills, Irvington and Fort Calhoun battled the blaze for about three hours.

The fire destroyed the North Omaha Airport cafe, the airport office and a second-story apartment in the building. The cause was uncertain, but firemen theorized the blaze could have started in the ceiling area between the first and second floors.

The daughter-in-law of the airport's owner, Mrs. Debbie Bonacci, was treated by her family doctor for minor burns on her face suffered when she grabbed her son, Michael, 4, from the building's restroom after she and others broke an outside window to free him.

Two women working in the cafe, Goldie Soll of Irvington and Maxine Shipley, Crescent, Iowa, escaped without incident.

Abortion Insurance Voted Out

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha City Council Tuesday voted 7-0 to discontinue employe insurance benefits for abortions, but continued maternity benefits for single and married employes.

The amended proposal by councilman Monte Taylor replaced a proposal by councilman Jerry Hassett to eliminate all abortion and single-maternity coverage.

There was no mention Tuesday of an earlier statement by the National Organization for Women that a lawsuit probably would ensue if the abortion change was adopted.

Assistant City Atty. Thomas Young said last week that changes in abortion or maternity coverage might violate the "equal protection' clause of the U.S. Constitution.

LOVE STORY . . . Tho and Thu married. AP

Reunited At Last, Viets Wed In G.I.

Grand Island (AP) — Separated by the chaotic mass exodus uthat was the fall of South Vietnam last year, two Vietnamese refugees are now married and have vowed they'll never again be separated.

The happy ending to a story that began 2½ years ago and traversed thousands of miles came last Saturday when Thu Van Nguyen and Tho Thi Dinh were married in a Catholic ceremony here.

Thu and Tho met in South Vietnam in 1973. He was in the Vietnamese Navy and she was living with her parents along with her nine brothers and sisters.

They met in Saigon when Thu was introduced to his bride-to-be by her brother-in-law.

Today, they claim it was love at first sight.

However, respect for parental wishes takes preference in Southeast Asia, and Tho's father felt his country was in too much turmoil for the couple to be married. So the wedding did not take place in Vietnam, but in St. Mary's Cathedral in this typical Midwestern community of about 33,000.

As North Vietnamese forces swept southward, Tho and her family were forced to flee Saigon, leaving several family members behind. They left is such a hurry that there was no chance to leave a message for Thu.

Thu also left his homeland, but by ship from My Tho bound for the Phillipines.

As Thu changed ships in the crowded Philippine harbor in an effort to get to the U.S., he looked up and saw Tho and her family. From that moment until their arrival in California they traveled together.

"I was afraid I would never see Thu again, but I never gave up hope that somehow we would one day be together," Tho said of her hasty departure from Saigon.

Thu said he had the same hope, but that he was far too realistic to believe that he could ever find one girl somewhere between Vietnam and the United States, even without knowing if she was dead or alive.

From the Philippines the two traveled to Guam, then finally to Camp Pendleton. Calif.

Again the couple asked parental permission to get married, but Tho's father again hesitated, saying he felt they should wait until the family got settled.

But, once again the two got separated. Thu's American sponsor was in Gainesville, Fla., while Thu and her family waited in California.

Last August, members of the St. Mary's parish here decided to sponsor a Vietnamese refugee family, and the 11 members of Tho's family arrived here last Sept. 20.

Just before Christmas, Tho and Thu were reunited once again, after Thu traveled from Florida to Grand Island on a bus.

At that time, the wedding date was quickly set.

Saturday's ceremony, presided over by the Rev. Frank Curran, was a combination Vietnamese-American nuptial, with the bride and groom in traditional Vietnamese wedding attire. They spoke their vows, however, in English.

Again, according to Vietnamese tradition, Tho did not go immediately to live with her new husband. Instead, Thu explained, a Vietnamese bride spends the first day after her wedding in her father's house.

According to the tradition, on the second day after the wedding, the groom must capture his bride from her father's house, and the two flee on their honeymoon.

However, the couple did not take an immediate honeymoon — their first task will be finding a job for Thu, with the help of their St. Mary's sponsors.

In Vietnam, Thu became skilled in wood-carving and in making wooden furniture.

Grand Island Increases Electricity Rate By 33%

Grand Island (AP) — Electricity users in Grand Island will see their rates go up a whopping 33% effective March 1, and some officials are predicting a doubling of local rates within the next three years.

The City Council Monday approved a rate increase after weighing two proposals from the city's Utility Department.

R.J. Olson, director of utility operations, said the increases will provide a 33.9% increase in revenues for the utility for the remainder of the fiscal year.

City Manager John M. Carpenter told council members the rate increase is needed to accommodate the proposed joint power plant construction project in which both Grand Island and Hastings would cooperate.

Officials said the average residential consumer using 650 kilowatt hours monthly will see his bill jump from $17.78 to $22.98.

The last major increase in electric rates was in 1972.

Olson had also given the council a 39% rate increase proposal, but the panel rejected it.

After his arguments for the bigger increase were turned down, Olson said he recommended the maximum because the latest increase is just the first hike. He predicted that rates will have to be doubled over the next three years.

City Betterment To Appeal Ruling Against 2 Lotteries

Omaha (AP) — It's official, and it comes as no surprise — attorneys for the City Betterment Corp., which operates Omaha's Big Green and Big Gold lotteries, will ask the Nebraska Supreme Court to overturn a ruling that City Betterment's operation of the lottery is illegal.

City Betterment attorney Frederick Cassman said the appeal will be filed shortly.

Two weeks ago, Douglas County District Court Judge James Buckley ruled that City Betterment was operating the lotteries illegally because the firm was formed solely to operate the lottery, and not as a nonprofit, charitable organization. Buckley then ordered the lotteries shut down Feb. 16. He also denied a request for a bond that would have allowed the games to continue pending a decision of the appeal.

In addition to filing the appeal, Cassman is expected to ask for a stay of Judge Buckley's order halting the lottery until the state's highest court can rule on the issue.

Fair Managers Urged To Educate Urbanites

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

"The worst bunch of communicators in America today are the farmers and ranchers," said John Elsner, manager of the Tulsa, Okla., State Fair, at the annual meeting Tuesday of the Nebraska Association of Fair Managers.

Elsner urged the managers to use their fairs to tell the "story of agriculture to the urban public."

"We have to educate the urban masses. The fairs are the only full-time public relations group speaking for agriculture," he said.

"You need someone on your county fair staff who can take good pictures. You might want to initiate a program with the high school paper to have their journalists do stories on your livestock show," he suggested.

Elsner said fair managers at all fairs needed to spend some time with the press to explain the reasons for livestock shows.

Portable Displays

Elsner suggested that all groups in agriculture become more involved by developing special portable displays that could be used at several fairs.

"With 5% of the people on the farms, we have to educate the other 95% or we will end up like the oil companies with so many restrictions we can't stay in business. We can walk or ride a horse if we don't have gas, but without food we will have a disaster," he said.

Leo Cooksley of Berwyn, president of the fair managers association, agreed with Elsner, "A survey of visitors at the New York State Fair showed 80% came to learn about agriculture. Don't sell your livestock shows short as an educational system," he said.

Income Scrutinized

Cooksley warned the fair managers that the Internal Revenue Service was taking a close look at off-season income on fairgrounds. "If you rent a building out, have a horse race or other income, you may be paying a bunch of back taxes one of these days," he said.

Sen. Jerome Warner of Waverly, who is also head of the Lancaster County Fair, discussed legislative problems with the fair managers.

Several managers were concerned about complying with the open meetings laws and regulations governing funding of fair activities by a county levy.

Bill Introduced

Warner told the managers he had introduced a special bill to exempt Lancaster County from a requirement of separate budgeting for fairs. "In most counties you should have a separate listing on a tax statement for the fair. You should be sure you are complying with the law," he said.

Cooksley warned the fair managers that these "nitpicking details are important. All it takes is one fair hater to create a mess of trouble if you slip up," he warned.

The fair managers wound up their two-day convention Tuesday evening with the organization's annual banquet.

Ak-Sar-Ben Revises Fair Support Plans

Those premium checks Nebraska 4-H members are used to receiving from Ak-Sar-Ben each year won't be coming any longer. The reason is the execessive cost of writing checks, not the money on the checks, according to a spokesman for the public service organization.

Ak-Sar-Ben will also drop its "spruce up" checks to Nebraska county fairs which used to brighten local fair board treasuries every other year.

Instead, Ak-Sar-Ben will match up to $1,000 a year toward getting new buildings on county fairgrounds. A total of $85,000 has been allocated to this new program.

County fairs will also continue to share in the annual fair funds collected from a state tax on admissions, fees for individual licenses and a daily licensing fee at annual Ak-Sar-Ben race meetings.

This fee is divided equally among the county fairs in the state each year.

The Nebraska Association of Fair Managers elected Orville Koch of Syracuse as secretary-treasurer, and named Stanley Torpin of Central City, Henry Haussler of Holbrook, and John Milanuk of Oshkosh to the board of directors.

State Agriculture Board Leaves Leadership Intact

The State Board of Aggriculture made no executive board changes at its annual convention in Lincoln Tuesday, but did elect some new members to its board.

The executive board includes Don Clement of Kearney, president; Wally Thorson of Mead, first vice president; Kenneth Torczon of Columbus, second vice president; Charles Miller of Ralston, secretary-treasurer; Don Kilgore of North Platte, Ron Bath of Auburn, Jack Chapman of Hebron, executive board members.

New board members include Sen. Richard Maresh of Milligan, elected to a one-year term. Stan Christensen of Bridgeport and Robert Kiester of Hemingford, two-year terms.

Reelected to the board were Walter Hahn of Tecumseh, Crissie Rist of Humboldt, Wally Thorson of Mead, Torczon, Dale Shoemaker of Lincoln, John Ward Jr. of Papillion, Robert Wilkins of Arlington, Sen. Jules Burbach of Hartington, Chris Miller of Homer, Russ Morgan of Elwood, Vince Foster of Grant and William Benker of Lexington.

TAXPAYER HELP . . . the IRS Gateway office is open Wednesdays.

Don't Despair; Help Is Available With IRS Tax Forms At Gateway

The opening of an Internal Revenue Service office at Gateway to assist taxpayers has been announced by IRS Lincoln Manager Kenneth Guest.

Guest said the office, located on the mall, will be open Wednesdays from 11 a.m.-7:30 p.m.

He said he had been informed that about 6% of taxpayers have not claimed the credit for personal exemptions (line 16b of Form 1040). He said the IRS will make the correction for the $30 tax credit in each case, but this will delay refunds to taxpayers.

Guest said about 2.6% of taxpayers are claiming the earned income credit, which is available only to heads of households who earn less than $8,000 and have one dependent child. Guest said IRS believes more persons are eligible, and he therefore suggests a special check by taxpayers to see whether they can qualify for this tax credit (line 21c of Form 1040).

Meanwhile the IRS district office in Omaha announced that assistance in the preparation of tax returns may be obtained on the dates specified at the IRS offices listed below (all offices are closed Monday, Feb. 16):

3-Hour Airport Blaze Damages Main Building

Omaha UPI – Four persons escaped serious injury Monday when a fire swept through the main building at the North Omaha Airport.

Firemen from Omaha, Millard, Ponca Hills, Irvington and Fort Calhoun battled the blaze for about three hours.

The fire destroyed the North Omaha Airport cafe, the airport office and a second-story apartment in the building. The cause was uncertain, but firemen theorized the blaze could have started in the ceiling area between the first and second floors.

The daughter-in-law of the airport's owner, Mrs. Debbie Bonacci, was treated by her family doctor for minor burns on her face suffered when she grabbed her son, Michael, 4, from the building's restroom after she and others broke an outside window to free him.

Two women working in the cafe, Goldie Soll of Irvington and Maxine Shipley, Crescent, Iowa, escaped without incident.

Abortion Insurance Voted Out

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha City Council Tuesday voted 7-0 to discontinue employe insurance benefits for abortions, but continued maternity benefits for single and married employes.

The amended proposal by councilman Monte Taylor replaced a proposal by councilman Jerry Hassett to eliminate all abortion and single-maternity coverage.

There was no mention Tuesday of an earlier statement by the National Organization for Women that a lawsuit probably would ensue if the abortion change was adopted.

Assistant City Atty. Thomas Young said last week that changes in abortion or maternity coverage might violate the "equal protection' clause of the U.S. Constitution.

Murder Charges Filed In Shootout

SALLISAW, Okla. (AP) — Charges of second degree murder were filed against three persons Tuesday after a Sallisaw trucking company operator and another trucker died in an early-morning shootout.

Separate second degree counts were filed by Asst. Dist. Atty. John Q. Adams against Spencer Coffman, 30; his wife, Judith, about 30, and Donna Johnson, 23. They were arraigned before Dist. Judge R.O. Engle.

Late Tuesday, both Miss Johnson and Mrs. Coffman posted $6,000 bond and were released from Sequoyah County jail, sheriff's deputies said. Coffman was being held on the same amount of bond.

Killed in the gunfight on U.S. 64, four blocks west of the downtown area of this northeastern Oklahoma city, were Elvin "Jim" Woody, 30, and Joe Gipson, 33, both employed as truck drivers.

Woody has been identified as the leader of the alleged grain fraud for which 15 Oklahomans were indicted last summer by a federal grand jury in Omaha.

Three persons were taken into custody following the shooting but the district attorney's office has not said whether charges will be filed. They were listed as Spencer Coffman, Judy Coffman and Donna Johnson, all of Sallisaw.

Sequoyah County Sheriff Max Newman said the argument "was between Spencer Coffman and Woody. Gipson was just along in the truck and he happened to get involved in it."

"Woody and Coffman had been feuding for the last eight months or so," Newman said. "And there had been a fist fight between them earlier Monday night." The shootings occurred about 1:30 a.m.

The sheriff said when the fatal fight began, Gipson and Coffman were sitting in the cab of a truck. Mrs. Coffman and Miss Johnson, identified as a friend of the Coffmans, were in one car and Woody, his wife Mary and sister Jeanette were in another car.

Mrs. Woody also was indicted by the Nebraska grand jury, which alleged payment was stopped on checks after grain was purchased from Midwestern elevator operators.

CLEAN LINEN... must for hospitals, checked by Casmer Koczak and Picard.

Hospital Laundry Service Booming

Omaha (AP) — On Dec. 4, a fire damaged a laundry on Omaha's near south side.

Within 30 minutes, the call went out to 23 hospitals in four states: "Conserve your linen."

The laundry, operated by Shared Service Systems, an affiliate of Nebraska Methodist Hospital, provides fresh linen, hospital gowns, towels and other items for the participating hospitals and nursing homes.

The crew of 75 employes worked "practically around the clock," according to executive director William K. Picard, who also pitched in on the still-operating ironers. In four days, service was back to normal.

The laundry, which cleans and delivers 28,000 bedsheets and more than 40,000 towels each week, has in five years grown into one of the largest in the Midwest.

The concept is based on mass production, that one large laundry can do the job at less expense than many smaller ones. But it also demands, for the most part, standard sizes and linen quality.

Under the shared service, participating nonprofit institutions set the standards and share in the savings.

Before Nebraska Methodist moved into its new facility on Omaha's west side in 1968, officials were forced to decide on linen supply and reached an agreement with Jennie Edmundson Hospital in Council Bluffs, Iowa, on a joint service.

Shortly after, they jumped at the opportunity to purchase the vacated Metropolitan Utilities District maintenance shop, which Picard said was "ideally suited for a large laundry and warehouse."

The warehouse is used to store food and medical supplies. Shared Service Systems, buying supplies in carload lots, serves 60 hospitals and nursing homes in Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri through cooperative purchasing. It has a fleet of nine trucks.

Picard, former administrator of Childrens Hospital in Omaha, said the savings on some items are as high as 50%.

Picard said a need also has been found by smaller community hospitals for specialized services they often cannot afford.

For instance, a small hospital is required to use a dietician but it may not be for full-time. The same is true in the areas of physical therapy, accounting, finance, planning and recreational therapy, now demanded by Medicare for nursing homes.

Growing government regulation in the health field also has been a factor in the growth of service, according to Picard. "The health industry has become very complex, very involved," he said. "It needs specialists."

Three hospitals have contracted with Shared Service for full-time management.

But the other services still are overshadowed by the huge laundry that washes 10 million pounds of linen in one year.

No Charges In Retarded Adult Facility Scuffle

Valentine (AP)—Cherry County Atty. Bill Quigley says he will not file assault charges in connection with a scuffle that occurred last Tuesday at the workshop for mentally retarded adults here.

"The whole thing looks like a personality and political thing, rather than a case for criminal court," Quigley said Tuesday.

The scuffle involved Vince Scott, regional director of the 22-county Office of Develpmental Disabilities at Wayne and Fritz Muller, a volunteer employe at the workshop.

Quigley said both Scott and Muller had witnesses on their sides, and that there does not seem to be enough evidence for a criminal prosecution against Scott.

Last Friday, the regional governing board gave Scott a vote of confidence, and unanimously directed that Muller be dismissed.

LOVE STORY...Tho and Thu married. AP

Reunited At Last, Viets Wed In G.I.

Grand Island (AP) — Separated by the chaotic mass exodus uthat was the fall of South Vietnam last year, two Vietnamese refugees are now married and have vowed they'll never again be separated.

The happy ending to a story that began 2½ years ago and traversed thousands of miles came last Saturday when Thu Van Nguyen and Tho Thi Dinh were married in a Catholic ceremony here.

Thu and Tho met in South Vietnam in 1973. He was in the Vietnamese Navy and she was living with her parents along with her nine brothers and sisters.

They met in Saigon when Thu was introduced to his bride-to-be by her brother-in-law.

Today, they claim it was love at first sight.

However, respect for parental wishes takes preference in Southeast Asia, and Tho's father felt his country was in too much turmoil for the couple to be married. So the wedding did not take place in Vietnam, but in St. Mary's Cathedral in this typical Midwestern community of about 33,000.

As North Vietnamese forces swept southward, Tho and her family were forced to flee Saigon, leaving several family members behind. They left is such a hurry that there was no chance to leave a message for Thu.

Thu also left his homeland, but by ship from My Tho bound for the Phillipines.

As Thu changed ships in the crowded Philippine harbor in an effort to get to the U.S., he looked up and saw Tho and her family. From that moment until their arrival in California they traveled together.

"I was afraid I would never see Thu again, but I never gave up hope that somehow we would one day be together," Tho said of her hasty departure from Saigon.

Thu said he had the same hope, but that he was far too realistic to believe that he could ever find one girl somewhere between Vietnam and the United States, even without knowing if she was dead or alive.

From the Philippines the two traveled to Guam, then finally to Camp Pendleton. Calif.

Again the couple asked parental permission to get married, but Tho's father again hesitated, saying he felt they should wait until the family got settled.

But, once again the two got separated. Thu's American sponsor was in Gainesville, Fla., while Thu and her family waited in California.

Last August, members of the St. Mary's parish here decided to sponsor a Vietnamese refugee family, and the 11 members of Tho's family arrived here last Sept. 20.

Just before Christmas, Tho and Thu were reunited once again, after Thu traveled from Florida to Grand Island on a bus.

At that time, the wedding date was quickly set.

Saturday's ceremony, presided over by the Rev. Frank Curran, was a combination Vietnamese-American nuptial, with the bride and groom in traditional Vietnamese wedding attire. They spoke their vows, however, in English.

Again, according to Vietnamese tradition, Tho did not go immediately to live with her new husband. Instead, Thu explained, a Vietnamese bride spends the first day after her wedding in her father's house.

According to the tradition, on the second day after the wedding, the groom must capture his bride from her father's house, and the two flee on their honeymoon.

However, the couple did not take an immediate honeymoon — their first task will be finding a job for Thu, with the help of their St. Mary's sponsors.

In Vietnam, Thu became skilled in wood-carving and in making wooden furniture.

Grand Island Increases Electricity Rate By 33%

Grand Island (AP) — Electricity users in Grand Island will see their rates go up a whopping 33% effective March 1, and some officials are predicting a doubling of local rates within the next three years.

The City Council Monday approved a rate increase after weighing two proposals from the city's Utility Department.

R.J. Olson, director of utility operations, said the increases will provide a 33.9% increase in revenues for the utility for the remainder of the fiscal year.

City Manager John M. Carpenter told council members the rate increase is needed to accommodate the proposed joint power plant construction project in which both Grand Island and Hastings would cooperate.

Officials said the average residential consumer using 650 kilowatt hours monthly will see his bill jump from $17.78 to $22.98.

The last major increase in electric rates was in 1972.

Olson had also given the council a 39% rate increase proposal, but the panel rejected it.

After his arguments for the bigger increase were turned down, Olson said he recommended the maximum because the latest increase is just the first hike. He predicted that rates will have to be doubled over the next three years.

City Betterment To Appeal Ruling Against 2 Lotteries

Omaha (AP) — It's official, and it comes as no surprise — attorneys for the City Betterment Corp., which operates Omaha's Big Green and Big Gold lotteries, will ask the Nebraska Supreme Court to overturn a ruling that City Betterment's operation of the lottery is illegal.

City Betterment attorney Frederick Cassman said the appeal will be filed shortly

Two weeks ago, Douglas County District Court Judge James Buckley ruled that City Betterment was operating the lotteries illegally because the firm was formed solely to operate the lottery, and not as a nonprofit, charitable organization Buckley then ordered the lotteries shut down Feb 16 He also denied a request for a bond that would have allowed the games to continue pending a decision of the appeal

In addition to filing the appeal, Cassman is expected to ask for a stay of Judge Buckley's order halting the lottery until the state's highest court can rule on the issue.

Cattle Marketing Called Disorderly

Omaha (AP) — With cattle prices continuing to slide downward from near record highs last summer, an official of the Nebraska livestock Feeders Assn. (NLFA) is urging more uniform marketings.

"I am concerned about the market situation the cattle industry presently finds itself in," said Herb Albers Jr. of Wisner, NLFA president.

"While at times in the past couple of years we have had an oversupply of red meat on the market, causing lower prices, we presently have a different situation."

In the past, Albers said, overfinished cattle have been marketed on top of cows and nonfed cattle. However, at present, most feedlots are current in selling on finish and weight. Along with this, Albers added, the total slaughter of cows and non-fed cattle is decreasing steadily.

'Stronger Demand'

"As of late, this is evidenced by the stronger demand and an increase in prices for that kind of beef," said Albers. "This, coupled with a relatively short supply of hogs, should produce something substantially better than we are experiencing today."

Albers said the causes of the decline are within the industry in the form of disorderly marketing.

"This all adds up to disaster in the market place, a disaster that no one but the industry itself is responsible," he said.

Albers said it is time for livestock producers to "shape" a better marketing process.

Albers had several suggestions for producers:

Refuse to sell on a grade and yield basis.

Do not sell without the establishment of prices beforehand.

Do not sell under-finished cattle.

"As has been the policy of the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Assn., we do urge you feeders to sell those cattle which are ready for slaughter, but we encourage you to stiffen your back a little and price cattle — don't give them away," Albers said.

A return to orderly marketings will bring price recovery, Albers added.

Iowa Beef Plans To Buy Madison Food Company

Dakota City, Neb. (AP) — J. Fred Haigler, president and board chairman of Iowa Beef Processors (IBP) and Robert L. Peterson, president and the major stockholder of Madison Foods, Madison, Neb., jointly announced Tuesday an agreement on a plan by which IBP will acquire up to 100% of the outstanding stock and warrants of Madison Foods.

The total price of the sale was put at about $9.7 million.

IBP's offer calls for the purchase of Madison stock at $13 a share, while warrants will be purchased for $13 each, minus the current warrant exercise price.

Under the agreement, IBP is obligated to complete the transaction if it obtains the right to purchase 85% of the outstanding stock.

Madison Foods owns and operates a pork plant under a custom slaughter arrangement with Armour & Co. Haigler noted that under the agreement between Armour and Madison Foods, Armour has a 60-day right to match IBP's tender offer.

Haigler said IBP's tender offer cannot begin until Armour's right to first refusal expires.

Peterson said that for the fiscal year ending Oct. 25, 1975, Madison Foods recorded revenues of $6,387,836, and net earnings of $419,254.

For the year ending Oct. 26, 1974, Madison's revenues totaled $2,856,980, resulting in a net loss of $52,015, Peterson said.

Murder Charges Filed In Shootout

SALLISAW, Okla. (AP) — Charges of second degree murder were filed against three persons Tuesday after a Sallisaw trucking company operator and another trucker died in an early-morning shootout

Separate second degree counts were filed by Asst. Dist. Atty John Q Adams against Spencer Coffman, 30, his wife, Judith, about 30, and Donna Johnson, 23 They were arraigned before Dist Judge R O. Engle

Late Tuesday, both Miss Johnson and Mrs. Coffman posted $6.000 bond and were released from Sequoyah County jail, sheriff's deputies said. Coffman was being held on the same amount of bond

Killed in the gunfight on U S 64, four blocks west of the downtown area of this northeastern Oklahoma city, were Elvin "Jim" Woody, 30, and Joe Gipson, 33, both employed as truck drivers

Woody has been identified as the leader of the alleged grain fraud for which 15 Oklahomans were indicted last summer by a federal grand jury in Omaha

Three persons were taken into custody following the shooting but the district attorney's office has not said whether charges will be filed. They were listed as Spencer Coffman, Judy Coffman and Donna Johnson, all of Sallisaw.

Sequoyah County Sheriff Max Newman said the argument "was between Spencer Coffman and Woody. Gipsoh was just along in the truck and he happened to get involved in it."

"Woody and Coffman had been feuding for the last eight months or so," Newman said. "And there had been a fist fight between them earlier Monday night." The shootings occurred about 1:30 a.m.

The sheriff said when the fatal fight began, Gipson and Coffman were sitting in the cab of a truck Mrs Coffman and Miss Johnson, identified as a friend of the Coffmans, were in one car and Woody, his wife Mary and sister Jeanette were in another car.

Mrs. Woody also was indicted by the Nebraska grand jury, which alleged payment was stopped on checks after grain was purchased from Midwestern elevator operators.

CLEAN LINEN . . . must for hospitals, checked by Casmer Koczak and Picard.

Hospital Laundry Service Booming

Omaha (AP) — On Dec. 4, a fire damaged a laundry on Omaha's near south side.

Within 30 minutes, the call went out to 23 hospitals in four states: "Conserve your linen."

The laundry, operated by Shared Service Systems, an affiliate of Nebraska Methodist Hospital, provides fresh linen, hospital gowns, towels and other items for the participating hospitals and nursing homes.

The crew of 75 employes worked "practically around the clock," according to executive director William K. Picard, who also pitched in on the still-operating ironers. In four days, service was back to normal.

The laundry, which cleans and delivers 28,000 bedsheets and more than 40 000 towels each week, has in five years grown into one of the largest in the Midwest

The concept is based on mass production, that one large laundry can do the job at less expense than many smaller ones. But it also demands, for the most part, standard sizes and linen quality

Under the shared service, participating nonprofit institutions set the standards and share in the savings.

Before Nebraska Methodist moved into its new facility on Omaha's west side in 1968, officials were forced to decide on linen supply and reached an agreement with Jennie Edmundson Hospital in Council Bluffs, Iowa, on a joint service.

Shortly after, they jumped at the opportunity to purchase the vacated Metropolitan Utilities District maintenance shop, which Picard said was "ideally suited for a large laundry and warehouse"

The warehouse is used to store food and medical supplies. Shared Service Systems, buying supplies in carload lots, serves 60 hospitals and nursing homes in Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri through cooperative purchasing. It has a fleet of nine trucks

Picard, former administrator of Childrens Hospital in Omaha, said the savings on some items are as high as 50%.

Picard said a need also has been found by smaller community hospitals for specialized services they often cannot afford.

For instance, a small hospital is required to use a dietician but it may not be for full-time The same is true in the areas of physical therapy, accounting, finance, planning and recreational therapy, now demanded by Medicare for nursing homes.

Growing government regulation in the health field also has been a factor in the growth of service according to Picard. "The health industry has become very complex, very involved," he said "It needs specialists"

Three hospitals have contracted with Shared Service for full-time management

But the other services still are overshadowed by the huge laundry that washes 10 million pounds of linen in one year.

No Charges In Retarded Adult Facility Scuffle

Valentine AP —Cherry County Atty Bill Quigley says he will not file assault charges in connection with a scuffle that occurred last Tuesday at the workshop for mentally retarded adults here

The whole thing looks like a personality and political thing, rather than a case for criminal court Quigley said Tuesday

The scuffle involved Vince Scott regional director of the 22-county Office of Developmental Disabilities at Wayne and Fritz Muller a volunteer employe at the workshop

Quigley said both Scott and Muller had witnesses on their sides and that there does not seem to be enough evidence for a criminal prosecution against Scott

Last Friday the regional governing board gave Scott a vote of confidence, and unanimously directed that Muller be dismissed.

San Francisco — Campaign days of winter. The candidates — shaking hands, handing out leaflets — appear on our evening TV. Their promises emit in steamy breath above their sheepskin collars.

"Back to Normalcy!" cried Warren Harding. He campaigned from his front porch in Ohio.

"Is that fair?" asked F. D. Roosevelt speaking on radio from the fireside. (Since little is fair in life, FDR was firing bird shot. He had to be right.)

"We shall pursue it with vigor," said Jack Kennedy. Now, according to the press, JFK was putting most of his vigor into pursuing chicks.

☆ ☆ ☆

A candidate could do himself a lot of good by endorsing better lives for cats and dogs. We had the New Deal and the Fair Deal. How about The Square Meal?

The Square Meal would promise canned cat food for every cat. A dog biscuit in every dog house.

The surrey drawn by horses would have fringe benefits on top.

Millions of people have household animals and would gladly vote for somebody who would improve their animal lives.

☆ ☆ ☆

At one time I represented a man who ran on the slogan: "Elect a Hunter to Congress!"

I did the flack work for him.

"How do you like that platform?" he asked me.

I said it was pretty good. What else could I say? I needed the job. Ecology had not come into the language then. But I figured we could get something going on conservation. Shoot only enough for dinner.

He said: "Are you out of your mind? Why, the Fish and Game laws are too strict as it is. Why can't I shoot a dozen deer if I have the ammunition?"

He grasped me by the lapel and his voice was hoarse with emotion. (I hoped I didn't look like a deer.)

He said: "There are millions of hunters in the country. Think of what their trade means to the sporting goods stores. Now if we could just double the game law quotas — not unlimited, only double — it would be an economic shot in the arm for the nation!"

☆ ☆ ☆

He had the women's vote figured too. He said: "You know the fancy cleaning cloths they sell in gun stores? Well, let me tell you those do not compare for cleaning like a piece of your wife's old underwear."

He said: "You see the underwear — the older, the better — is permeated with natural oils. You pull a piece of that through a gun barrel and you've got a clean weapon. Tell that to the press, and they'll know you talked to a real hunter!"

I think he had some ideas of arming hunters with rapid fire guns. Maybe machineguns. I sent some of it to a sports editor I knew. But nobody printed it.

The candidate said I must lack "the hunting spirit."

Cattle Marketing Called Disorderly

Omaha (AP) — With cattle prices continuing to slide downward from near record highs last summer, an official of the Nebraska livestock Feeders Assn (NLFA) is urging more uniform marketings

"I am concerned about the market situation the cattle industry presently finds itself in," said Herb Albers Jr. of Wisner, NLFA president.

"While at times in the past couple of years we have had an oversupply of red meat on the market, causing lower prices, we presently have a different situation "

In the past, Albers said, overfinished cattle have been marketed on top of cows and nonfed cattle However, at present, most feedlots are current in selling on finish and weight. Along with this, Albers added, the total slaughter of cows and non-fed cattle is decreasing steadily

'Stronger Demand'

"As of late, this is evidenced by the stronger demand and an increase in prices for that kind of beef," said Albers "This, coupled with a relatively short supply of hogs, should produce something substantially better than we are experiencing today "

Albers said the causes of the decline are within the industry in the form of disorderly marketing.

"This all adds up to disaster in the market place, a disaster that no one but the industry itself is responsible," he said.

Albers said it is time for livestock producers to "shape" a better marketing process.

Albers had several suggestions for producers

Refuse to sell on a grade and yield basis

Do not sell without the establishment of prices beforehand

Do not sell under-finished cattle

"As has been the policy of the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Assn., we do urge you feeders to sell those cattle which are ready for slaughter, but we encourage you to stiffen your back a little and price cattle — don't give them away," Albers said

A return to orderly marketings will bring price recovery, Albers added

Iowa Beef Plans To Buy Madison Food Company

Dakota City, Neb. (AP) — J. Fred Haigler, president and board chairman of Iowa Beef Processors (IBP) and Robert L. Peterson, president and the major stockholder of Madison Foods, Madison, Neb., jointly announced Tuesday an agreement on a plan by which IBP will acquire up to 100% of the outstanding stock and warrants of Madison Foods

The total price of the sale was put at about $9.7 million

IBP's offer calls for the purchase of Madison stock at $13 a share, while warrants will be purchased for $13 each, minus the current warrant exercise price.

Under the agreement, IBP is obligated to complete the transaction if it obtains the right to purchase 85% of the outstanding stock.

Madison Foods owns and operates a pork plant under a custom slaughter arrangement with Armour & Co. Haigler noted that under the agreement between Armour and Madison Foods, Armour has a 60-day right to match IBP's tender offer

Haigler said IBP's tender offer cannot begin until Armour's right to first refusal expires

Peterson said that for the fiscal year ending Oct 25, 1975, Madison Foods recorded revenues of $6,387,836, and net earnings of $419,254

For the year ending Oct. 26. 1974, Madison's revenues totaled $2,856,980, resulting in a net loss of $52,015, Peterson said.

Rock Crushing Job Still Rolling Around

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

A rock crushing question prompted another round of county engineer versus county commissioners Tuesday during the board's morning and afternoon meetings.

After much haggling, the board, on a 2 to 1 vote, decided to reject the most recent rock crushing bids and negotiate a contract for crushing rock at the county-owned Rocca quarries. But just who will negotiate is still up in the air.

And Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton, who said he found himself between "crushed rock and a hard place," voted against rejecting the bids, saying he was "unhappy with the way the whole thing has been conducted."

"I don't think this has been an above-board operation," said Hamilton. By negotiating a price with the current highest bidder it's "going to give the appearance of collusion," Hamilton added.

Started Last Summer

The complicated problem of who should get the job of crushing rock at the county-owned quarries began this summer and has led to a law suit and two rounds of bidding for the job.

County Engineer Marv Nuernberger negotiated with one firm, Constructors Inc. of Lincoln, this summer for the crushing job. The contract was never approved by the commissioners and the public bidding process was not used.

Schwarck Quarries, Inc. filed a suit in Lancaster County District Court contending that the negotiated contract violated state bidding laws and that the $1.55 per ton price for crushed rock was excessive.

After a verbal agreement with the county attorney's office that the rock crushing job would be bid out, the company dismissed the suit.

First Bids Discarded

The first round of bidding was thrown out by the County Board on the technicality that the bids had not been advertised properly. In this set of bids, Schwarck quarries came in with a low bid of $1.64 a ton and Constructor's Inc. had $2.18 a ton.

The second bids, opened Monday, showed Schwarck with a low bid of $1.98 a ton, up 34 cents from its bid three weeks ago.

Throughout the haggling, Nuernberger has contended that negotiation, not bidding, is the best method to use for the rock crushing service, and Tuesday he asked the board to reject both bids and let him negotiate a lower price.

Nuernberger pointed out that the latest low bid will cost the taxpayers about $10,000 more than the low bid of three weeks ago.

Commissioner Hamilton wanted Nuernberger to agree to negotiate with both companies, not just Constructor's Inc.

"I'll negotiate with whom I want to negotiate with," Nuernberger replied.

"The question is," said Nuernberger, "is it in the public interest to pay $1.98 a ton when we could have had $1.55? We seem to be foregetting that around here."

At the suggestion of Mike Heavican, deputy county attorney, the board left the motion about who will do the negotiation open, so commissioners themselves could get involved.

"I want a guarantee that it will be in an open manner," said Hamilton.

Chinese Circus Predicted

"What they are going to have is a Chinese circus," said Nuernberger after the vote. Negotiations should be with just one company, he contended and said it was logical to assume he would have negotiated with Constructor's Inc. not Schwarck Quarries.

Nuernberger said he knew what kind of equipment Constructor's has, and what kind of job they will do. Schwarck's preformance record on another job last year "was quite poor," Nuernberger said.

Nuernberger also denied there was any collusion involved in his decision to negotiate a contract with Constructors Inc.

"Collusion . . . that turns my stomach. An elected official has the duty to do everything in the public interest, and the public is particularly concerned about exhorbitant prices," he said after the board meeting.

"I've always been satisfied that the negotiated price was a fair price," he said.

In other action the board approved the new energy and transportation portions of the Goals and Policies document.

Council Grants Extra Money For 4th Municipal Courtroom

The City Council appropriated an extra $8,146 to the Municipal Court Monday night to cover additional costs for a fourth courtroom.

The council had budgeted $39,769 in August, but Presiding Municipal Judge Donald Grant wrote in a letter to the council that more money was needed.

Grant noted that the original estimate was based upon what officials thought it would cost to remodel the city's personnel office into that fourth courtroom. Instead, the City-County Building Commission changed the plans and ordered an existing courtroom divided into two courtrooms.

Total cost of the remodeling will be $47,915, Grant said. Since most of the money already has been budgeted, only $8,146 was needed.

The additional money will pay for such things as carpeting ($3,500), architect's fee ($3,200), new wall ($500), judges' chair ($400), four counsel chairs ($600), flags ($45) and a blackboard ($175).

In other business the council:

Ambulance Firms Ask Aid; County Can't Help

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln's two ambulance companies told the County Board Tuesday that they're losing money on every welfare ambulance run they make for county welfare patients. And, they said, they haven't been paid for any welfare-related calls since November.

Don Shurtleff of Shurtleff's Ambulance and Marty Miller of Eastern Ambulance asked the county commissioners if they could intervene on their behalf and help them get paid.

The problem, the County Board noted, is they don't have the authority to do anything about it. But, Chairman Bruce Hamilton said he would try anyway.

Shurtleff said the ambulance companies only are paid about 80% of what it costs to make an actual run. Although the costs vary depending on the service required, the companies charge a base price of $41 to go out on a call.

More Red Tape

The companies haven't been paid for welfare-related runs since the state took over the billing system Nov. 1. The companies formerly were reimbursed by the county welfare department, Shurtleff said, but the additional red tape involved apparently has caused the delay in being paid. He said he still doesn't know when the checks will be mailed.

Hamilton said, "I just don't understand the concept of why anybody who provides service for welfare clients should be paid less. I guess it's a national problem."

Miller noted that an advisory group, the Emergency Medical Services (EMS) Committee, is studying the role of the ambulance firms and considering whether any of their duties should be switched to the Fire Department.

Agreeing that the two companies have financial problems, Hamilton figured that something should be done to help the private companies because if the "city takes it over, they'll probably find it costs them three times as much."

The ambulance companies are required to answer every call, under city law. Shurtleff pointed out that in some states the ambulance firms refuse to transport people unless they are paid in advance.

Hamilton said he could understand the companies' frustration.

"Here we have a law which requires them to answer a call, yet there's no law requiring that they be paid."

Talks Unsuccessful

Miller said they have tried, unsuccessfully, to talk to state welfare officials about making the rates for welfare clients more equitable.

Hamilton said the situation "shows the powerlessness of our situation. Here we have some bureaucrat in Washington or Kansas City sitting in an office someplace setting the rates."

Hamilton said he would talk to Mayor Helen Boosalis about the situation to find out how soon the EMS Committee will have recommendations. He also said he would talk to some state officials about speeding up the payment for welfare related ambulance runs.

Fred Harris Backers Surprised At Third Place Showing In Iowa

Nebraskans supporting Democratic presidential candidate Fred Harris said Tuesday they were surprised and pleased by his third place finish Jan. 19 in Iowa precinct caucuses.

Harris backers said the results were the first step in what Harris calls the "winnowing out" process which will lead to his victory at the national convention.

Sam Zelleski, Nebraska campaign treasurer for Harris, said most of the former Oklahoma senator's supporters in Nebraska expected him to do well in the Iowa caucuses "but not that well."

He added: "For a person whom the press has all but ignored up to this point in the campaign, it indicates Harris is a serious contender and already the national media are calling his finish a victory."

New Job Called Lifetime Chance

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — H. James Field Jr., state Republican chairman, says he will resign his post to become an associate director of the presidential personnel office at the White House.

Field, 27, described his new job as a "once-in-a-lifetime" opportunity.

He has headed the GOP state committee since last March at a salary of $20,000 a year. His new job will pay about $35,000 a year.

Blank Told Auditor Of Fund Shortages

By GORDON WINTERS
Star KStaff Writer

It was Darrell Blank, now accused of embezzling, who told the State Auditor's Office of shortages in Lancaster County motor vehicle tax funds, an auditor testified Tuesday.

Francis Walls said Blank, whom he described as visibly nervous, told him of the shortage on Sept. 9, 1974, over a cup of coffee in a downtown restaurant.

Walls, deputy state auditor, said Blank had arranged the meeting by telephone. He told Walls he "was being asked to come up with $5,400," Walls said.

Walls said County Treasurer Frank Golden later told him that he had known of the shortages since May 1974. Others in the office told Walls they had known of the shortages since July, Walls said.

Walls said Blank told him he had never taken a cent from his office and that the shortages dated back years. He said Blank also produced two "debit memos" or IOU's, for $2,450 and $2,950, he said were given him in 1970 when money was borrowed from his division to make up a shortage in the real estate division of the county treasurer's office.

An audit conducted by state auditors after Blank's revelation showed that a total of $7,407 was missing, according to testimony from John Nealon of the State Auditor's Office.

Of that amount, the disappearance of $3,160 was linked to a July 1974 "hold slip" for licenses supposedly issued to Abel Construction, but which apparently never were, according to Nealon's testimony.

"Hold slips," according to the testimony of Mrs. Bonnie Anderson, county treasurer administrative aide, are often used when a company is seeking licenses for a fleet of vehicles.

She said the hold slips are recorded as cash and held until the tax on the licenses is paid.

The disappearance of $1,894 was linked to 87 vehicle registrations issued in July 1974, Nealon said.

Although the licenses apparently were issued and money apparently accepted, the registrations were not recorded in the treasurer's office, Nealon said. Copies were found in the county assessor's office.

Of the total missing amount of $7,407, auditors have been unable to determine when $2,352 disappeared, Nealon said. He said it could have been missing for years.

And Nealon said the audit conducted in late 1974 revealed that shortages in the motor vehicle division were being systematically hidden.

Nealon said auditors found that cash taken in payment for motor vehicle taxes on one day would be recorded as having been received earlier.

"You could always stay in balance that way," Nealon testified.

Charges Filed Against Youth In Fatal Crash

A misdemeanor charge of motor vehicle homicide has been filed in Municipal Court against a Lincoln man.

Michael Zwiebel, 19, 4600 Briarpark Dr., was charged in connection with the Thursday night death of Steven D. Wurst, 21, 1724 Pinedale Ave.

Both Zwiebel, who was driving a pickup truck, and Wurst, who was riding a bicycle, were traveling west on A St. near 77th St. about 10:40 p.m. when they collided.

Dept. Lancaster Co. Atty. Rod Rehm says the charge is punishable by a fine of up to $500, six months in county jail, or both.

San Francisco — Campaign days of winter. The candidates — shaking hands, handing out leaflets — appear on our evening TV. Their promises emit in steamy breath above their sheepskin collars.

"Back to Normalcy!" cried Warren Harding He campaigned from his front porch in Ohio.

"Is that fair?" asked F. D. Roosevelt speaking on radio from the fireside. (Since little is fair in life, FDR was firing bird shot. He had to be right.)

"We shall pursue it with vigor," said Jack Kennedy. Now, according to the press, JFK was putting most of his vigor into pursuing chicks.

☆ ☆ ☆

A candidate could do himself a lot of good by endorsing better lives for cats and dogs. We had the New Deal and the Fair Deal. How about The Square Meal?

The Square Meal would promise canned cat food for every cat. A dog biscuit in every dog house.

The surrey drawn by horses would have fringe benefits on top.

Millions of people have household animals and would gladly vote for somebody who would improve their animal lives.

☆ ☆ ☆

At one time I represented a man who ran on the slogan: "Elect a Hunter to Congress!"

I did the flack work for him.

"How do you like that platform?" he asked me.

I said it was pretty good. What else could I say? I needed the job Ecology had not come into the language then. But I figured we could get something going on conservation. Shoot only enough for dinner.

He said: "Are you out of your mind? Why, the Fish and Game laws are too strict as it is. Why can't I shoot a dozen deer if I have the ammunition?"

He grasped me by the lapel and his voice was hoarse with emotion. (I hoped I didn't look like a deer.)

He said: "There are millions of hunters in the country. Think of what their trade means to the sporting goods stores. Now if we could just double the game law quotas — not unlimited, only double — it would be an economic shot in the arm for the nation!"

☆ ☆ ☆

He had the women's vote figured too. He said: "You know the fancy cleaning cloths they sell in gun stores? Well, let me tell you those do not compare for cleaning like a piece of your wife's old underwear."

He said: "You see the underwear — the older, the better — is permeated with natural oils. You pull a piece of that through a gun barrel and you've got a clean weapon. Tell that to the press, and they'll know you talked to a real hunter!"

I think he had some ideas of arming hunters with rapid fire guns. Maybe machineguns. I sent some of it to a sports editor I knew. But nobody printed it.

The candidate said I must lack "the hunting spirit."

NETV-NBC Logo Dispute May Be Settled Next Week

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Nebraska Educational Television Network General Manager Jack McBride said Tuesday he hopes lawyers can "settle within the next week" the rights controversy with the National Broadcasting Co. over look-alike logos, or identification symbols.

"Otherwise," McBride told the NETV Commission, "the (Nebraska) attorney general will have to pursue legal remedies to protect" the public TV network "and the people of Nebraska."

Earlier Tuesday, The Lincoln Star learned that NETV was negotiating to divest itself of the "N" logo rights, awarding them to NBC if the commercial network would compensate NETV either monetarily or by donating equipment.

An NETV official told The Star that there are two obvious solutions: coexistence of the two logos, or NETV relinquishing its N. Regarding the latter, "equipment as a possible source of compensation is being discussed," the official said.

Color Mobile Unit

It's "well known," the official said, that NETV "for three years has been trying to get a color television mobile unit." The Legislature three years ago appropriatated $160,000 in state matching funds, but the federal government hasn't yet honored the award.

Since NBC is a subsidiary of RCA Corp., which makes TV equipment, one source said privately that would provide "additional motivation" for an equipment trade-off.

The original source ruled out monetary compensation by NBC as acceptable, since any sum would go into the state general fund and thereby doubtless reduce the NETV Network appropriation.

National Publicity

At the NETV Commission meeting, McBride noted the Logo controversy has generated nationwide publicity and good humor. He displayed a two-inch thick clip file, but declared there is a "serious aspect."

NETV's position is that "the people of Nebraska have property rights, ownership rights" to the logo, since it was developed by NETV staff who are paid by public money. Moreover, he said NETV established "prior usage" of the NBC carbon-copy logo not only in Nebraska but via Central Education Network stations broadcasting NETV programs.

Yet "The negotiations (with NBC) have really gone more slowly than we would like," McBride said, explaining a lawyer representing NBC met Monday with Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas and Assistant Atty. Gen. Harold Mosher.

Then a similar meeting in New York City Tuesday morning joined NBC attorneys and those for NETV. But progress is apparently stalemated temporarily.

"We certainly hope this matter can be settled amicably," without going to court, and "in the very near future for the benefit of both" networks, McBride said. NBC has still not released a formal statement of its position to the public.

Decision Expected

"I believe the commission will have a decision to make," regarding any agreement on logo use, he said. The panel concurred that its executive committee should work with Douglas's office.

Chairman Philip Heckman of Crete emphasized that when the imbroglio is resolved, "the less that we play some David and Goliath, the better," rather than "end up the dog in the manger growling at something as big as NBC."

McBride distributed to commissioners decals sporting the N logo. Kearney member James D. Johnson quipped they "may be a collector's item."

In regular business, the commission re-elected all 1975 officers for another one-year term: Chairman Heckman, Vice Chairman June Popken of Brady, and third executive committee member Alvin J. Gilmore of Omaha.

Authorities To Probe Policeman's Actions

Omaha (AP) — A policeman was under investigation Tuesday following an early morning incident near downtown Omaha while he was off duty.

Officer Raymond Mossey was questioned by detectives and the matter was referred to the city prosecutor's office for review.

Ted A. Pebley, 21, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, told investigators he was waiting for his sister in his auto in the parking lot of the Record Plastic Co. when a silver-colored auto pulled into the lot alongside his car.

Pebley said the driver, later identified as Mossey, got out and ordered Pebley to get out of his car. The man identified himself as a police officer.

Police identified two passengers in the officer's car as his brother, Rodney Mossey, 20, and the officer's wife, 27.

Pebley said he feared he might be assaulted so he backed his car up suddenly, knocking Mossey down, then sped forward and his car hit a utility pole. He was not injured.

Terry McMillan, 23, told detectives he witnessed the incident from across the street and saw and heard a shot fired by one of two men he saw get out of the silver auto.

Mossey told detectives his service revolver was under the driver's seat. All three of the Mosseys said no shot was fired.

Pebley said the silver auto left the lot at high speed. Mossey told detectives that persons in a brown car had harassed him earlier in the downtown area and he thought Pebley's brown auto was the one involved.

Mossey said he pulled into the parking lot to ask the other driver if he had been involved in the harassment.

Auto Safety Lectures Are Part Of Sentence

Santa Monica, Calif. (AP) — Pepperdine University Chancellor M. Norvel Young, who pleaded guilty of vehicular manslaughter, was ordered Tuesday to spend the next six months as a lecturer and researcher on traffic safety and the problems of the drinking driver.

The formal sentence imposed by Superior Court Judge Pearce Young calls for a year in jail, four years probation and a $2,000 fine. But the judge stayed the jail sentence until July 28 and ordered Young to take a six-month leave of absence from Pepperdine to work with the Safety Center at the University of Southern California.

On July 28, the judge will consider a supplemental probation report and decide whether Young must serve his time in jail or whether he can resume duties at Pepperdine.

As conditions of his probation, Young will not be allowed to drive a motor vehicle, consume alcoholic beverages, or enter places where alcohol is the chief item for sale.

Young, 59, was originally charged with two counts of manslaughter and drunken driving during a fiery crash last Sept. 18 that killed two women. One manslaughter count and the drunken driving count were dropped when he pleaded guilty to the other manslaughter charge in October.

A Lincoln Neb., woman, Christine Dahlquist, 81, was one of the women fatally injured in the crash. She died four days after the accident. The other victim was Beulah Harrison, 55, Claremont, Calif.

Voters At Broken Bow OK Swimming Pool Bonds

Lincoln Star Special

Broken Bow — In a special election here Tuesday, Broken Bow voters gave approval to a $200,000 bond issue for a new swimming pool.

Unofficial returns showed 503 votes for the proposal and 396 against, according to City Clerk James E. Peister.

The city official explained a matching grant of $150,000 has been awarded to Broken Bow from the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission to assist in the construction of the U-shpaed outside pool.

And with the approval of the pool issue Tuesday came donation of a 50-acre tract to the city for the site of the new pool and recreation park.

Leo L. Mellam of New York, native of Broken Bow and benefactor to his hometown, earlier told officials he would give the site for the park if the voters approved the bond issue.

The site is located on the former Melham homestead adjacent to the Jennie M. Melham Memorial edical Center.

Peister said city officials hope for an August or September completion of the new pool which will replace a 50-year-old pool.

In March, 1974, Broken Bow voters rejected a $770,000 bond issue to build a recreation center.

Misdemeanor Charges Land Youths In Jail

Kearney (AP) — Three Kearney youths were bound over to Buffalo County District Court Tuesday on felony charges of robbery, felonious assault and mayhem.

Gary Tatum, 19, Delbert Bickford, 22 and Dallas Denbo, whose age was not known, each were sentenced Tuesday to nine months in the county jail on misdemeanor charges of false imprisonment and contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Marty Roppel of Kearney testified at a preliminary hearing that he was held captive, robbed and assaulted last Jan. 7.

Robert Mackey

Mackey 'Perplexed' By Official Silence

By United Press International

Robert Mackey, recently ousted as executive director of the Nebraska Indian Commission, said Tuesday the "long silence by the attorney general's office regarding the crucial concerns of Nebraska Indians is both bewildering and perplexing."

This is so, he said in a letter to Deputy Attorney General Gerald Vitamvas, "because an extremely serious situation exists by apparent improper and possibly illegal acts upon the Indian Commission and its executive director."

Mackey said these problems have been communicated to the governor and to the attorney general's office over a long period, "hoping for legal protection from what we identified as 'outside' interference, but there has been no apparent action on our behalf."

He added he could not understand the "mute position" of the attorney general's office regarding the allegations.

Mackey alleged there was lack of evidence to indicate the Omaha Indian Center held an official board of directors meeting to validate Mrs. Alfrieda Ware as its candidate to be presented to the governor for appointment to the Indian Commission.

In addition, he said, there was lack of evidence three names were presented by the Omaha Indian Center to the governor for selection for appointment to the commission.

Mackey said the governor apparently ignored the panel of three names submitted to him last September for consideration and apparently chose a church-funded organization and honored its single appointee instead that of the state Indian agency.

He repeated a charge the commission called an illegal executive session on Jan. 10 during which an "apparent conspiracy resulted in my termination" with only seven of the 15 commission members voting.

Combination Of Emile, Ohlsson Brought Out Best Of Symphony

By MAX HOLLAND
Star Staff Writer

The enthusiasm and talent of conductor Robert Emile appears to be highly contagious.

In less than six months, he has transformed both the Lincoln Chamber and Symphony Orchestras into disciplined and earnest ensembles of high quality.

When the impeccable virtuosity of pianist Garrick Ohlsson was added to Dr. Emile's Symphony Orchestra, one had an evening of refreshing, and sometimes stunning, music-making.

The concert opened with the overture to Mozart's opera, "The Magic Flute." The ensemble exhibited at once the controlled playing that characterized the whole evening. However, Mozart at his most somber — and the overture to this perplexing opera is often dark and mysterious — needs clean and lucid treatment. In this respect the symphony was lacking. The texture was too thick and the strings were slightly ragged.

Chopin's Concerto No. 1 in E minor brought on Ohlsson, the award-winning pianist, to play with the orchestra. Not enough can be said about the playing of this man.

Ohlsson was the first American to win the Chopin International Piano Competition, an award he earned in 1970. The judges probably gave the award to Ohlsson because he plays Chopin's music as Chopin was reputed to have played it — cleanly, with great integrity and warmth. Ohlsson, correctly to my mind, does not play Chopin as if it were Liszt.

The orchestra provided steady support, but center stage rightly belonged to Ohlsson. There was unbroken purity in The rapid runs up and down the piano. More than once the tonal shades and range of dynamics that Ohlsson conjured from the piano were simply breathtaking. Many concert pianists can be described as playing effortlessly, but too often the result is a brilliant, but ultimately shallow, performance.

When Chopin's music is criticized, it is frequently for the shortcomings in thematic development. But it is a mistake to believe they are of any lesser caliber than, say, Beethoven's concertos. A pianist like Ohlsson shows Chopin had a perfect understanding of the piano.

The concert resumed after intermission with Prokofieff's Symphony No. 7 in four movements. This piece showed the orchestra in its best form of the evening. The orchestra showed itself capable of a wide range of dynamics and comfortable with Prokofieff's colorful orchestration.

They managed to project the strong sense of physical movement that is part of Prokofieff's music. The choir of brass and woodwinds played particularly well when Dr. Emile whipped the orchestra into a frenzy at the close of the second movement.

Juan Carlos Darting About

MADRID (AP) — Spanish King Juan Carlos has taken up darts, standby of British pubs, a spokesman for the royal household said Tuesday.

The king plays with friends at the Zarzuela Palace, the spokesman said.

Juan Carlos, second cousin to Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, played his first game five years ago while visiting England. He beat David Lawrence Edgar Balls, a London businessman who recently sent a darts set to the king to remind him of the game.

Rock Crushing Job Still Rolling Around

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

A rock crushing question prompted another round of county engineer versus county commissioners Tuesday during the board's morning and afternoon meetings.

After much haggling, the board, on a 2 to 1 vote, decided to reject the most recent rock crushing bids and negotiate a contract for crushing rock at the county-owned Rocca quarries. But just who will negotiate is still up in the air.

And Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton, who said he found himself between "crushed rock and a hard place," voted against rejecting the bids, saying he was "unhappy with the way the whole thing has been conducted."

"I don't think this has been an above-board operation," said Hamilton. By negotiating a price with the current highest bidder it's "going to give the appearance of collusion," Hamilton added.

Started Last Summer

The complicated problem of who should get the job of crushing rock at the county-owned quarries began this summer and has led to a law suit and two rounds of bidding for the job.

County Engineer Marv Nuernberger negotiated with one firm, Constructors Inc. of Lincoln, this summer for the crushing job. The contract was never approved by the commissioners and the public bidding process was not used.

Schwarck Quarries, Inc. filed a suit in Lancaster County District Court contending that the negotiated contract violated state bidding laws and that the $1.55 per ton price for crushed rock was excessive.

After a verbal agreement with the county attorney's office that the rock crushing job would be bid out, the company dismissed the suit.

First Bids Discarded

The first round of bidding was thrown out by the County Board on the technicality that the bids had not been advertised properly. In this set of bids, Schwarck quarries came in with a low bid of $1.64 a ton and Constructor's Inc. had $2.18 a ton.

The second bids, opened Monday, showed Schwarck with a low bid of $1.98 a ton, up 34 cents from its bid three weeks ago.

Throughout the haggling, Nuernberger has contended that negotiation, not bidding, is the best method to use for the rock crushing service, and Tuesday he asked the board to reject both bids and let him negotiate a lower price.

Nuernberger pointed out that the latest low bid will cost the taxpayers about $10,000 more than the low bid of three weeks ago.

Commissioner Hamilton wanted Nuernberger to agree to negotiate with both companies, not just Constructor's Inc.

"I'll negotiate with whom I want to negotiate with," Nuernberger replied.

"The question is," said Nuernberger, "is it in the public interest to pay $1.98 a ton when we could have had $1.55? We seem to be foregetting that around here."

At the suggestion of Mike Heavican, deputy county attorney, the board left the motion about who will do the negotiation open, so commissioners themselves could get involved.

"I want a guarantee that it will be in an open manner," said Hamilton.

Chinese Circus Predicted

"What they are going to have is a Chinese circus," said Nuernberger after the vote. Negotiations should be with just one company, he contended and said it was logical to assume he would have negotiated with Constructor's Inc. not Schwarck Quarries.

Nuernberger said he knew what kind of equipment Constructor's has, and what kind of job they will do. Schwarck's preformance record on another job last year "was quite poor," Nuernberger said.

Nuernberger also denied there was any collusion involved in his decision to negotiate a contract with Constructors Inc.

"Collusion . . . that turns my stomach. An elected official has the duty to do everything in the public interest, and the public is particularly concerned about exhorbitant prices," he said after the board meeting.

"I've always been satisfied that the negotiated price was a fair price," he said.

In other action the board approved the new energy and transportation portions of the Goals and Policies document.

Council Grants Extra Money For 4th Municipal Courtroom

The City Council appropriated an extra $8,146 to the Municipal Court Monday night to cover additional costs for a fourth courtroom.

The council had budgeted $39,769 in August, but Presiding Municipal Judge Donald Grant wrote in a letter to the council that more money was needed.

Grant noted that the original estimate was based upon what officials thought it would cost to remodel the city's personnel office into that fourth courtroom. Instead, the City-County Building Commission changed the plans and ordered an existing courtroom divided into two courtrooms.

Total cost of the remodeling will be $47,915, Grant said. Since most of the money already has been budgeted, only $8,146 was needed

The additional money will pay for such things as carpeting ($3,500), architect's fee ($3,200), new wall ($500), judges' chair ($400), four counsel chairs ($600), flags ($45) and a blackboard ($175).

In other business the council:

Fred Harris Backers Surprised At Third Place Showing In Iowa

Nebraskans supporting Democratic presidential candidate Fred Harris said Tuesday they were surprised and pleased by his third place finish Jan. 19 in Iowa precinct caucuses.

Harris backers said the results were the first step in what Harris calls the "winnowing out" process which will lead to his victory at the national convention.

Sam Zelleski, Nebraska campaign treasurer for Harris, said most of the former Oklahoma senator's supporters in Nebraska expected him to do well in the Iowa caucuses "but not that well."

He added· "For a person whom the press has all but ignored up to this point in the campaign, it indicates Harris is a serious contender and already the national media are calling his finish a victory."

New Job Called Lifetime Chance

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — H. James Field Jr., state Republican chairman, says he will resign his post to become an associate director of the presidential personnel office at the White House.

Field, 27, described his new job as a "once-in-a-lifetime" opportunity.

He has headed the GOP state committee since last March at a salary of $20,000 a year. His new job will pay about $35,000 a year.

Ambulance Firms Ask Aid; County Can't Help

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln's two ambulance companies told the County Board Tuesday that they're losing money on every welfare ambulance run they make for county welfare patients. And, they said, they haven't been paid for any welfare-related calls since November.

Don Shurtleff of Shurtleff's Ambulance and Marty Miller of Eastern Ambulance asked the county commissioners if they could intervene on their behalf and help them get paid.

The problem, the County Board noted, is they don't have the authority to do anything about it. But, Chairman Bruce Hamilton said he would try anyway.

Shurtleff said the ambulance companies only are paid about 80% of what it costs to make an actual run. Although the costs vary depending on the service required, the companies charge a base price of $41 to go out on a call.

More Red Tape

The companies haven't been paid for welfare-related runs since the state took over the billing system Nov. 1. The companies formerly were reimbursed by the county welfare department, Shurtleff said, but the additional red tape involved apparently has caused the delay in being paid. He said he still doesn't know when the checks will be mailed.

Hamilton said, "I just don't understand the concept of why anybody who provides service for welfare clients should be paid less. I guess it's a national problem."

Miller noted that an advisory group, the Emergency Medical Services (EMS) Committee, is studying the role of the ambulance firms and considering whether any of their duties should be switched to the Fire Department.

Agreeing that the two companies have financial problems, Hamilton figured that something should be done to help the private companies because if the "city takes it over, they'll probably find it costs them three times as much."

The ambulance companies are required to answer every call, under city law. Shurtleff pointed out that in some states the ambulance firms refuse to transport people unless they are paid in advance.

Hamilton said he could understand the companies' frustration.

"Here we have a law which requires them to answer a call, yet there's no law requiring that they be paid."

Talks Unsuccessful

Miller said they have tried, unsuccessfully, to talk to state welfare officials about making the rates for welfare clients more equitable.

Hamilton said the situation "shows the powerlessness of our situation. Here we have some bureaucrat in Washington or Kansas City sitting in an office someplace setting the rates."

Hamilton said he would talk to Mayor Helen Boosalis about the situation to find out how soon the EMS Committee will have recommendations. He also said he would talk to some state officials about speeding up the payment for welfare related ambulance runs.

Blank Told Auditor Of Fund Shortages

By GORDON WINTERS
Star KStaff Writer

It was Darrell Blank, now accused of embezzling, who told the State Auditor's Office of shortages in Lancaster County motor vehicle tax funds, an auditor testified Tuesday.

Francis Walls said Blank, whom he described as visibly nervous, told him of the shortage on Sept. 9, 1974, over a cup of coffee in a downtown restaurant.

Walls, deputy state auditor, said Blank had arranged the meeting by telephone. He told Walls he "was being asked to come up with $5,400," Walls said.

Walls said County Treasurer Frank Golden later told him that he had known of the shortages since May 1974. Others in the office told Walls they had known of the shortages since July, Walls said.

Walls said Blank told him he had never taken a cent from his office and that the shortages dated back years. He said Blank also produced two "debit memos" or IOU's, for $2,450 and $2,950, he said were given him in 1970 when money was borrowed from his division to make up a shortage in the real estate division of the county treasurer's office.

An audit conducted by state auditors after Blank's revelation showed that a total of $7,407 was missing, according to testimony from John Nealon of the State Auditor's Office.

Of that amount, the disappearance of $3,160 was linked to a July 1974 "hold slip" for licenses supposedly issued to Abel Construction, but which apparently never were, according to Nealon's testimony

"Hold slips," according to the testimony of Mrs. Bonnie Anderson, county treasurer administrative aide, are often used when a company is seeking licenses for a fleet of vehicles.

She said the hold slips are recorded as cash and held until the tax on the licenses is paid.

The disappearance of $1,894 was linked to 87 vehicle registrations issued in July 1974, Nealon said.

Although the licenses apparently were issued and money apparently accepted, the registrations were not recorded in the treasurer's office, Nealon said. Copies were found in the county assessor's office.

Of the total missing amount of $7,407, auditors have been unable to determine when $2,352 disappeared, Nealon said. He said it could have been missing for years.

And Nealon said the audit conducted in late 1974 revealed that shortages in the motor vehicle division were being systematically hidden.

Nealon said auditors found that cash taken in payment for motor vehicle taxes on one day would be recorded as having been received earlier.

"You could always stay in balance that way," Nealon testified.

He served as association president in 1950.

Dr. Oppice was a native of Marshalltown, Iowa, but spent most of his life in Lincolnwood, Ill., a suburb of Chicago. He was a professor of dentistry at Loyola University in Chicago for 26 years.

Dr. Oppice and his widow, Loucille, moved to Omaha last October. Services and burial will be in Chicago Wednesday.

Charges Filed Against Youth In Fatal Crash

A misdemeanor charge of motor vehicle homicide has been filed in Municipal Court against a Lincoln man.

Michael Zwiebel, 19, 4600 Briarpark Dr., was charged in connection with the Thursday night death of Steven D. Wurst, 21, 1724 Pinedale Ave.

Both Zwiebel, who was driving a pickup truck, and Wurst, who was riding a bicycle, were traveling west on A St. near 77th St. about 10:40 p.m. when they collided.

Dept. Lancaster Co. Atty. Rod Rehm says the charge is punishable by a fine of up to $500, six months in county jail, or both.

NETV-NBC Logo Dispute May Be Settled Next Week

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Nebraska Educational Television Network General Manager Jack McBride said Tuesday he hopes lawyers can "settle within the next week" the rights controversy with the National Broadcasting Co. over look-alike logos, or identification symbols.

"Otherwise," McBride told the NETV Commission, "the (Nebraska) attorney general will have to pursue legal remedies to protect" the public TV network "and the people of Nebraska."

Earlier Tuesday, The Lincoln Star learned that NETV was negotiating to divest itself of the "N" logo rights, awarding them to NBC if the commercial network would compensate NETV either monetarily or by donating equipment.

An NETV official told The Star that there are two obvious solutions: coexistence of the two logos, or NETV relinquishing its N. Regarding the latter, "equipment as a possible source of compensation is being discussed," the official said.

Color Mobile Unit

It's "well known," the official said, that NETV "for three years has been trying to get a color television mobile unit." The Legislature three years ago appropriatated $160,000 in state matching funds, but the federal government hasn't yet honored the award.

Since NBC is a subsidiary of RCA Corp., which makes TV equipment, one source said privately that would provide "additional motivation" for an equipment trade-off.

The original source ruled out monetary compensation by NBC as acceptable, since any sum would go into the state general fund and thereby doubtless reduce the NETV Network appropriation.

National Publicity

At the NETV Commission meeting, McBride noted the Logo controversy has generated nationwide publicity and good humor. He displayed a two-inch thick clip file, but declared there is a "serious aspect."

NETV's position is that "the people of Nebraska have property rights, ownership rights" to the logo, since it was developed by NETV staff who are paid by public money. Moreover, he said NETV established "prior usage" of the NBC carbon-copy logo not only in Nebraska but via Central Education Network stations broadcasting NETV programs.

Yet "The negotiations (with NBC) have really gone more slowly than we would like," McBride said, explaining a lawyer representing NBC met Monday with Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas and Assistant Atty. Gen. Harold Mosher.

Then a similar meeting in New York City Tuesday morning joined NBC attorneys and those for NETV. But progress is apparently stalemated temporarily.

"We certainly hope this matter can be settled amicably," without going to court, and "in the very near future for the benefit of both" networks, McBride said. NBC has still not released a formal statement of its position to the public.

Decision Expected

"I believe the commission will have a decision to make," regarding any agreement on logo use, he said. The panel concurred that its executive committee should work with Douglas's office.

Chairman Philip Heckman of Crete emphasized that when the imbroglio is resolved, "the less that we play some David and Goliath, the better," rather than "end up the dog in the manger growling at something as big as NBC."

McBride distributed to commissioners decals sporting the N logo. Kearney member James D. Johnson quipped they "may be a collector's item."

In regular business, the commission re-elected all 1975 officers for another one-year term: Chairman Heckman, Vice Chairman June Popken of Brady, and third executive committee member Alvin J. Gilmore of Omaha.

Authorities To Probe Policeman's Actions

Omaha (AP) — A policeman was under investigation Tuesday following an early morning incident near downtown Omaha while he was off duty.

Officer Raymond Mossey was questioned by detectives and the matter was referred to the city prosecutor's office for review.

Ted A. Pebley, 21, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, told investigators he was waiting for his sister in his auto in the parking lot of the Record Plastic Co. when a silver-colored auto pulled into the lot alongside his car.

Pebley said the driver, later identified as Mossey, got out and ordered Pebley to get out of his car. The man identified himself as a police officer.

Police identified two passengers in the officer's car as his brother, Rodney Mossey, 20, and the officer's wife, 27.

Pebley said he feared he might be assaulted so he backed his car up suddenly, knocking Mossey down, then sped forward and his car hit a utility pole. He was not injured.

Terry McMillan, 23, told detectives he witnessed the incident from across the street and saw and heard a shot fired by one of two men he saw get out of the silver auto.

Mossey told detectives his service revolver was under the driver's seat. All three of the Mosseys said no shot was fired.

Pebley said the silver auto left the lot at high speed. Mossey told detectives that persons in a brown car had harassed him earlier in the downtown area and he thought Pebley's brown auto was the one involved.

Mossey said he pulled into the parking lot to ask the other driver if he had been involved in the harassment.

Auto Safety Lectures Are Part Of Sentence

Santa Monica, Calif. (AP) — Pepperdine University Chancellor M. Norvel Young, who pleaded guilty of vehicular manslaughter, was ordered Tuesday to spend the next six months as a lecturer and researcher on traffic safety and the problems of the drinking driver.

The formal sentence imposed by Superior Court Judge Pearce Young calls for a year in jail, four years probation and a $2,000 fine. But the judge stayed the jail sentence until July 28 and ordered Young to take a six-month leave of absence from Pepperdine to work with the Safety Center at the University of Southern California.

On July 28, the judge will consider a supplemental probation report and decide whether Young must serve his time in jail or whether he can resume duties at Pepperdine.

As conditions of his probation, Young will not be allowed to drive a motor vehicle, consume alcoholic beverages, or enter places where alcohol is the chief item for sale.

Young, 59, was originally charged with two counts of manslaughter and drunken driving during a fiery crash last Sept. 18 that killed two women. One manslaughter count and the drunken driving count were dropped when he pleaded guilty to the other manslaughter charge in October.

A Lincoln Neb., woman, Christine Dahlquist, 81, was one of the women fatally injured in the crash. She died four days after the accident. The other victim was Beulah Harrison, 55, Claremont, Calif.

Voters At Broken Bow OK Swimming Pool Bonds

Lincoln Star Special

Broken Bow — In a special election here Tuesday. Broken Bow voters gave approval to a $200.000 bond issue for a new swimming pool.

Unofficial returns showed 503 votes for the proposal and 396 against, according to City Clerk James E. Peister

The city official explained a matching grant of $150.000 has been awarded to Broken Bow from the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission to assist in the construction of the U-shpaed outside pool

And with the approval of the pool issue Tuesday came donation of a 50-acre tract to the city for the site of the new pool and recreation park.

Leo L. Mellam of New York, native of Broken Bow and benefactor to his hometown, earlier told officials he would give the site for the park if the voters approved the bond issue.

The site is located on the former Melham homestead adjacent to the Jennie M. Melham Memorial edical Center.

Peister said city officials hope for an August or September completion of the new pool which will replace a 50-year-old pool.

In March. 1974. Broken Bow voters rejected a $770.000 bond issue to build a recreation center.

Misdemeanor Charges Land Youths In Jail

Kearney (AP) — Three Kearney youths were bound over to Buffalo County District Court Tuesday on felony charges of robbery, felonious assault and mayhem

Gary Tatum, 19, Delbert Bickford, 22 and Dallas Denbo, whose age was not known, each were sentenced Tuesday to nine months in the county jail on misdemeanor charges of false imprisonment and contributing to the delinquency of a minor

Marty Roppel of Kearney testified at a preliminary hearing that he was held captive, robbed and assaulted last Jan. 7.

Mackey 'Perplexed' By Official Silence

Robert Mackey

By United Press International

Robert Mackey, recently ousted as executive director of the Nebraska Indian Commission, said Tuesday the "long silence by the attorney general's office regarding the crucial concerns of Nebraska Indians is both bewildering and perplexing."

This is so, he said in a letter to Deputy Attorney General Gerald Vitamvas, "because an extremely serious situation exists by apparent improper and possibly illegal acts upon the Indian Commission and its executive director."

Mackey said these problems have been communicated to the governor and to the attorney general's office over a long period, "hoping for legal protection from what we identified as 'outside' interference, but there has been no apparent action on our behalf."

He added he could not understand the "mute position" of the attorney general's office regarding the allegations.

Mackey alleged there was lack of evidence to indicate the Omaha Indian Center held an official board of directors meeting to validate Mrs. Alfrieda Ware as its candidate to be presented to the governor for appointment to the Indian Commission.

In addition, he said, there was lack of evidence three names were presented by the Omaha Indian Center to the governor for selection for appointment to the commission.

Mackey said the governor apparently ignored the panel of three names submitted to him last September for consideration and apparently chose a church-funded organization and honored its single appointee instead that of the state Indian agency.

He repeated a charge the commission called an illegal executive session on Jan. 10 during which an "apparent conspiracy resulted in my termination" with only seven of the 15 commission members voting.

Combination Of Emile, Ohlsson Brought Out Best Of Symphony

By MAX HOLLAND
Star Staff Writer

The enthusiasm and talent of conductor Robert Emile appears to be highly contagious.

In less than six months, he has transformed both the Lincoln Chamber and Symphony Orchestras into disciplined and earnest ensembles of high quality.

When the impeccable virtuosity of pianist Garrick Ohlsson was added to Dr. Emile's Symphony Orchestra, one had an evening of refreshing, and sometimes stunning, music-making.

The concert opened with the overture to Mozart's opera, "The Magic Flute." The ensemble exhibited at once the controlled playing that characterized the whole evening. However, Mozart at his most somber — and the overture to this perplexing opera is often dark and mysterious — needs clean and lucid treatment. In this respect the symphony was lacking. The texture was too thick and the strings were slightly ragged.

Chopin's Concerto No. 1 in E minor brought on Ohlsson, the award-winning pianist, to play with the orchestra. Not enough can be said about the playing of this man.

Ohlsson was the first American to win the Chopin International Piano Competition, an award he earned in 1970. The judges probably gave the award to Ohlsson because he plays Chopin's music as Chopin was reputed to have played it — cleanly, with great integrity and warmth. Ohlsson, correctly to my mind, does not play Chopin as if it were Liszt.

The orchestra provided steady support, but center stage rightly belonged to Ohlsson. There was unbroken purity in The rapid runs up and down the piano. More than once the tonal shades and range of dynamics that Ohlsson conjured from the piano were simply breathtaking. Many concert pianists can be described as playing effortlessly, but too often the result is a brilliant, but ultimately shallow, performance.

When Chopin's music is criticized, it is frequently for the shortcomings in thematic development. But it is a mistake to believe they are of any lesser caliber than, say, Beethoven's concertos. A pianist like Ohlsson shows Chopin had a perfect understanding of the piano.

The concert resumed after intermission with Prokofieff's Symphony No. 7 in four movements. This piece showed the orchestra in its best form of the evening. The orchestra showed itself capable of a wide range of dynamics and comfortable with Prokofieff's colorful orchestration.

They managed to project the strong sense of physical movement that is part of Prokofieff's music. The choir of brass and woodwinds played particularly well when Dr. Emile whipped the orchestra into a frenzy at the close of the second movement.

Juan Carlos Darting About

MADRID (AP) — Spanish King Juan Carlos has taken up darts, standby of British pubs, a spokesman for the royal household said Tuesday.

The king plays with friends at the Zarzuela Palace, the spokesman said.

Profit Taking Pushes Market Into Small Dip

New York (AP) — Persistent profit taking forces took control near the close of an erratic session in the stock market Tuesday and pushed prices into a modest decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks told the story of the day's on-again, off-again pattern: down 4 at the outset, up 6 by mid-afternoon, and off 3.70 at 957.81 at the close.

Losers held a slight over-all edge on gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume remained heavy at 32.07 million shares, against 34.47 on Monday.

Turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including activity in those stocks on other markets around the country, totaled 36.89 million shares.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost .61 to 99.07, and the NYSE's composite index off .29 at 52.55.

Analysts did note a little disappointment over the U.S. trade figures from the Commerce Department, which showed exports continuing to outstrip imports, but by the smallest margin in eight months.

—JUST ADD LOVE! ©1973
by ANN CROWLEY

My enthusiasm for the world of food is not confined to the science of nutrition which is my profession.

In my column each week, I will touch on the history of a particular food and mention it's nutritive content. Also, I will include a favorite receipe of mine using the food of the week.

Gift of food has traditionally been used as expression of love — in ancient times as a sacrifice to the gods, in modern times as a gift to those we love. As a mother, I know that preparation of food for my family is an act of love.

And so I know that the one ingredient in any receipe I give you which I cannot provide is that gift of love you add in preparing it for your family.

Therefore, I will start each column with the reminder to you that you "Just Add Love." Ann Crowley,

Grain Futures Prices Higher

Chicago (AP) — Grain futures, with good support from commercial interests, gained from 2½ to 6½ cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

The biggest gainer on the floor was wheat, which attracted a good demand on a buildup of P.L. 480 export business to needy countries in Asia and Afria. New crop, corn was up 4½ cents, while oats gained nearly 3 and soybeans 2½. Soybean meal rose by $2 a ton and soybean oil advanced nearly ½ cent a pound, or 50 points.

Gold futures, also lightly, traded, closed virtually unchanged in a featureless market.

A X Y D L B A A X R

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Wednesday, January 28, 1976

The "showmanship" sign of the zodiac is Leo. These natives can dress up an idea, can bally-hoo and create intense interest in what appears outwardly to be an ordinary concept. Leo is the center, the Sun, a bright light which attracts hangers-on. Leo is love and creativity, excess and extravagance. Nothing is halfway here — Leo is the show and the lights are bright. This is not everyone's cup of tea and Leo would not want to be for every person. How does this fit your Leo?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on standing, prestige, ambition, ability to make room for yourself at a more elevated position. You can gain wider recognition, get better display for product and more of an audience for ideas, concepts. Finish with the old and prepare for new project, assignment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good Moon aspect coincides now with long-range plan, language, special study and spiritual experience. Study Aries message for valid hint. Burden you have been carrying is about to be removed. Know it and continue courageous stand.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Concern with hidden or occult affairs could dominate. Taxes, leases, specific rate of payment — these may be part of concerns. Leo, Aquarius individuals figure prominently. Dig deep enough and you might strike pay dirt.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Lie low, play waiting game, detect subtle signals others are throwing your way. Means the obvious is not always so easy to discern. You'll learn lessons and discover who is your "true partner." Accept facts as they exist.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Diversify. Experiment. Break free from emotional restrictions. Show that you are capable of laughing at your own foibles. Your popularity is on upswing — especially if you display sense of humor. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals play key roles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Good lunar aspect corresponds now to time when creative juices flow when you effect significant changes and have better communications with children. Member of opposite sex is very much in picture. You will revise some plans in order to build on more solid base.

LIBRA (Sept. 22-Oct. 22): Be ready for change, analysis of recent actions, questions and answers. Gemini, Virgo individuals figure prominently. Accent on solidity, conservative responses and reactions. Older family members pull strings — and this could cause a tightening of your financial belt. Leave speculation to others. Stick to what is known, especially where security is concerned.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on ideas, relatives, close neighbors, calls and significant messages. Home, domestic areas are emphasized. Taurus, Libra individuals figure prominently. What seems a threat may merely be a humorous attempt to grab your attention.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on money, personal possessions, ability to protect valuables and to collect needed material. Avoid seeing through eyes of idealism. Measure of practicality is necessary. Pisces, Virgo and Scorpio persons could be in picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lunar cycle is such that you feel pulse of public. Your timing improves; you are able to be where you should be to obtain greatest benefits, opportunities. Another Capricorn plays prominent role. Your financial picture is brighter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): What occurs behind the scenes may be more important than initially perceived. It is best to finish rather than begin, better to implore through correspondence rather than through direct contact. You'll understand!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on friends, romantic inclinations, changes, rewards for professional efforts. Leo, Aquarius individuals are in picture. Specifically, you make contact with one who shakes you, makes you feel annoyed — and alive.

IF JAN. 28 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are going through cycle which tests, challenges and forces you to face realities. January and October are key months in 1976. Leo and Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. You are creative, namic and in love with love. Your wounds will heal. Know it and keep the faith.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Profit Taking Pushes Market Into Small Dip

New York (AP) — Persistent profit taking forces took control near the close of an erratic session in the stock market Tuesday and pushed prices into a modest decline

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks told the story of the day's on-again, off-again pattern down 4 at the outset, up 6 by mid-afternoon, and off 3 70 at 957 81 at the close

Losers held a slight over-all edge on gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues

Big Board volume remained heavy at 32 07 million shares, against 34 47 on Monday

Turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including activity in those stocks on other markets around the country totaled 36 89 million shares

Standard & Poor s 500-stock index lost 61 to 99 07, and the NYSE's composite index off 29 at 52 55

Analysts did note a little disappointment over the U S trade figures from the Commerce Department, which showed exports continuing to outstrip imports, but by the smallest margin in eight months

Grain Futures Prices Higher

Chicago (AP) — Grain futures, with good support from commercial interests, gained from 2½ to 6½ cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

The biggest gainer on the floor was wheat, which attracted a good demand on a buildup of P L 480 export business to needy countries in Asia and Afria. New crop, corn was up 4½ cents, while oats gained nearly 3 and soybeans 2½. Soybean meal rose by $2 a ton and soybean oil advanced nearly ½ cent a pound, or 50 points.

Gold futures, also lightly, traded, closed virtually unchanged in a featureless market.

-JUST ADD LOVE! © 1973

by ANN CROWLEY

My enthusiasm for the world of food is not confined to the science of nutrition which is my profession.

In my column each week, I will touch on the history of a particular food and mention it's nutritive content. Also, I will include a favorite receipe of mine using the food of the week.

Gift of food has traditionally been used as expression of love — in ancient times as a sacrifice to the gods. In modern times as a gift to those we love. As a mother, I know that preparation of food for my family is an act of love.

And so I know that the one ingredient in any receipe I give you which I cannot provide is that gift of love you add in preparing it for your family.

Therefore, I will start each column with the reminder to you that you "Just Add Love." Send your questions comments or suggestions to Ann Crowley,

Class C

1—Friend (11-0)	6—Laurel (12-2)
2—Wood River (12-0)	7—Battle Creek (11-0)
3—Imperial (10-0)	8—North Platte SP (11-1)
4—O. Holy Name (8-3)	9—Pleasanton (12-0)
5—Bassett (11-1)	10—Howells (11-1)

Comment — Friend returns to No. 1 perch after Wood River struggled to four-point win over Ravenna. Imperial earns two-place promotion for eight-point win over North Platte St. Pat's. Laurel is new and Howells returns. Arnold (11-1) and Southeast Consolidated (8-0) are still waiting.

Class D

1—Nelson (11-0)	6—Ruskin (11-0)
2—Sterling (8-1)	7—Trenton (9-0)
3—Shickley (13-2)	8—Adams (10-2)
4—Wolbach (13-0)	9—Wilcox (7-2)
5—Bartley (10-1)	10—Falls City SH (11-2)

Comment — Defending state champion Shickley is making its move. The Longhorns lassoed 11-time winner Fairmont by 16 points for the Pioneer Conference Tournament championship. The repeat lopsided loss knocked Fairmont from the top 10. Falls City Sacred Heart profits from the exit.

Without Big Gun, Shickley Fires Up

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Too often, it seems, Class D basketball players think they should be astronomical scorers to prove their individual worth.

Shickley coach Dick Ideus doesn't think in those terms.

"I don't think it's necessary," he says. "I'd much rather have five players averaging in double figures than one or two averaging between 25 and 30."

Ideus proved his point last winter when Shickley marched to the state Class D championship. Bill Anderson was the team leader. He averaged only 14 points.

But his overall play was impressive enough to earn him a spot on the South roster for the Nebraska Coaches Association All-Star Basketball Game.

Anderson's success drove home a valuable point — a Class D player doesn't need the big point totals for recognition.

"We emphasize a total game," says Ideus, whose team has won 11 straight games to advance to the No. 3 spot in the Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star Class D ratings.

Lichti Leader

"We're getting the same type of balance this year," he adds. "I'd put Mike Lichti in about the same class as Anderson. He's only averaging 13.5 points a game, but he gives 110%. I've never seen him loaf yet in a basketball game."

Lichti is the only returning starter from last year's state championship crew. The 5-9 senior guard was an all-state halfback in football.

Steve Johnson, another senior guard, is leading Shickley scorers with a 15.1 average. The front line consists of forwards Rex Kennel (10.0 average) and Mark Krause (8.8) and center Jeff Row (8.3).

"Right after last year's state championship, these guys mentioned they wanted to be as good this year," notes Ideus. "They had scrimmaged against last year's team and took their lumps. It helped them mature. They realized what it took to grow up."

Still, Ideus never envisioned such wholesale early-season success.

"I felt at the beginning of the year that it would be halfway through the season before we put everything together," he admits.

Three Tourneys

"But we won the Wesleyan holiday tournament without two of our starters, won the Deshler tournament without much trouble and won the Pioneer tournament in pretty good fashion," Ideus says. "You put a string like that together and you're bound to gain confidence."

Shickley was 2-2 early, having lost to Class C Sutton by two points and to Class D leader Nelson by 21.

"We've come a long way since then," Ideus insists. "We're hoping to get another chance at Nelson in the regional. We know we can play a lot better than we did."

If Shickley continues to strive for balance, Ideus is confident the Longhorns can be as powerful as any Class D team.

"We're not looking for 30-point individual games," he says. "We're looking for consistency . . . from everyone."

Hastings Surprises Doane With 87-72 Win

By KEN HAMBLETON
State College Writer

Hastings — Kert McKeone scored 29 points and sparked the Hastings Broncos to a surprising 87-72 win over the Doane Tigers Tuesday night at Kiewit Gymnasium in a Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference game.

The Broncos, now 3-0 in the NIAC, had to play most of the game without 6-8 sophomore Paul Bergman, who ran into early foul trouble. But McKeone's hot shooting (14 of 24 field goals for the game) and a tenacious man-to-man defense kept the win for the Broncos.

Bergman, averaging 16.7 points per game and the leading field goal shooter in the state with a 60 per cent average, scored nine points in the first nine minutes of the game but went to the bench with three fouls at 10:10 in the first half.

Hastings didn't suffer much though, as reserve center Jack Wesolowski and forward Pat Hodges kept control of the boards for the Broncos.

The Tigers, now 2-1 in NIAC, hit just 12 of 41 field goals in the first half and 19 of 41 in the second half.

Hastings outrebounded Doane 26-20 in the first half and 46-35 for the game, with McKeone accounting for 12 caroms.

The Broncos, holding a 40-32 halftime edge, watched their lead slip away early in the second half when Randy Wenz and Mark Kinney hit two buckets each and Frank Hogan scored on a layup to tie the score at 48-48 with 13:07 left.

But McKeone went on a rampage of his own and hit five of seven field goals in the first 10 minutes of the second half for the Broncos to help Hastings regain the lead.

The Broncos stretched a four-point margin with 8:29 left to 71-62 when forward Rick Berkshire and Wesolowski combined for three fast breaks.

Then leading 75-68 with 2:08 left, Hastings went into a stall and the frustrated Tigers committed six fouls in the final minute and a half with guard Dan Hollatz connecting on four one-and-one free throw situations to ice the game.

Hollatz finished the game with 14 points while Bergman tallied 12 and Wesolowski nine. Wenz and Joe Wharton shared scoring honors for the Tigers with 19 points each. Wharton, who is the third leading scorer in the state, hit just seven of 21 field goal attempts.

"This was about an average game for McKeone," said Hastings coach Lynn Farrell. "We kind of had to change forces in the middle of the game when Bergman got into foul trouble but Wesolowski really came through for us."

"Our defense really slowed Doane down and we were able to rotate our coverage on Wharton," Farrell said. "I think that made the difference."

"We really took a poor choice of shots and I don't think we played together as a team," Doane coach Bob Erickson said. "McKeone really had a good night and about the only thing we could have done to him would've have been to lock him in the dressing room."

The Broncos, now 12-5 overall, will host Concordia Friday night while Doane will entertain Nebraska Wesleyan Saturday in NAIC contests.

Ashland, Wahoo Win

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Firth — Defense was about as popular as a whistle-happy referee here Tuesday night in the Southern Division Capitol Conference basketball tournament at Norris High School.

Offense was the name of the game as Class B's eighth-rated Ashland outlasted Centennial, 77-75, while fourth-rated Wahoo whipped Norris, 85-64.

Senior Wayne Harpin's 15-foot jump shot with two seconds remaining boosted Ashland to its tenth win in 11 games in the first game of the evening.

Senior Jerry Divis scored 32 points and junior Tim Shanahan added 25 to power Wahoo to its 11th win in 12 games in the nightcap.

Divis, a 5-8 guard, showed more moves than a belly dancer, hitting 15 field goals on a wide assortment of driving layins and medium-to-long-range jump shots.

Such variety, however, comes naturally to him. He transferred to Wahoo his freshman year after growing up in North Lake, Ill., a Chicago suburb.

"I base my entire basketball background on playing junior high basketball in Illinois," Divis said.

"When I was in seventh grade, we played 76 games and when I was in eighth grade, we played 56 games," he noted. "Sometimes in YMCA and CYO basketball, we'd play two or three games in one day. I'd bring an orange to school and eat between games."

Divis has started for Wahoo since his sophomore season. "We're number four now," he said, "But I'm not going to be satisfied until we're number one. We'll get there, too."

Ashland almost blew its chance to advance to Thursday's Capitol tourney semifinals at Gretna. The Bluejays saw what looked like a comfortable 13-point second-half lead evaporate in a cool shooting fourth quarter.

Centennial tied the game at 75-all when sophomore Barry Leif hit two free throws with :40 remaining.

The Broncos seemed in command when Ashland turned the ball over with :28 remaining. But Centennial guard Brett Borchers was whistled for travelling with :13 left as the Broncos tried to work the ball for a last-second shot.

"Centennial was amazing tonight, considering they were playing their fourth game in five nights," Ashland coach Byron Sutton observed. "I kept waiting for their legs to give out on them on their press, but it never happened. They just kept working and working."

Centennial coach Jim Swanson, whose team dropped its tenth decision in 15 games, said: "We were trying to go for the last-second shot and get someone set up in the middle. But it didn't quite work out that way. This is a young ball club and this same thing has been happening all season."

Included among Centennial's losses are one-point setbacks to Wahoo and Columbus Lakeview and two-point losses to Crete, Superior and Ashland.

Balanced scoring was the key for Ashland as all five starters finished in double figures. Charlie Marti led with 19 points, followed by Jeff Barnes with 14 Clay Anderson with 11 and Kent Jardine and Mike Glassburner with 10 apiece.

Leif led Centennial with 22 points. Doug Barth contributed 19 and Borchers finished with 18.

Tampa Bay Signs Alward

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Officials of the Tampa Bay Bucaneers, the newest franchise in the National Football League, have signed a former University of Nebraska standout, guard Tom Alward.

Alward, who went to the New York Jets in the sixth round of last year's draft but ended up in the defunct World Football League, signed as free agent.

He was one of the first three players to sign a Buccaneer contract. The first was former Denver Bronco standout Pete Duranko, and the other was another former WFL player, wide receiver Wayne Wheeler.

NWU Loses In Overtime

Fouls and a sagging offense plagued Nebraska Wesleyan Tuesday night as the Plainsmen dropped a 97-91 overtime decision to Dana at Taylor Gym in a Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference game.

Wesleyan owned a 44-38 halftime lead, and at times during the second half, led by as much as eight points.

But Dana, led by the double-figure scoring of five players, rallied and at 3:45, the Vikings took their first lead of the second half, 78-77, on a basket by Steve Thomsen.

Dana and NWU traded baskets for the next three minutes, but with :30 remaining, Bob Otto put in a layup to give the Plainsmen a four-point lead at 83-79. Dana cut that lead to two and with :11 left, forced a turnover and called time out.

With :03 remaining, Jerry Haas hit a layup to send the game into overtime. A half-court shot at the buzzer by Wesleyan sailed clear of the backboard.

The last three minutes of the regulation time were critical for Wesleyan as starting center Blake Butler and Angelo Lilly fouled out. Butler was NWU's leading rebounder, with eight, and Lilly high scorer for the Plainsmen with 20.

Dana hit three straight baskets at the start of the overtime period and Wesleyan couldn't make up the slack.

The Vikings, now 3-13 overall and 2-1 in NIAC play, hosts Midland Saturday.

Wesleyan, now 3-11 overall and 2-2 in the conference, travels to Doane this Saturday.

Unbeaten Spartans Whip Pius X

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

Pius X girls basketball coach Mike Schmidt has seen East High play better than it did Tuesday night in a 47-23 triumph over his Thunderbolts.

He's just glad the Spartans didn't do it against his squad.

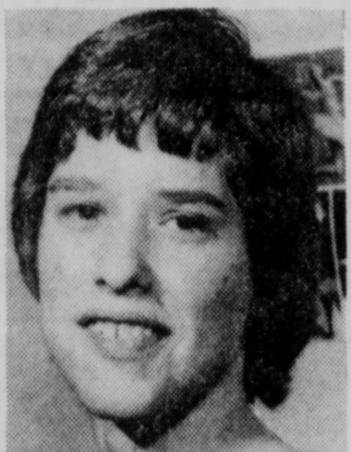
"They didn't do anything against us we weren't expecting," Schmidt said following his club's third loss against seven wins this season. "They just outhustled and outplayed us."

Habit For East

It's beginning to be a habit with East as coach Leona Penner's Spartans ran their record to a perfect 8-0 with the lopsided win.

And it didn't take long for the 650 spectators in attendance to see which team would take command.

Just seven seconds into the game, long enough for Barb Hart to get the opening tip relayed to sophomore Anna James under the basket, was all it took for East to get on the board.



Anne Heermann
Leading Scorer

The closest Pius was able to get for the rest of the game was a one point difference at 6-5 before East reeled off 11 straight points on four layups and three free throws to take a 17-5 advantage.

The Spartans maintained that margin to the half leading 25-13.

Within Nine

A second half comeback effort brought the Thunderbolts back within nine points at 27-18 with 2:55 left in the third quarter, but Pius was unable to cash in on another point for six minutes straight.

"When they cut that lead to nine points," Penner noted, "we got into a little trouble. I don't really know what happened except that maybe since we were leading 25-13 at the half, the girls forgot they had another half to play.

"It didn't take them long to remember after that," she added.

East scored 20 of the next 22 points, leading by a whopping 28 points, 47-19, when Penner cleared her bench with 5:18 remaining.

"We just hope to keep going after this," Penner said.

One Test

The one game this season the Spartans were tested in was the I-80 Holiday Tournament finals in which they beat Northeast by eight points, 36-28. They face the Rockets again Thursday in the East gym at 8 p.m.

"Some games you have trouble getting emotionally up for," Penner said. "Not Northeast, not this time. They played us entirely too close the last time. We have the incentive to play them this time."

"We didn't have Barb Hart in the first half the last time we played because of a sprained ankle and she played with sickness tonight," Penner said. "We hope she's better by Thursday. She played with a lot of determination tonight."

Hart scored just six points, but was instrumental on the boards while Anne Heermann led the Spartan scoring with 14 points.

Husker Gymnasts Lose Close One To Louisiana St.

Baton Rouge — In a gymnastics meet that was decided by the final event, the Louisiana State Tigers nipped Nebraska's Cornhuskers Tuesday night, 210.55-209.15.

Both squads had been ranked in the nation's top four ratings before the meet along with Indiana and No. 1 Iowa State, which will meet the Huskers here Saturday.

"Tried Too Hard"

"I think they tried too hard and worried about their performances," said Nebraska coach Francis Allen, who said that the Huskers missed some crucial spots in the meet. "We were flat in our performances," the coach said.

Gene Mackie, however, captured all-around honors with a score of 50.6.

Gerard Second

Gerard finished second in the high bar event, the final action of the night. LSU had led through all previous events by a total of .35.

But the meet was not decided on the merits of any individual, Allen said. "We didn't have the team to perform to become national champions," the coach said.

On Saturday, however, Nebraska will get a chance to display the talents of the country's top team — if it upsets Iowa State.

"If we beat Iowa State Saturday," Allen said, "there'll be chaos out at the national meet in April."

7-Footers Once Rare Breed

Basketball fans today, unless they're a little past middle age, probably don't remember the glory days at Oklahoma State, then known as Oklahoma A&M, coached by Henry "Hank" Iba.

Iba's name is spoken in the same breath as Adolph Rupp, Phog Allen, Ed Diddle, Slats Gill, Tony Hinkle, and John Wooden — all who became living legends in basketball long before they retired.

When Nebraska steps on the court at Gallagher Hall in Stillwater, Okla., tonight, the Cornhuskers will be treading where some great players performed and great games have been played in years past.

Iba, now retired and father of Husker assistant Moe Iba, coached Oklahoma State for 36 years. He won 741 games, lost 313 and became the first coach to win back-to-back NCAA championships (1945-1946).

In subsequent years, Rupp, Phil Woolpert, Ed Jucker and Wooden won titles two years in a row at Kentucky, San Francisco, Cincinnati and UCLA, respectively. Wooden, of course, topped them all with seven in a row and 10 of the last 12 before retiring after last season.

Iba coached the nation's first really standout 7-footer, Bob Kurland, who came along in the mid-1940s to pace Iba's two championship teams.

Players Grow Tall Today

A book on the history of college basketball, "All The Moves," by Neil D. Isaacs (J. B. Lippincott), points out that in 1937 Kansas' Phog Allen surveyed the entire collegiate basketball scene and found "at least thirty-three" players who were 6-5 or taller.

A check of just the 1975-76 Big Eight rosters shows there are 62 players in the league 6-5 or taller. In fact, there are 38 who are 6-7 or taller. Oklahoma State has the tallest one in 7-3 Lonnie Boeckman, a sophomore redshirt.

Unfortunately, for Cowboy coach Guy Strong, Boeckman isn't in the same class as Kurland. He has gotten into 12 games, scored just 17 points and is averaging 1.5 rebounds a game.

Boeckman, who is from Okeene, Okla., looks more like a pencil than a rugged major college center. Despite his work on weightlifting programs and a gain of some 30 pounds since coming to OSU, he still weighs just 210 pounds.

The Big Eight has one other 7-footer in Paul Mokeski, a 7-1 freshman at Kansas, whose weight is 230. He's starting for the Jayhawks and will be a factor for Coach Ted Owens' club in the years to come.

The breakdown in the number of other tall players in the conference shows one player at 6-11, three at 6-10, six at 6-9, eight at 6-8, 19 at 6-7, 13 at 6-6 and 11 at 6-5.

The best basketball players of the 1920s were 5-10, but by 1940 there were many well coordinated 6-3 and 6-4 players. Today, it's not uncommon to see an agile and speedy kid who is 6-9 or 6-10 — or even 7-feet.

Stillwater, Okla. — There will be a couple of Moes in Gallagher Hall Wednesday night for the Nebraska-Oklahoma State game — Moe Iba and Mo Mentum.

Nebraska coach Joe Cipriano knows he will have Husker assistant, Iba, on his side — although, ironically, Iba's father, Hank, became a legend while coaching Oklahoma State from 1930-70.

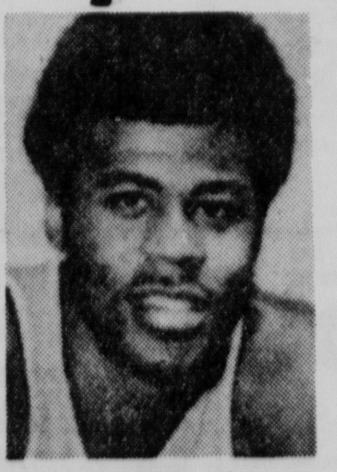
Although Moe Iba will be in the Nebraska corner from the outset, Cipriano can only hope his rampaging Cornhuskers can capture the magic created by momentum.

While they are approaching it from different angles, both teams appear to have a bundle of momentum going for them in the Big Eight conference battle set for 7:30 p.m.

Riding Crest

Nebraska is riding the crest of a seven-game winning streak, while coach Guy Strong's Cowboys are coming off an impressive win over last year's conference champion, Kansas.

"That win over Kansas has given Oklahoma State a lot of momentum that we really didn't need to be bothered with on top of everything else," Cipriano said of the Cowboys' 63-59 victory over the Jayhawks last Saturday. "It's always been tough enough for us to win down there. I can't remember anything but close games when we've played Oklahoma State."



Ronnie Daniel
Cowboy Leader

Last year's game in Stillwater backs up Cipriano's fears. The Huskers nipped OSU, 59-58.

While Oklahoma State's victory over Kansas got them back in the conference race at 1-2 and 7-8 overall, Nebraska has a healthy portion of momentum working after a narrow 66-64 win over Colorado in Boulder Saturday night.

The victory was the seventh straight for the Huskers, who have a perfect 3-0 conference mark and 12-4 overall record.

"We won four in a row last year and didn't finish any better than fourth in the conference," Cipriano cautions. "We can't afford to live on our laurels."

December Win

Included in the seven-game streak — the longest Nebraska winning string in 27 years — is a 56-49 win over Oklahoma State in the Big Eight Preseason Tournament last December in Kansas City.

"We played one of our best games of the season against them in the tournament," Cipriano said, "and still needed a clutch basket at the end to win."

The best thing Oklahoma State has going for it, is versatility, according to Cipriano.

Leading the Cowboys' attack is junior guard Ronnie Daniel. The 5-11, 160-pounder a high school all-American during his prep days in Louisville, Ky., is averaging 16.8 points a game.

Despite a shoulder injury, Daniel had a game high 19 points in the win over Kansas.

Third Year

Strong, in his third year at Oklahoma State, will open with 6-4 junior Fred Stevenson at the other guard post, Lafayette Threatt (6-8) and Olus Holder (6-6) at forwards and Dave Kragel (6-8) at center.

If Nebraska is able to top the Cowboys, the win would match the 1948-49 Nebraska team's eight-game streak. You have to go back 56 years, to the 1918 season to find a better string. The Huskers won 12 in a row that season.

Iowa State forward Charles (Bo) Peake will miss the rest of the season because of a knee injury. Peake will be in a cast for several weeks and will be replaced by Andrew Parker, a freshman, in the lineup.

Maryland coach Lefty Driesell said Lawrence Boston will replace freshman center Larry Gibson in the starting lineup against North Carolina State. Gibson strained a tendon in his knee Sunday.

The rookies of the Chicago Bulls called their own news conference to profess their support of coach Dick Motta and promise a brighter future for the sagging NBA team.

An attorney for Chet Walker plans to file a $2 million antitrust suit against the Bulls and the NBA unless the team trades its former star or "works things out to our satisfaction," the Chicago Daily News learned.

Coach Al Chamil let his temper get the best of him when his Illinois high basketball team was beaten by a last-second shot. The coach kicked the bench and was later treated for two broken toes.

Boston Celtics veteran Don Nelson, who has played five minutes in the last three games, said he plans to retire at the end of this season.

Football

Sixteen University of Kentucky football players and seven other students have been disciplined by the school as the result of a probe into drug use by the football team, school president Otis Singletary said.

Texas A&M cornerback Pat Thomas, an all-Southwest Conference performer last season, and two other former Aggie athletes have been charged with possession of misdemeanor amounts of marijuana.

The University of Oklahoma officially announced the hiring of Lucious Selmon, 1973 all-America noseguard and former player for Memphis in the World Football League, as an assistant coach.

X Rays of running back O.J. Simpson's hand revealed no broken bones. He was injured in the Pro Bowl game.

The 1976 Rose Bowl game, in which UCLA upset Ohio State, was seen by a record 71.85 million viewers, researchers for NBC announced.

Schnoor Overcomes Injury To Gain Prep Award

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Chuck Schnoor knows that helpless feeling.

Early last fall, the Minden quarterback suffered a broken ankle in a football game against eventual state Class B champion Lincoln Pius X.

He spent the rest of his senior season, watching the Whippets from the sidelines.

"It's a tough thing to do for a competitor like Chuck," says Minden basketball coach Don Bartek. "He didn't get his cast off until the week we started basketball practice."

It didn't take the 5-10 guard long to sharpen his game to where it was last winter when he started for Minden's Calss B state semifinalist club.

Riddles Dusters

Last Friday night, Schnoor's long-range gunnery riddled Holdrege's zone defense for 31 points in Minden's 71-70 upset win over the Dusters.

That effort earned Schnoor the Sunday Journal and Star Prep Player of the Week award.

"He's a sensational scorer, even though he's had some mighty fine defenses thrown against him," Bartek says. "He's averaging 23.8 points in our first 12 games.

"His lowest total was 17 against Pius X," adds Bartek. "Some people have dropped two men off on him. He's faced a box-and-one defense a couple times. But somehow he manages to get the job done. He's also an 82% free throw shooter. That helps, too."

Chuck Schnoor
Overcomes Injury

Schnoor's shooting has powered Minden to a 7-5 record.

Others who'll receive Player of the Week cards include:

Doug Berka, Lincoln Northeast — Junior guard hit 11 of 19 field goals and 8 of 8 free throws for career high 30 points in Rockets' win over rated Millard. The next night, he hit a game high 19 points in lopsided victory over Norfolk.

Bill Cicmanec and Tommy Clement, Ord — Cicmanec, a senior center, hit 21 points and collected 16 rebounds in second-ranked Class B team's 85-75 win over Albion. Clement, a 5-10 senior, contributed 22 points. In the six games Jeff Quinn has been absent from the Ord lineup because of a broken hand, Clement has scored 118 points and Cicmanec 74.

Brian Augustyn, Bellevue — This 6-4½ senior turned in what Benson coach Don Knauss described as "the best individual performance I've seen in the Metro." Augustyn scored a school record 37 points in Bellevue's 73-68 loss to once-beaten Benson. He moved from forward to guard in the fourth quarter and scored 20 of Bellevue's 31 points in the period. During the quarter, he hit 8 of 12 long-range field goal attempts and added four free throws. He finished 15 of 18 from the free throw line in Bellevue's near upset. The Chieftans trailed by only a point with 18 seconds remaining.

Barry Janzen, Henderson — His 15-foot jump shot with four seconds remaining gave team a 53-51 triumph over Sutton. He finished with 12 points.

Dick Wardyn, Litchfield — Senior center scored 28 points and grabbed 19 rebounds to spark team's 61-56 win over Arcadia.

Scott Poehling, Fremont Bergan — Senior forward, only 5-11, scored 29 points and had 14 rebounds, four blocked shots and two steals in 85-72 win over Omaha Paul VI. In a 68-51 loss against Columbus Scotus the next night, he scored 30 points, grabbed five rebounds, blocked three shots and had two steals.

Doug Reeh, Alliance — Scored a career high 23 points, including the winning basket with 1:40 remaining, in Bulldogs' 51-50 upset win over Scottsbluff.

Brent Ruiz, Wymore Southern — Senior center boosted Raiders to 10th win in 11 games by scoring 20 points and grabbing 22 rebounds in 66-59 win over defending state Class C champion Louisville. He's collected 87 rebounds in team's last four games.

Roger Behrends, Lodgepole — Six-three senior scored 73 points in team's three-game march to the Minuteman Conference tournament championship. His most prolific output was 35 points in a 70-52 semifinal win over Lyman.

Mark Wittler, Fairbury — Six-two senior notched a season high 26 points as Jeffs recorded a 66-64 win over York.

Steve Cranfill, Aurora — His 27 points helped Huskies win their ninth game in 12 starts, a 67-66 decision over 10th-rated Seward. The win moved Aurora into prime ratings contention.

Lincoln Shooting For Hockey Club

By MARK GORDON

Star Sports Writer

Lincoln's drive for a hockey team apparently rests with the owner of the Southwest Hockey League.

Pershing Auditorium manager Ike Hoig sent a letter on Jan. 20 to Ralph Englestadt in Las Vegas, the SWHL owner, explaining the city's position on hosting a SWHL team. So far, he hasn't received a response.

"I sent him a letter and a copy of an earlier story in the newspaper, but he hasn't responded yet," Hoig said Tuesday. "I've been keeping a file on the hockey situation and hopefully the guy will come to town and look at our facility."

Hoig said he has received several letters and calls from Lincolnites wanting a hockey team here. He added he even received an application from an Omaha hockey enthusiast applying for a coaching position should Lincoln receive a franchise.

Cooperation Promised

Hoig said David DeWald, public buildings manager for the auditorium in Amarillo, Tex., called and promised his cooperation in helping Lincoln obtain a team.

The SWHL has teams in Amarillo and El Paso in Texas, Billings and Butte in Montana and Albuquerque in New Mexico. Cities under consideration for teams next season include Lincoln, Bismark, N.D., Wichita, Kan. and San Antonio, Tex.

Each team would play 36 home games and 36 road games between October and April.

Each player would be registered in an accredited college or technical school and would be required to maintain passing grades in order to continue in the hockey program.

"When I wrote Mr. Englestadt, I pointed out that there are three schools in Lincoln, five or six small colleges within 20 miles of Lincoln and also two or three technical schools within 30 miles of Lincoln," he said. "With Omaha just 50 miles away, I'm sure there would be interest in Lincoln having a team."

Hoig said that if Lincoln were to receive an SWHL franchise and if it proved successful, Pershing would be more than willing to improve its ice facilities.

Not Expensive

"It wouldn't be that expensive to make changes if the thing started going good," he said. "I guess we could get a Zamboni (ice-making machine) used for $10,000 and we could probably put plexiglass around the rink for about $5,000.

"We'd like to make the ice better, but we've got to make sure the thing will be successful," he said.

Hoig noted that ice skating has been gaining followers in Lincoln this season and pointed out the relationship between ice skating and hockey.

Pershing has hosted ice skating for 37 days this season and Hoig expects more than 50 days of ice this season. That includes a two-week span in January when ice skating had to be canceled since painters were working in the building.

Pershing hosted just 30 days of ice skating last year.

Compatible Sports

"There's a definite relationship between ice skating and hockey," he said. "They're both compatible. Wherever you have a good skating program, you also have a successful hockey team.

"The hockey team makes it more profitable to have ice skating. The successful places have both ice and hockey," he said.

The major drawback with Pershing ice is that it is slightly smaller than a regulation rink. Pershing is 165 X 80 feet while regulations permit 200 X 85 feet.

"It's a shame when the building was built, it wasn't a little bigger," he said. "But what it lacks in size, I'm sure the town would make up for with enthusiasm."

Some trainers test their horses in short trial runs with other horses.

Fifty area trainers are already at Fonner. They include David Cummings, Larry Donlin, Mike Kemling, Orv Kemling, Ken Kirby, Roy Landis, John Martinez, Jim Moss, Marvin Johnson, C.W. Pierce, Larry Staroscik, Nial Tidball and Boyne Ferguson.

Turkey Permits Available

Nebraskans may begin applying for 1976 spring turkey shotgun permits on February 1, provided they did not have a shotgun permit last spring, according to the Game and Parks Commission.

The Commissioners set the spring turkey season at their last meeting on January 16, when they also decided opening dates for most of the rest of Nebraska's hunting seasons, and set application dates for turkey, deer, and antelope permits.

Applications for the spring shotgun turkey season will be accepted through February 17 from Nebraska residents who did not have a permit last spring. A February 25 drawing will be held in oversubscribed units, and remaining permits will go to Nebraskans applying between March 1 and 15. Archers may apply anytime after February 1.

Reagan Gets Dig At Ford

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Ronald Reagan began a campaign swing through the state Tuesday with a quip at his opponent in the Republican presidential race.

The former California governor quickly looked over the audience and said, "A few more things like that and they'll call me Jerry."

Reagan is opposing President Ford for the Republican nomination.

Shove Wasn't Enough To Win Assault Case

The mere act of shoving does not show intent to harm, said Judge Neal Dusenberry as he dismissed an assault charge against Bernard Patton, director of the Lincoln Humane Society, Tuesday morning.

The assault charge was brought against Patton by a former employe, Chris Hollers, after a Dec. 18, 1975 incident at the animal shelter, 2320 Park Blvd.

The evidence brought out during prosecution testimony — that Miss Hollers was fearful and that she was shoved by Patton — are not sufficient to support an assault charge, said Dusenberry as he sustained a defense motion to dismiss the charge.

Under state law, there must be evidence that Patton had intended to hurt Miss Hollers, Judge Dusenberry said.

During prosecution testimony, Miss Hollers said she went to the Humane Shelter the morning of Dec. 18 at the request of Patton.

Took Tape Recorder

She brought along a rented tape recorder, on the advice of Dr. Robert White, president of the Humane Society Board of Directors. She also asked another employe, Steven Gans, to be present with her during the talk with Patton.

Both Miss Hollers and Gans testified that Patton refused to hold a discussion if Miss Hollers used the tape recorder and asked Gans to return to work.

Both testified that after some initial conversation about the tape recorder, Miss Hollers and Patton returned to the outer door where Patton reached out to grab the tape recorder with one hand and shoved Miss Hollers through the doorway with the other hand.

Bit Tongue

Miss Hollers said she struck her knee and cheek on the door and bit her tongue.

After Patton pushed Miss Hollers through the door, he closed the door, turned and said "'I didn't touch her,' then started laughing," according to Gans.

Both Gans and Miss Hollers were fired following the incident.

In supporting the defense motion to dismiss the charge, Judge Dusenberry said Gans was at the shelter to work and had no business acting as "an arbitrator."

Hastings Surprises Doane With 87-72 Win

By KEN HAMBLETON
State College Writer

Hastings — Kert McKeone scored 29 points and sparked the Hastings Broncos to a surprising 87-72 win over the Doane Tigers Tuesday night at Kiewit Gymnasium in a Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference game.

The Broncos, now 3-0 in the NIAC, had to play most of the game without 6-8 sophomore Paul Bergman, who ran into early foul trouble. But McKeone's hot shooting (14 of 24 field goals for the game) and a tenacious man-to-man defense kept the win for the Broncos.

Bergman, averaging 16.7 points per game and the leading field goal shooter in the state with a 60 per cent average, scored nine points in the first nine minutes of the game but went to the bench with three fouls at 10:10 in the first half.

Hastings didn't suffer much though, as reserve center Jack Wesolowski and forward Pat Hodges kept control of the boards for the Broncos.

The Tigers, now 2-1 in NIAC, hit just 12 of 41 field goals in the first half and 19 of 41 in the second half.

Hastings outrebounded Doane 26-20 in the first half and 46-35 for the game, with McKeone accounting for 12 caroms.

The Broncos, holding a 40-32 halftime edge, watched their lead slip away early in the second half when Randy Wenz and Mark Kinney hit two buckets each and Frank Hogan scored on a layup to tie the score at 48-48 with 13:07 left.

But McKeone went on a rampage of his own and hit five of seven field goals in the first 10 minutes of the second half for the Broncos to help Hastings regain the lead.

The Broncos stretched a four-point margin with 8:29 left to 71-62 when forward Rick Berkshire and Wesolowski combined for three fast breaks.

Then leading 75-68 with 2:08 left, Hastings went into a stall and the frustrated Tigers committed six fouls in the final minute and a half with guard Dan Hollatz connecting on four one-and-one free throw situations to ice the game.

Hollatz finished the game with 14 points while Bergman tallied 12 and Wesolowski nine. Wenz and Joe Wharton shared scoring honors for the Tigers with 19 points each. Wharton, who is the third leading scorer in the state, hit just seven of 21 field goal attempts.

"This was about an average game for McKeone," said Hastings coach Lynn Farrell. "We kind of had to change forces in the middle of the game when Bergman got into foul trouble but Wesolowski really came through for us."

"Our defense really slowed Doane down and we were able to rotate our coverage on Wharton," Farrell said. "I think that made the difference."

"We really took a poor choice of shots and I don't think we played together as a team," Doane coach Bob Erickson said. "McKeone really had a good night and about the only thing we could have done to him would've have been to lock him in the dressing room."

The Broncos, now 12-5 overall, will host Concordia Friday night while Doane will entertain Nebraska Wesleyan Saturday in NAIC contests.

Ashland, Wahoo Win

THE LINCOLN STAR
Sports
Wednesday, January 28, 1976 29

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Firth — Defense was about as popular as a whistle-happy referee here Tuesday night in the Southern Division Capitol Conference basketball tournament at Norris High School.

Offense was the name of the game as Class B's eighth-rated Ashland outlasted Centennial, 77-75, while fourth-rated Wahoo whipped Norris, 85-64.

Senior Wayne Harpin's 15-foot jump shot with two seconds remaining boosted Ashland to its tenth win in 11 games in the first game of the evening.

Senior Jerry Divis scored 32 points and junior Tim Shanahan added 25 to power Wahoo to its 11th win in 12 games in the nightcap.

Divis, a 5-8 guard, showed more moves than a belly dancer, hitting 15 field goals on a wide assortment of driving layins and medium-to-long-range jump shots.

Such variety, however, comes naturally to him. He transferred to Wahoo his freshman year after growing up in North Lake, Ill., a Chicago suburb.

"I base my entire basketball background on playing junior high basketball in Illinois," Divis said.

"When I was in seventh grade, we played 76 games and when I was in eighth grade, we played 56 games," he noted. "Sometimes in YMCA and CYO basketball, we'd play two or three games in one day. I'd bring an orange to school and eat between games."

Divis has started for Wahoo since his sophomore season. "We're number four now," he said, "But I'm not going to be satisfied until we're number one. We'll get there, too."

Ashland almost blew its chance to advance to Thursday's Capitol tourney semifinals at Gretna. The Bluejays saw what looked like a comfortable 13-point second-half lead evaporate in a cool shooting fourth quarter.

Centennial tied the game at 75-all when sophomore Barry Leif hit two free throws with :40 remaining.

The Broncos seemed in command when Ashland turned the ball over with :28 remaining. But Centennial guard Brett Borchers was whistled for travelling with :13 left as the Broncos tried to work the ball for a last-second shot.

"Centennial was amazing tonight, considering they were playing their fourth game in five nights," Ashland coach Byron Sutton observed. "I kept waiting for their legs to give out on them on their press, but it never happened. They just kept working and working."

Centennial coach Jim Swanson, whose team dropped its tenth decision in 15 games, said: "We were trying to go for the last-second shot and get someone set up in the middle. But it didn't quite work out that way. This is a young ball club and this same thing has been happening all season."

Included among Centennial's losses are one-point setbacks to Wahoo and Columbus Lakeview and two-point losses to Crete, Superior and Ashland.

Balanced scoring was the key for Ashland as all five starters finished in double figures. Charlie Marti led with 19 points, followed by Jeff Barnes with 14 Clay Anderson with 11 and Kent Jardine and Mike Glassburner with 10 apiece.

Leif led Centennial with 22 points. Doug Barth contributed 19 and Borchers finished with 18.

Without Big Gun, Shickley Fires Up

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Too often, it seems, Class D basketball players think they should be astronomical scorers to prove their individual worth.

Shickley coach Dick Ideus doesn't think in those terms.

"I don't think it's necessary," he says. "I'd much rather have five players averaging in double figures than one or two averaging between 25 and 30."

Ideus proved his point last winter when Shickley marched to the state Class D championship. Bill Anderson was the team leader. He averaged only 14 points.

But his overall play was impressive enough to earn him a spot on the South roster for the Nebraska Coaches Association All-Star Basketball Game.

Anderson's success drove home a valuable point — a Class D player doesn't need the big point totals for recognition.

"We emphasize a total game," says Ideus, whose team has won 11 straight games to advance to the No. 3 spot in the Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star Class D ratings.

Lichti Leader

"We're getting the same type of balance this year," he adds. "I'd put Mike Lichti in about the same class as Anderson. He's only averaging 13.5 points a game, but he gives 110%. I've never seen him loaf yet in a basketball game."

Lichti is the only returning starter from last year's state championship crew. The 5-9 senior guard was an all-state halfback in football.

Steve Johnson, another senior guard, is leading Shickley scorers with a 15.1 average. The front line consists of forwards Rex Kennel (10.0 average) and Mark Krause (8.8) and center Jeff Row (8.3).

"Right after last year's state championship, these guys mentioned they wanted to be as good this year," notes Ideus. "They had scrimmaged against last year's team and took their lumps. It helped them mature. They realized what it took to grow up."

Still, Ideus never envisioned such wholesale early-season success.

"I felt at the beginning of the year that it would be halfway through the season before we put everything together," he admits.

Three Tourneys

"But we won the Wesleyan holiday tournament without two of our starters, won the Deshler tournament without much trouble and won the Pioneer tournament in pretty good fashion," Ideus says. "You put a string like that together and you're bound to gain confidence."

Shickley was 2-2 early, having lost to Class C Sutton by two points and to Class D leader Nelson by 21.

"We've come a long way since then," Ideus insists. "We're hoping to get another chance at Nelson in the regional. We know we can play a lot better than we did."

If Shickley continues to strive for balance, Ideus is confident the Longhorns can be as powerful as any Class D team.

"We're not looking for 30-point individual games," he says. "We're looking for consistency . . . from everyone."

Tampa Bay Signs Alward

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Officials of the Tampa Bay Bucaneers, the newest franchise in the National Football League, have signed a former University of Nebraska standout, guard Tom Alward.

Alward, who went to the New York Jets in the sixth round of last year's draft but ended up in the defunct World Football League, signed as free agent.

He was one of the first three players to sign a Buccaneer contract. The first was former Denver Bronco standout Pete Duranko, and the other was another former WFL player, wide receiver Wayne Wheeler.

NWU Loses In Overtime

Fouls and a sagging offense plagued Nebraska Wesleyan Tuesday night as the Plainsmen dropped a 97-91 overtime decision to Dana at Taylor Gym in a Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference game.

Wesleyan owned a 44-38 halftime lead, and at times during the second half, led by as much as eight points.

But Dana, led by the double-figure scoring of five players, rallied and at 3:45, the Vikings took their first lead of the second half, 78-77, on a basket by Steve Thomsen.

Dana and NWU traded baskets for the next three minutes, but with :30 remaining, Bob Otto put in a layup to give the Plainsmen a four-point lead at 83-79. Dana cut that lead to two and with :11 left, forced a turnover and called time out.

With :03 remaining, Jerry Haas hit a layup to send the game into overtime. A half-court shot at the buzzer by Wesleyan sailed clear of the backboard.

The last three minutes of the regulation time were critical for Wesleyan as starting center Blake Butler and Angelo Lilly fouled out. Butler was NWU's leading rebounder, with eight, and Lilly high scorer for the Plainsmen with 20.

Dana hit three straight baskets at the start of the overtime period and Wesleyan couldn't make up the slack.

The Vikings, now 3-13 overall and 2-1 in NIAC play, hosts Midland Saturday.

Wesleyan, now 3-11 overall and 2-2 in the conference, travels to Doane this Saturday.

Unbeaten Spartans Whip Pius X

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

Pius X girls basketball coach Mike Schmidt has seen East High play better than it did Tuesday night in a 47-23 triumph over his Thunderbolts.

He's just glad the Spartans didn't do it against his squad.

"They didn't do anything against us we weren't expecting," Schmidt said following his club's third loss against seven wins this season. "They just outhustled and outplayed us."

Habit For East

It's beginning to be a habit with East as coach Leona Penner's Spartans ran their record to a perfect 8-0 with the lopsided win.

And it didn't take long for the 650 spectators in attendance to see which team would take command.

Just seven seconds into the game, long enough for Barb Hart to get the opening tip relayed to sophomore Anna James under the basket, was all it took for East to get on the board.

The closest Pius was able to get for the rest of the game was a one point difference at 6-5 before East reeled off 11 straight points on four layups and three free throws to take a 17-5 advantage.

Anne Heermann
Leading Scorer

The Spartans maintained that margin to the half leading 25-13.

Within Nine

A second half comeback effort brought the Thunderbolts back within nine points at 27-18 with 2:55 left in the third quarter, but Pius was unable to cash in on another point for six minutes straight.

"When they cut that lead to nine points," Penner noted, "we got into a little trouble. I don't really know what happened except that maybe since we were leading 25-13 at the half, the girls forgot they had another half to play.

"It didn't take them long to remember after that," she added.

East scored 20 of the next 22 points, leading by a whopping 28 points, 47-19, when Penner cleared her bench with 5:18 remaining.

"We just hope to keep going after this," Penner said.

One Test

The one game this season the Spartans were tested in was the I-80 Holiday Tournament finals in which they beat Northeast by eight points, 36-28. They face the Rockets again Thursday in the East gym at 8 p.m.

"Some games you have trouble getting emotionally up for," Penner said. "Not Northeast, not this time. They played us entirely too close the last time. We have the incentive to play them this time."

"We didn't have Barb Hart in the first half the last time we played because of a sprained ankle and she played with sickness tonight," Penner said. "We hope she's better by Thursday. She played with a lot of determination tonight."

Hart scored just six points, but was instrumental on the boards while Anne Heermann led the Spartan scoring with 14 points.

Husker Gymnasts Lose Close One To Louisiana St.

Baton Rouge — In a gymnastics meet that was decided by the final event, the Louisiana State Tigers nipped Nebraska's Cornhuskers Tuesday night, 210.55-209.15.

Both squads had been ranked in the nation's top four ratings before the meet along with Indiana and No. 1 Iowa State, which will meet the Huskers here Saturday.

"Tried Too Hard"

"I think they tried too hard and worried about their performances," said Nebraska coach Francis Allen, who said that the Huskers missed some crucial spots in the meet. "We were flat in our performances," the coach said.

Gene Mackie, however, captured all-around honors with a score of 50.6.

Gerard Second

Gerard finished second in the high bar event, the final action of the night. LSU had led through all previous events by a total of .35.

But the meet was not decided on the merits of any individual, Allen said. "We didn't have the team to perform to become national champions," the coach said.

On Saturday, however, Nebraska will get a chance to display the talents of the country's top team — if it upsets Iowa State.

"If we beat Iowa State Saturday," Allen said, "there'll be chaos out at the national meet in April."

7-Footers Once Rare Breed

Basketball fans today, unless they're a little past middle age, probably don't remember the glory days at Oklahoma State, then known as Oklahoma A&M, coached by Henry "Hank" Iba.

Iba's name is spoken in the same breath as Adolph Rupp, Phog Allen, Ed Diddle, Slats Gill, Tony Hinkle, and John Wooden — all who became living legends in basketball long before they retired.

When Nebraska steps on the court at Gallagher Hall in Stillwater, Okla., tonight, the Cornhuskers will be treading where some great players performed and great games have been played in years past.

Iba, now retired and father of Husker assistant Moe Iba, coached Oklahoma State for 36 years. He won 741 games, lost 313 and became the first coach to win back-to-back NCAA championships (1945-1946).

In subsequent years, Rupp, Phil Woolpert, Ed Jucker and Wooden won titles two years in a row at Kentucky, San Francisco, Cincinnati and UCLA, respectively. Wooden, of course, topped them all with seven in a row and 10 of the last 12 before retiring after last season.

Iba coached the nation's first really standout 7-footer, Bob Kurland, who came along in the mid-1940s to pace Iba's two championship teams.

Players Grow Tall Today

A book on the history of college basketball, "All The Moves," by Neil D. Isaacs (J. B Lippincott), points out that in 1937 Kansas' Phog Allen surveyed the entire collegiate basketball scene and found "at least thirty-three" players who were 6-5 or taller.

A check of just the 1975-76 Big Eight rosters shows there are 62 players in the league 6-5 or taller. In fact, there are 28 who are 6-7 or taller. Oklahoma State has the tallest one in 7-3 Lonnie Boeckman, a sophomore redshirt.

Unfortunately, for Cowboy coach Guy Strong, Boeckman isn't in the same class as Kurland. He has gotten into 12 games, scored just 17 points and is averaging 1.5 rebounds a game.

Boeckman, who is from Okeene, Okla., looks more like a pencil than a rugged major college center. Despite his work on weightlifting programs and a gain of some 30 pounds since coming to OSU, he still weighs just 210 pounds.

The Big Eight has one other 7-footer in Paul Mokeski, a 7-1 freshman at Kansas, whose weight is 230. He's starting for the Jayhawks and will be a factor for Coach Ted Owens' club in the years to come.

The breakdown in the number of other tall players in the conference shows one player at 6-11, three at 6-10, six at 6-9, eight at 6-8, 19 at 6-7, 13 at 6-6 and 11 at 6-5.

The best basketball players of the 1920s were 5-10, but by 1940 there were many well coordinated 6-3 and 6-4 players. Today, it's not uncommon to see an agile and speedy kid who is 6-9 or 6-10 — or even 7-feet.

By DAVE SITTLER

Stillwater, Okla. — There will be a couple of Moes in Gallagher Hall Wednesday night for the Nebraska-Oklahoma State game — Moe Iba and Mo Mentum.

Nebraska coach Joe Cipriano knows he will have Husker assistant, Iba, on his side — although, ironically, Iba's father, Hank, became a legend while coaching Oklahoma State from 1930-70.

Although Moe Iba will be in the Nebraska corner from the outset, Cipriano can only hope his rampaging Cornhuskers can capture the magic created by momentum.

While they are approaching it from different angles, both teams appear to have a bundle of momentum going for them in the Big Eight conference battle set for 7:30 p.m.

Riding Crest

Nebraska is riding the crest of a seven-game winning streak, while coach Guy Strong's Cowboys are coming off an impressive win over last year's conference champion, Kansas.

"That win over Kansas has given Oklahoma State a lot of momentum that we really didn't need to be bothered with on top of everything else," Cipriano said of the Cowboys' 69-60 victory over the Jayhawks last Saturday. "It's always been tough enough for us to win down there. I can't remember anything but close games when we've played Oklahoma State."

Ronnie Daniel
Cowboy Leader

Last year's game in Stillwater backs up Cipriano's fears. The Huskers nipped OSU, 59-58.

While Oklahoma State's victory over Kansas got them back in the conference race at 1-2 and 7-8 overall, Nebraska has a healthy portion of momentum working after a narrow 66-64 win over Colorado in Boulder Saturday night.

The victory was the seventh straight for the Huskers, who have a perfect 3-0 conference mark and 12-4 overall record.

"We won four in a row last year and didn't finish any better than fourth in the conference," Cipriano cautions. "We can't afford to live on our laurels."

December Win

Included in the seven-game streak — the longest Nebraska winning string in 27 years — is a 56-49 win over Oklahoma State in the Big Eight Preseason Tournament last December in Kansas City.

"We played one of our best games of the season against them in the tournament," Cipriano said, "and still needed a clutch basket at the end to win."

The best thing Oklahoma State has going for it, is versatility, according to Cipriano.

Leading the Cowboys' attack is junior guard Ronnie Daniel. The 5-11, 180-pounder a high school all-American during his prep days in Louisville, Ky., is averaging 16.8 points a game.

Despite a shoulder injury, Daniel had a game high 19 points in the win over Kansas.

Third Year

Strong, in his third year at Oklahoma State, will open with 6-4 junior Fred Stevenson at the other guard post, Lafayette Threatt (6-8) and Olus Holder (6-6) at forwards and Dave Kragel (6-8) at center.

If Nebraska is able to top the Cowboys, the win would match the 1948-49 Nebraska team's eight-game streak. You have to go back 56 years, to the 1918 season to find a better string. The Huskers won 12 in a row that season.

Sheriff Requested To Explain Stand

By United Press International

The Unicameral's Judiciary Committee Tuesday challenged the Hall County Sheriff to appear personally next week to explain his opposition to a mandatory criminal restitution bill.

Sheriff Charles Headley, who said earlier he intended to "tear down the doors of the Capitol" in order to testify against the bill, LB748, said Tuesday he had found an easier way to register his objections — "Sitting behind my desk and using the news media." He also said a personal appearance would only heap ridicule upon him.

The Judiciary Committee, on a motion offered initially by Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, decided if Headley, as a law enforcement officer, didn't like the bill it was his duty to present his case in person. A letter to that effect was sent Wednesday.

Furloughs Provided

Under the bill, a program of mandatory restitution, now optional, would be established and would provide for work furloughs from jail terms so inmates could earn money to pay damages.

Sen. George Syas of Omaha said the sheriff was in an odd position.

"On the one hand he's advocating violence," Syas said. Yet, "why doesn't he have the courage to come here and testify?"

DeCamp reported Headley also intended, instead of testifying, to appear before the Hall County Board and "tear the bill into tiny pieces" as a means of protest.

The interchange between the committee and Headley was prompted in part by a letter from DeCamp to the sheriff. DeCamp is a strong backer of the bill.

"If this is an example of Sen. DeCamp's legislation, I feel sure Congress could do well without him," Headley said, referring to DeCamp's plans to run for Congress in the Third District.

'Wants Full Jail'

DeCamp said he felt Headley's opposition resulted from a wish to keep his jail full of 24-hour prisoners so he could get various subsidies available to underwrite jail costs rather than an interest in victims of crime.

"I'd rather have that person out during the day working and paying taxes than in a jail so that some sheriff can collect these subsidies," the lawmaker said.

The sheriff said he saw a number of problems with the bill, including a provision barring from furloughs those addicted to alcohol or drugs. Yet, he said, alcohol crimes may account for up to 75% of all crimes.

He also objected to other requirements.

Senators Undecided On Judges' Pay Bill

By The Associated Press

The Legislature's Judiciary Committee Tuesday killed seven bills left over from last year's regular session and wrestled unsuccessfully with the question of whether to raise salaries of judges by $5,000.

Included among the bills killed were LB373, which would have established a separate department to coordinate juvenile and youth services, and LB479, a pretrial diversion plan.

Pre-trial diversion for the entire state, which would allow selected offenders to undergo a supervised program rather than face a court sentence, awaits results of Lancaster County's pilot project in such a program.

The matter of judges' salaries prompted verbal exchanges between Lincoln Sens. Roland Luedtke, the committee chairman, and Wally Barnett.

There wasn't enough support in the panel to kill LB697 outright as Barnett wanted, but neither could the votes be found to amend and advance it to the Unicameral floor.

Omaha Sen. George Syas suggested amending the bill to make the increase 6% rather than $5,000. Neligh Sen. John DeCamp suggested including county judges, who aren't in the measure as it was introduced.

As written, the bill includes judges of the state supreme court, the juvenile and district courts, and the workmen's compensation and municipal courts.

Currently, such judges are in the $25,000 to $35,000 a year salary range.

"I think the judges' salaries are above the poverty level," Barnett said. "We have to stop somewhere and this is a good place to start."

Luedtke, an attorney, said lawyers can make more in private practice, which may affect the quality of applicants for the bench if salaries remain static.

Inheritance Tax Break Considered

The Legislature voted 31-0 first-round approval Tuesday to a bill that would give widows an inheritance tax break.

The bill, LB585, allows a spouse to be considered an equal partner in jointly held property. That exempts the surviving spouse from inheritance tax on the property.

Under current law, women have often been forced to pay inheritance tax on jointly held property on the theory that the wealth had been accumulated by the husband.

The bill matches the state's inheritance tax law with the Uniform Probate Code which became effective Jan. 1.

The legislature is scheduled to hold a public hearing Feb. 9 on Scotia Sen. Dennis Rasmussen's bill to increase the inheritance tax exemption from $10,000 to $300,000. It is LB668.

LOMR Affected Little If Bill Is OKd—Smith

A proposed bill intended by Utica Sen. Douglas Bereuter to transfer control of mental retardation programs in a 16-county area to the Region V governing board apparently would have little effect on the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation, according to director Bob Smith.

Although Bereuter says LB879 would make the LOMR board strictly advisory, Smith points out that it already is. LOMR operations now are approved by the Lancaster County Board.

It is too early to determine if assigning governing power to the Region V board would hurt LOMR programs, Smith said.

Review Sought

Federal court review is being sought on a Federal Energy Administration order for Wentz Plumbing and Heating to return $12,000 to 15 fuel oil customers.

The Federal Energy Administration said Wentz overcharged the customers from Nov. 1, 1973 to May 31, 1974.

Ed Hearing Is Saturday

The Legislature's study committee for Postsecondary Education will have a public hearing Saturday on the Milford campus of Southeast Technical Community College.

Earlier reports erroneously said the meeting would be Sunday.

Chambers' Compromise Advances Bill

The Legislature voted second-round approval Tuesday to a compromise proposal offered by Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers to regulate the use of special sheriff's deputies.

His compromise would remove the section of LB432 that would give county boards authority to set up regulations for special deputies. The amendment gives the power to the Nebraska Law Enforcement Training Center in Grand Island.

Omaha Sen. Glenn Goodrich was unsuccessful in an attempt to amend the bill to allow special deputies to work at all times.

The bill now says they can serve only during times of emergency declared by the sheriff.

Omaha Firm Gets Contract

Portland, Ore. (AP) — Portland General Electric Co., has awarded a Nebraska firm a contract totaling about $18 million for preliminary site earthwork and reservoir construction for the utility's coal-fired generating plant at Boardman in northeastern Oregon.

The contract was awarded to Peter Kiewit Sons' Co., of Omaha, with the company's Walla Walla, Wash., office to supervise the work.

August A. Busch Jr., the beer baron whose brewery kept major league baseball in St. Louis, said he has abandoned a plan to personally purchase the St. Louis Cardinals because of what he called the "uncertainties" in sports.

The International Lawn Tennis Federation recommended to the Davis Cup Committee that it bar Mexico for three years if the Mexicans refuse to play against South Africa.

Track star Filbert Bayi has been ordered not to leave for a United States tour until Tanzanian sports officials determine whether any of his intended competitors will be representing countries which have sports links with apartheid South Africa.

The Olympic Village in Innsbruck opened its doors to athletes and officials, and word spread quickly that visiting rules for men and women competitors aren't nearly so prudish as the Austrian hosts initially claimed. Women may visit men's dorms, but men can't visit the women's quarters. There are also lounges in each of the buildings, a film theatre and shops.

Ingemar Stenmark, a 19-year-old Swede, turned a brilliant second run and won the final World Cup giant slalom race before the Winter Olympics and solidify his standing as a slalom favorite for the Innsbruck Games.

Judy Soutar, Grandview, Mo., was named 1975 Woman Bowler of the Year by the Bowling Writers Association, the second time in the past three years she has won the honor.

Roy Buckley of Columbus, Ohio, despite finishing only 28th in last week's Denver Open, has regained the lead in the Professional Bowlers Association official money standings.

Earl Anthony of Tacoma, Wash., is the first bowler to be a unanimous choice two years in a row on Bowling magazine's all-America team.

Schnoor Overcomes Injury To Gain Prep Award

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Chuck Schnoor knows that helpless feeling.

Early last fall, the Minden quarterback suffered a broken ankle in a football game against eventual state Class B champion Lincoln Pius X.

He spent the rest of his senior season, watching the Whippets from the sidelines.

"It's a tough thing to do for a competitor like Chuck," says Minden basketball coach Don Bartek "He didn't get his cast off until the week we started basketball practice."

It didn't take the 5-10 guard long to sharpen his game to where it was last winter when he started for Minden's Class B state semifinalist club.

Riddles Dusters

Last Friday night, Schnoor's long-range gunnery riddled Holdrege's zone defense for 31 points in Minden's 71-70 upset win over the Dusters.

That effort earned Schnoor the Sunday Journal and Star Prep Player of the Week award.

"He's a sensational scorer, even though he's had some mighty fine defenses thrown against him," Bartek says. "He's averaging 23.8 points in our first 12 games.

"His lowest total was 17 against Pius X," adds Bartek. "Some people have dropped two men off on him. He's faced a box-and-one defense a couple times. But somehow he manages to get the job done. He's also an 82% free throw shooter. That helps, too."

Chuck Schnoor

Schnoor's shooting has powered Minden to a 7-5 record.

Others who'll receive Player of the Week cards include:

Clement, a 5-10 senior, contributed 22 points In the six games Jeff Quinn has been absent from the Ord lineup because of a broken hand, Clement has scored 118 points and Cicmanec 74

Brian Augustyn, Bellevue — This 6-4½ senior turned in what Benson coach Don Knauss described as "the best individual performance I've seen in the Metro." Augustyn scored a school record 37 points in Bellevue's 73-68 loss to once-beaten Benson. He moved from forward to guard in the fourth quarter and scored 20 of Bellevue's 31 points in the period. During the quarter, he hit 8 of 12 long-range field goal attempts and added four free throws. He finished 15 of 18 from the free throw line in Bellevue's near upset The Chieftans trailed by only a point with 18 seconds remaining.

End To Food Sales Tax Backed

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

More often at odds, Gov. J. James Exon and Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha Tuesday joined together to urge the Legislature to repeal the sales tax on food purchases.

Exon's position was relayed to the Unicameral's Revenue Committee by State Tax Commissioner Bill Peters.

It contained one proviso — that Chambers' LB728 be amended to limit the tax exemption to over-the-counter grocery purchases, retaining the tax on food sold at restaurants.

Eearlier in the day, Exon had told senators that a tax exemption for groceries could be an option they might consider in lieu of what he said could be a 1977 personal income tax reduction from 15% to 13%, if they accept his budget recommendations.

$71. Million Cost

With the exclusion of restaurant sales, the food tax exemption could cost the state at least $7.1 million in annual revenue.

Peters said the total 2½% state sales tax collection on food purchases is about $35.4 million. Most of that, an estimated $31.9 million, is collected from grocery purchases.

The state could return about $24.8 million to the taxpayers in the form of a $16 per person food tax credit if everyone applied for it.

LB728 would wipe out the tax credit.

Chambers said "an absolute essential" like food should not be taxed, that such a levy "falls most heavily on those least able to bear it."

Average food expenditures for a family of four indicate that the state would need to pay a $17.40 tax credit to return all sales tax paid on food purchases for a year, he said.

$24.36 A Person Here

In Omaha, Lincoln and Bellevue, where an extra 1% city sales tax is collected, the tax credit would need to be $24.36 per person in order to cancel out the food tax payments, Chambers said.

In some cases, he said, the tax on groceries is literally "taking food out of the mouths of hungry children."

The City of Lincoln opposed the bill.

It would mean an annual revenue loss of $1 million or more from city sales tax collections on food, City Council Chairman Max Denney said.

A two-mill hike in the city's property tax, which would boost the total levy to its designated limit, would be required to replace the lost revenue, he said.

The City of Omaha supported the bill, but only if the Legislature finds a way to replace the loss in city revenue, estimated at more than $3 million a year.

Merchants Opposed

Retail merchants opposed the proposal.

Both Omaha and Lincoln supported another bill, LB725, which would reduce from 3% to 1% the collection fee provided to the Department of Revenue for processing city sales tax revenue.

Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica said the 1% fee would be more in line with actual administrative costs.

The reduced fee would provide Lincoln with an additional $130,000 in annual sales tax revenue, and Omaha with an additional $278,000.

The third city with a sales tax, Bellevue, would receive an additional $16,000.

Peters opposed the bill, arguing that it would reduce state revenues by nearly $500,000 a year. More of the costs for operating the Department of Revenue would then be shifted to the state tax supported general fund, he said.

The committee adjourned without taking action on either bill.

Special Ed Ages May Be Upped

By The Associated Press

After a public hearing Tuesday, the Legislature's Education Committee gave tenative approval to a bill expanding special education programs for handicapped children to include ages 18-21.

But the committee decided to wait until the remainder of the Legislature was ready to put up the money before authorizing programs for pre-schoolers.

Bellevue Sen. Frank Lewis, chairman of the committee, said the cost of going into the preschool area would be "sizable."

Implementing special education programs has been a problem for the committee for nearly 18 months, but Lewis said with the bill given tentative approval Tuesday, "We will be finally out of the woods."

LB761 makes various technical corrections in the special education law.

Lewis said the committee expanded the upper age limit because the Nebraska Constitution guarantees free public education through age 21.

Regarding the pre-school program, Lewis said, "It's my position that we want to clean up what we've got."

"In my opinion, we are going to have a hard time getting funding for the program we got now," Lewis said.

Aurora Sen. Maurice Kremer said it would not be a good year to go into programs for handicapped pre-schoolers because the economy, in its current state, could not produce increased tax revenues.

Ralston Sen. Gerald Koch suggested an amendment to the bill which would allow a court test of the constitutionality of public schools contracting with private schools for services for handicapped children. His amendment was also given tentative approval.

Court's Budget Request 'Reflects Its Caseload'

By The Associated Press

The Supreme Court budget proposal to run Nebraska's Court system reflects continuing increases in court caseloads, the Legislature's Appropriations Committee was told Tuesday.

"It recognizes that we cannot control the amount of business that we receive," James Dunlevy, court administrator, testified.

Dunlevey said the rates of crime and the number of arrests and civil lawsuits are spiraling.

The Supreme Court budget request is for more than $5 million while the committee budget document calls for some $220,000 less to run the courts.

An example of the increasing caseload was provided by Supreme Court Chief Justice Paul White.

"It's doubled in the last five or six years," he said, referring to the increasing number of appeals to the state's highest judicial body.

"It's going to continue," he said. "We're reaching the breaking point now."

Dunlevey said changing laws have an affect on the boost in workload, citing the reduction in the speed limit from 75 miles per hour to 55 mph.

He said that created 40,000 new cases in Nebraska since the change.

The committee also heard testimony on several other state agencies, including:

Agricultural Products Industrial Utilization Committee, which sought $131,433 and got preliminary committee approval for $123,983; the justice department, which sought $671,734 but has a preliminary committee figure of $560,208; and the boards of pardons and parole, which sought $164,130 but have preliminary approval for $136,326.

Gauger Picks Donnelson

Lincoln businessman Gar Donnelson will head the campaign committee for the reelection of County Commissioner Jan Gauger.

Other committee officers are Robert Crosby, treasurer and Bill Norris, assistant treasurer, Mrs. Gauger announced.

Also on the committee are Fred Gottschalk, Roger Hirsch, Robert Sittig, John Vihstadt, Kappie Weber and Earl Witthoff.

The names of all individual contributors to the campaign committee will be reported regardless of contribution amounts, Mrs. Gauger said.

Contributions will not be accepted from corporations, she said.

Commissioner Gauger is seeking re-election to a second four-year term as First District commissioner.

Malpractice Insurer Says Premium Cuts Not Certain

By The Associated Press

The Legislature's Public Health and Welfare Committee heard more than five hours of testimony Tuesday on a proposed law aimed at solving medical malpractice insurance problems.

Bellwood Sen. Loran Schmit told the committee that his LB703 should lower the cost of malpractice insurance premiums, "and if it doesn't, then the director of the Department of Insurance should come up with the information to show why."

The committee took no action on the bill that has the support of the Nebraska Medical Association.

The bill's sweeping provisions were opposed by attorneys representing themselves, the state Bar Association and the Nebraska Association of Trial Lawyers.

The committee also heard from Jon Roeder, of the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co., which insure 830 doctors and 50 hospitals in Nebraska.

Under close questioning by Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh, several doctors and Roeder acknowledged there would be no guarantee that passage of the bill would lower malpractice insurance costs, or keep them from increasing.

After the hearing, Cavanaugh told Schmit he thought the insurance company was "covering itself, so that if rates go up again they can say they never promised any reduction."

Cavanaugh questioned the value of the bill if it did not guarantee lower premiums, since "it would obviously limit a person's right to sue."

Schmit's bill would place a $100,000 limit on the amount of malpractice damages a doctor or other health provider could be ordered to pay. However, it would set up a fund to cover damages exceeding that amount up to a maximum of $500,000. It would additionally limit attorney fees in cases where lawyers agree to take a portion of a settlement for handling the case.

The thrust of several doctors' testimony was summarized by the medical association's president, Dr. Warren Boseley of Grand Island.

He said passage of Schmit's bill would create "a more favorable climate" for malpractice insurance in the state. His testimony was supported by Roeder and Flavel Wright, attorney for the medical association.

The bill would set up a panel to review malpractice cases before they go to court. If that three-doctor panel decided the case was without merit and you filed suit anyway, you could be held liable for the doctor's legal expenses as well as your own, in addition to revenue the doctor lost while directly involved in the case.

The malpractice measure is the first of several bills that will parade before the committee during this session.

Attorney R.M. Van Steenberg, representing both legal associations, said he had never seen a bill which attorneys "so completely opposed."

Van Steenberg said "there is a problem" in health care providers' getting malpractice insurance, "but we don't think there is a crisis."

Van Steenberg said he felt a compromise had to be struck between the right of patients to sue, and the need of doctors. "We don't believe the two bills. . .demonstrate any compromise."

There were some 200 spectators in the gallery during the hearing in the main legislative chamber.

The committee also heard and held LB735, another malpractice measure formed by the committee. It drew one witness.

Insurance Director Benjamin Nelson testified on insurance situations but did not oppose or support Schmit's bill.

The Nebraska Hospital Association offered amendments to the measure clarifying its status.

In urging approval of the bill, Schmit told committee members "don't let the roof fall in" by waiting until doctors and others cannot get malpractice insurance.

Under questioning from Cavanaugh, Schmit said he would suspect "chicanery in the woodpile" if LB703 were enacted and the malpractice situation did not improve.

The lengthy bill deals with virtually every phase of malpractice law.

Lincoln Shooting For Hockey Club

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Lincoln's drive for a hockey team apparently rests with the owner of the Southwest Hockey League.

Pershing Auditorium manager Ike Hoig sent a letter on Jan. 20 to Ralph Englestadt in Las Vegas, the SWHL owner, explaining the city's position on hosting a SWHL team. So far, he hasn't received a response.

"I sent him a letter and a copy of an earlier story in the newspaper, but he hasn't responded yet," Hoig said Tuesday. "I've been keeping a file on the hockey situation and hopefully the guy will come to town and look at our facility."

Hoig said he has received several letters and calls from Lincolnites wanting a hockey team here. He added he even received an application from an Omaha hockey enthusiast applying for a coaching position should Lincoln receive a franchise.

Cooperation Promised

Hoig said David DeWald, public buildings manager for the auditorium in Amarillo, Tex., called and promised his cooperation in helping Lincoln obtain a team.

The SWHL has teams in Amarillo and El Paso in Texas, Billings and Butte in Montana and Albuquerque in New Mexico. Cities under consideration for teams next season include Lincoln, Bismark, N.D., Wichita, Kan. and San Antonio, Tex.

Each team would play 36 home games and 36 road games between October and April.

Each player would be registered in an accredited college or technical school and would be required to maintain passing grades in order to continue in the hockey program.

"When I wrote Mr. Englestadt, I pointed out that there are three schools in Lincoln, five or six small colleges within 20 miles of Lincoln and also two or three technical schools within 30 miles of Lincoln," he said. "With Omaha just 50 miles away, I'm sure there would be interest in Lincoln having a team."

Hoig said that if Lincoln were to receive an SWHL franchise and if it proved successful, Pershing would be more than willing to improve its ice facilities.

Not Expensive

"It wouldn't be that expensive to make changes if the thing started going good," he said. "I guess we could get a Zamboni (ice-making machine) used for $10,000 and we could probably put plexiglass around the rink for about $5,000.

"We'd like to make the ice better, but we've got to make sure the thing will be successful," he said.

Hoig noted that ice skating has been gaining followers in Lincoln this season and pointed out the relationship between ice skating and hockey.

Pershing has hosted ice skating for 37 days this season and Hoig expects more than 50 days of ice this season. That includes a two-week span in January when ice skating had to be canceled since painters were working in the building.

Pershing hosted just 30 days of ice skating last year.

Compatible Sports

"There's a definite relationship between ice skating and hockey," he said. "They're both compatible. Wherever you have a good skating program, you also have a successful hockey team.

"The hockey team makes it more profitable to have ice skating. The successful places have both ice and hockey," he said.

The major drawback with Pershing ice is that it is slightly smaller than a regulation rink. Pershing is 165 X 80 feet while regulations permit 200 X 85 feet.

"It's a shame when the building was built, it wasn't a little bigger," he said. "But what it lacks in size, I'm sure the town would make up for with enthusiasm."

Horses Prepare For New Season

Grand Island — With the opening of Fonner Park's 40-day horse racing season a month away, there are already 300 horses on the grounds in training.

The season started for some horsemen as early as last September with the breaking of 2-year-olds. Older horses arrive here for conditioning in December and January.

Some trainers test their horses in short trial runs with other horses.

Fifty area trainers are already at Fonner. They include David Cummings, Larry Donlin, Mike Kemling, Orv Kemling, Ken Kirby, Roy Landis, John Martinez, Jim Moss, Marvin Johnson, C.W. Pierce, Larry Staroscik, Nial Tidball and Boyne Ferguson.

Several stables from Louisiana Downs are expected next week after the Bossier City, La., track closes.

Fonner's dates this spring are from Feb. 28-April 24 with Thursday-Saturday racing the first three weekends.

Turkey Permits Available

Nebraskans may begin applying for 1976 spring turkey shotgun permits on February 1, provided they did not have a shotgun permit last spring, according to the Game and Parks Commission.

The Commissioners set the spring turkey season at their last meeting on January 16, when they also decided opening dates for most of the rest of Nebraska's hunting seasons, and set application dates for turkey, deer, and antelope permits.

Applications for the spring shotgun turkey season will be accepted through February 17 from Nebraska residents who did not have a permit last spring. A February 25 drawing will be held in oversubscribed units, and remaining permits will go to Nebraskans applying between March 1 and 15. Archers may apply anytime after February 1.

The spring turkey season will offer 1,975 shotgun permits in 5 units, the same number as last year except for an increase of 100 in the Niobrara Unit. Permit numbers include 1,200 in the Roundtop Unit, 500 in the Niobrara Unit, 75 in the Southwest, 125 in the Verdigre Unit, and 75 in the Wildcat area. Archery permit numbers are unlimited.

Reagan Gets Dig At Ford

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Ronald Reagan began a campaign swing through the state Tuesday with a quip at his opponent in the Republican presidential race.

Reagan began a speech to some 150 supporters at a hotel by kicking over the microphone. The former California governor quickly looked over the audience and said, "A few more things like that and they'll call me Jerry."

Reagan is opposing President Ford for the Republican nomination.

Shove Wasn't Enough To Win Assault Case

The mere act of shoving does not show intent to harm, said Judge Neal Dusenberry as he dismissed an assault charge against Bernard Patton, director of the Lincoln Humane Society, Tuesday morning.

The assault charge was brought against Patton by a former employe, Chris Hollers, after a Dec. 18, 1975 incident at the animal shelter, 2320 Park Blvd.

The evidence brought out during prosecution testimony — that Miss Hollers was fearful and that she was shoved by Patton — are not sufficient to support an assault charge, said Dusenberry as he sustained a defense motion to dismiss the charge.

Under state law, there must be evidence that Patton had intended to hurt Miss Hollers, Judge Dusenberry said.

During prosecution testimony, Miss Hollers said she went to the Humane Shelter the morning of Dec. 18 at the request of Patton.

Took Tape Recorder

She brought along a rented tape recorder, on the advice of Dr. Robert White, president of the Humane Society Board of Directors. She also asked another employe, Steven Gans, to be present with her during the talk with Patton.

Both Miss Hollers and Gans testified that Patton refused to hold a discussion if Miss Hollers used the tape recorder and asked Gans to return to work.

Both testified that after some initial conversation about the tape recorder, Miss Hollers and Patton returned to the outer door where Patton reached out to grab the tape recorder with one hand and shoved Miss Hollers through the doorway with the other hand.

Bit Tongue

Miss Hollers said she struck her knee and cheek on the door and bit her tongue.

After Patton pushed Miss Hollers through the door, he closed the door, turned and said " 'I didn't touch her,' then started laughing," according to Gans.

Both Gans and Miss Hollers were fired following the incident.

In supporting the defense motion to dismiss the charge, Judge Dusenberry said Gans was at the shelter to work and had no business acting as "an arbitrator."

Sheriff Requested To Explain Stand

By United Press International

The Unicameral's Judiciary Committee Tuesday challenged the Hall County Sheriff to appear personally next week to explain his opposition to a mandatory criminal restitution bill.

Sheriff Charles Headley, who said earlier he intended to "tear down the doors of the Capitol" in order to testify against the bill, LB748, said Tuesday he had found an easier way to register his objections — "Sitting behind my desk and using the news media." He also said a personal appearance would only heap ridicule upon him.

The Judiciary Committee, on a motion offered initially by Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, decided if Headley, as a law enforcement officer, didn't like the bill it was his duty to present his case in person A letter to that effect was sent Wednesday.

Furloughs Provided

Under the bill, a program of mandatory restitution, now optional, would be established and would provide for work furloughs from jail terms so inmates could earn money to pay damages.

Sen. George Syas of Omaha said the sheriff was in an odd position.

"On the one hand he's advocating violence," Syas said. Yet, "why doesn't he have the courage to come here and testify?"

DeCamp reported Headley also intended, instead of testifying, to appear before the Hall County Board and "tear the bill into tiny pieces" as a means of protest.

The interchange between the committee and Headley was prompted in part by a letter from DeCamp to the sheriff. DeCamp is a strong backer of the bill.

"If this is an example of Sen. DeCamp's legislation, I feel sure Congress could do well without him," Headley said, referring to DeCamp's plans to run for Congress in the Third District.

'Wants Full Jail'

DeCamp said he felt Headley's opposition resulted from a wish to keep his jail full of 24-hour prisoners so he could get various subsidies available to underwrite jail costs rather than an interest in victims of crime.

"I'd rather have that person out during the day working and paying taxes than in a jail so that some sheriff can collect these subsidies," the lawmaker said.

The sheriff said he saw a number of problems with the bill, including a provision barring from furloughs those addicted to alcohol or drugs. Yet, he said, alcohol crimes may account for up to 75% of all crimes.

He also objected to other requirements.

Senators Undecided On Judges' Pay Bill

By The Associated Press

The Legislature's Judiciary Committee Tuesday killed seven bills left over from last year's regular session and wrestled unsuccessfully with the question of whether to raise salaries of judges by $5,000.

Included among the bills killed were LB373, which would have established a separate department to coordinate juvenile and youth services, and LB479, a pre-trial diversion plan.

Pre-trial diversion for the entire state, which would allow selected offenders to undergo a supervised program rather than face a court sentence, awaits results of Lancaster County's pilot project in such a program.

The matter of judges' salaries prompted verbal exchanges between Lincoln Sens. Roland Luedtke, the committee chairman, and Wally Barnett.

There wasn't enough support in the panel to kill LB697 outright as Barnett wanted, but neither could the votes be found to amend and advance it to the Unicameral floor.

Omaha Sen. George Syas suggested amending the bill to make the increase 6% rather than $5,000. Neligh Sen. John DeCamp suggested including county judges, who aren't in the measure as it was introduced.

As written, the bill includes judges of the state supreme court, the juvenile and district courts, and the workmen's compensation and municipal courts.

Currently, such judges are in the $25,000 to $35,000 a year salary range.

"I think the judges' salaries are above the poverty level," Barnett said. "We have to stop somewhere and this is a good place to start."

Luedtke, an attorney, said lawyers can make more in private practice, which may affect the quality of applicants for the bench if salaries remain static.

Inheritance Tax Break Considered

The Legislature voted 31-0 first-round approval Tuesday to a bill that would give widows an inheritance tax break.

The bill, LB585, allows a spouse to be considered an equal partner in jointly held property. That exempts the surviving spouse from inheritance tax on the property.

Under current law, women have often been forced to pay inheritance tax on jointly held property on the theory that the wealth had been accumulated by the husband.

The bill matches the state's inheritance tax law with the Uniform Probate Code which became effective Jan. 1.

The legislature is scheduled to hold a public hearing Feb. 9 on Scotia Sen. Dennis Rasmussen's bill to increase the inheritance tax exemption from $10,000 to $300,000. It is LB668.

LOMR Affected Little If Bill Is OKd—Smith

A proposed bill intended by Utica Sen Douglas Bereuter to transfer control of mental retardation programs in a 16-county area to the Region V governing board apparently would have little effect on the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation, according to director Bob Smith

Although Bereuter says LB879 would make the LOMR board strictly advisory, Smith points out that it already is LOMR operations now are approved by the Lancaster County Board

It is too early to determine if assigning governing power to the Region V board would hurt LOMR programs, Smith said

Review Sought

Federal court review is being sought on a Federal Energy Administration order for Wentz Plumbing and Heating to return $12,000 to 15 fuel oil customers

The Federal Energy Administration said Wentz overcharged the customers from Nov 1, 1973 to May 31, 1974.

Ed Hearing Is Saturday

The Legislature's study committee for Postsecondary Education will have a public hearing Saturday on the Milford campus of Southeast Technical Community College.

Earlier reports erroneously said the meeting would be Sunday.

Chambers' Compromise Advances Bill

The Legislature voted second-round approval Tuesday to a compromise proposal offered by Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers to regulate the use of special sheriff's deputies.

His compromise would remove the section of LB432 that would give county boards authority to set up regulations for special deputies. The amendment gives the power to the Nebraska Law Enforcement Training Center in Grand Island.

Omaha Sen Glenn Goodrich was unsuccessful in an attempt to amend the bill to allow special deputies to work at all times.

The bill now says they can serve only during times of emergency declared by the sheriff

The special sheriff's deputy controversy created heated debate in the Legislature Monday, when outstate lawmakers contended Chambers' proposal might solve an Omaha area problem, but would create additional difficulties for their counties

End To Food Sales Tax Backed

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

More often at odds, Gov. J. James Exon and Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha Tuesday joined together to urge the Legislature to repeal the sales tax on food purchases.

Exon's position was relayed to the Unicameral's Revenue Committee by State Tax Commissioner Bill Peters.

It contained one proviso — that Chambers' LB728 be amended to limit the tax exemption to over-the-counter grocery purchases, retaining the tax on food sold at restaurants.

Eearlier in the day, Exon had told senators that a tax exemption for groceries could be an option they might consider in lieu of what he said could be a 1977 personal income tax reduction from 15% to 13%, if they accept his budget recommendations.

$71. Million Cost

With the exclusion of restaurant sales, the food tax exemption could cost the state at least $7.1 million in annual revenue.

Peters said the total 2½% state sales tax collection on food purchases is about $35.4 million. Most of that, an estimated $31.9 million, is collected from grocery purchases.

The state could return about $24.8 million to the taxpayers in the form of a $16 per person food tax credit if everyone applied for it.

LB728 would wipe out the tax credit.

Chambers said "an absolute essential" like food should not be taxed, that such a levy "falls most heavily on those least able to bear it."

Average food expenditures for a family of four indicate that the state would need to pay a $17.40 tax credit to return all sales tax paid on food purchases for a year, he said.

$24.36 A Person Here

In Omaha, Lincoln and Bellevue, where an extra 1% city sales tax is collected, the tax credit would need to be $24.36 per person in order to cancel out the food tax payments, Chambers said.

In some cases, he said, the tax on groceries is literally "taking food out of the mouths of hungry children."

The City of Lincoln opposed the bill.

It would mean an annual revenue loss of $1 million or more from city sales tax collections on food, City Council Chairman Max Denney said.

A two-mill hike in the city's property tax, which would boost the total levy to its designated limit, would be required to replace the lost revenue, he said.

The City of Omaha supported the bill, but only if the Legislature finds a way to replace the loss in city revenue, estimated at more than $3 million a year.

Merchants Opposed

Retail merchants opposed the proposal.

Both Omaha and Lincoln supported another bill, LB725, which would reduce from 3% to 1% the collection fee provided to the Department of Revenue for processing city sales tax revenue.

Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica said the 1% fee would be more in line with actual administrative costs.

The reduced fee would provide Lincoln with an additional $130,000 in annual sales tax revenue, and Omaha with an additional $278,000.

The third city with a sales tax, Bellevue, would receive an additional $16,000.

Peters opposed the bill, arguing that it would reduce state revenues by nearly $500,000 a year. More of the costs for operating the Department of Revenue would then be shifted to the state tax supported general fund, he said.

The committee adjourned without taking action on either bill.

Court's Budget Request 'Reflects Its Caseload'

By The Associated Press

The Supreme Court budget proposal to run Nebraska's Court system reflects continuing increases in court caseloads, the Legislature's Appropriations Committee was told Tuesday.

"It recognizes that we cannot control the amount of business that we receive," James Dunlevy, court administrator, testified.

Dunlevey said the rates of crime and the number of arrests and civil lawsuits are spiraling.

The Supreme Court budget request is for more than $5 million while the committee budget document calls for some $220,000 less to run the courts.

An example of the increasing caseload was provided by Supreme Court Chief Justice Paul White.

"It's doubled in the last five or six years," he said, referring to the increasing number of appeals to the state's highest judicial body.

"It's going to continue," he said. "We're reaching the breaking point now."

Dunlevey said changing laws have an affect on the boost in workload, citing the reduction in the speed limit from 75 miles per hour to 55 mph.

He said that created 40,000 new cases in Nebraska since the change.

The committee also heard testimony on several other state agencies, including:

Agricultural Products Industrial Utilization Committee, which sought $131,433 and got preliminary committee approval for $123,983; the justice department, which sought $671,734 but has a preliminary committee figure of $560,208; and the boards of pardons and parole, which sought $164,130 but have preliminary approval for $136,326.

Gauger Picks Donnelson

Lincoln businessman Gar Donnelson will head the campaign committee for the re-election of County Commissioner Jan Gauger.

Other committee officers are Robert Crosby, treasurer and Bill Norris, assistant treasurer, Mrs. Gauger announced.

Also on the committee are Fred Gottschalk, Roger Hirsch, Robert Sittig, John Vihstadt, Kappie Weber and Earl Witthoff.

The names of all individual contributors to the campaign committee will be reported regardless of contribution amounts, Mrs. Gauger said.

Contributions will not be accepted from corporations, she said.

Commissioner Gauger is seeking re-election to a second four-year term as First District commissioner.

Malpractice Insurer Says Premium Cuts Not Certain

By The Associated Press

The Legislature's Public Health and Welfare Committee heard more than five hours of testimony Tuesday on a proposed law aimed at solving medical malpractice insurance problems.

Bellwood Sen. Loran Schmit told the committee that his LB703 should lower the cost of malpractice insurance premiums, "and if it doesn't, then the director of the Department of Insurance should come up with the information to show why."

The committee took no action on the bill that has the support of the Nebraska Medical Association.

The bill's sweeping provisions were opposed by attorneys representing themselves, the state Bar Association and the Nebraska Association of Trial Lawyers.

The committee also heard from Jon Roeder, of the St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Co., which insure 830 doctors and 50 hospitals in Nebraska.

Under close questioning by Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh, several doctors and Roeder acknowledged there would be no guarantee that passage of the bill would lower malpractice insurance costs, or keep them from increasing.

After the hearing, Cavanaugh told Schmit he thought the insurance company was "covering itself, so that if rates go up again they can say they never promised any reduction."

Cavanaugh questioned the value of the bill if it did not guarantee lower premiums, since "it would obviously limit a person's right to sue."

Schmit's bill would place a $100,000 limit on the amount of malpractice damages a doctor or other health provider could be ordered to pay. However, it would set up a fund to cover damages exceeding that amount up to a maximum of $500,000. It would additionally limit attorney fees in cases where lawyers agree to take a portion of a settlement for handling the case.

The thrust of several doctors' testimony was summarized by the medical association's president, Dr. Warren Boseley of Grand Island.

He said passage of Schmit's bill would create "a more favorable climate" for malpractice insurance in the state. His testimony was supported by Roeder and Flavel Wright, attorney for the medical association.

The bill would set up a panel to review malpractice cases before they go to court. If that three-doctor panel decided the case was without merit and you filed suit anyway, you could be held liable for the doctor's legal expenses as well as your own, in addition to revenue the doctor lost while directly involved in the case.

The malpractice measure is the first of several bills that will parade before the committee during this session.

Attorney R.M. Van Steenberg, representing both legal associations, said he had never seen a bill which attorneys "so completely opposed."

Van Steenberg said "there is a problem" in health care providers' getting malpractice insurance, "but we don't think there is a crisis."

Van Steenberg said he felt a compromise had to be struck between the right of patients to sue, and the need of doctors. "We don't believe the two bills...demonstrate any compromise."

There were some 200 spectators in the gallery during the hearing in the main legislative chamber.

The committee also heard and held LB735, another malpractice measure formed by the committee. It drew one witness.

Insurance Director Benjamin Nelson testified on insurance situations but did not oppose or support Schmit's bill.

The Nebraska Hospital Association offered amendments to the measure clarifying its status.

In urging approval of the bill, Schmit told committee members "don't let the roof fall in" by waiting until doctors and others cannot get malpractice insurance.

Under questioning from Cavanaugh, Schmit said he would suspect "chicanery in the woodpile" if LB703 were enacted and the malpractice situation did not improve.

The lengthy bill deals with virtually every phase of malpractice law.

Special Ed Ages May Be Upped

By The Associated Press

After a public hearing Tuesday, the Legislature's Education Committee gave tenative approval to a bill expanding special education programs for handicapped children to include ages 18-21.

But the committee decided to wait until the remainder of the Legislature was ready to put up the money before authorizing programs for pre-schoolers.

Bellevue Sen. Frank Lewis, chairman of the committee, said the cost of going into the pre-school area would be "sizable."

Implementing special education programs has been a problem for the committee for nearly 18 months, but Lewis said with the bill given tentative approval Tuesday, "We will be finally out of the woods."

LB761 makes various technical corrections in the special education law.

Lewis said the committee expanded the upper age limit because the Nebraska Constitution guarantees free public education through age 21.

Regarding the pre-school program, Lewis said, "It's my position that we want to clean up what we've got."

"In my opinion, we are going to have a hard time getting funding for the program we got now," Lewis said.

Aurora Sen. Maurice Kremer said it would not be a good year to go into programs for handicapped pre-schoolers because the economy, in its current state, could not produce increased tax revenues.

Ralston Sen. Gerald Koch suggested an amendment to the bill which would allow a court test of the constitutionality of public schools contracting with private schools for services for handicapped children. His amendment was also given tentative approval.
